"INSIST UPON OUR RIGHTS." Plan Adopted By British League

Universal Rights. "We insist upon our rights," is the motto adopted by a "League of Universal Rights" that has just come into existence in London. Its avowed object is to enforce the fulfilment of duty by public servants, and to see that the fullest possible value is given for money that is paid for services, however trivial they may be.

Among the incidental items in the program of this extraordinary combination of eccentrics are:

To insist on omnibuses stopping

Not to alight from any public vehicle until it is absolutely motionless.

When wet weather prevails, to demand a perfectly dry seat outside. It is pointed out that, if the conductor does his duty, waterproof sheets will be thrown over the seats.

Drivers of hackney carriages must at all times produce their book of fares, and, in the case of four-wheeled vehicles, "cabby" is expected to open and close the door when the journey begins and ends. Railway porters are to carry pas-sengers' luggage to and from the train without expectation of fee or
