

THE DAILY BRITISH WHIG.

YEAR 74.

KINGSTON, ONTARIO, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1907.

NO. 28.

Laying Aside The Cares Of State

CARE OF ROYALTY

KING EDWARD TAKES NEED-ED HOLIDAY.

England's Popular Sovereign and His Consort Pay Extended Visit to the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire, and Are Met by a Distinguished House Party.

London, Jan. 12.—The king and queen are again in Buckingham Palace, after an extended visit to "Chatsworth," the beautiful country residence of the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire. Queen Alexandra utilized the dry weather to go for a morning drive accompanied by Lady Godfray and the beautiful young country people of the household. The evening was devoted to the private theatricals which are always the special eloc of a royal visit to Chatsworth and which went off brilliantly; some of the costumes worn by the ladies being superb.

The king and queen and other members of the household dined last night at Burton-on-Trent, at the residence of Captain Burton. After luncheon with Lord and Lady Burton their majesties planted a tree in the grounds, and the party returned to Chatsworth by the same route.

The railway station, however, was aglow with light and warmth and festive adornments, and hundreds of electric lamps sparkled amid the colored draperies and garlands of flowers while the booking office was turned into a sumptuous reception room and decked with flowering plants brought from the "Chatsworth" conservatory.

The Duke of Devonshire awaited his august guests on the platform, and after hearty mutual greetings, they entered the motor-car, which had been substituted for a carriage and tilbury, and drove on account of the state of the roads. More cars brought half a mile from "Chatsworth House," to enjoy the striking torchlight procession of over 500 of the duke's employees, who formed a double line along the avenue, where also the local Boys' Brigade and fire brigade formed a sort of guard of honor near the house.

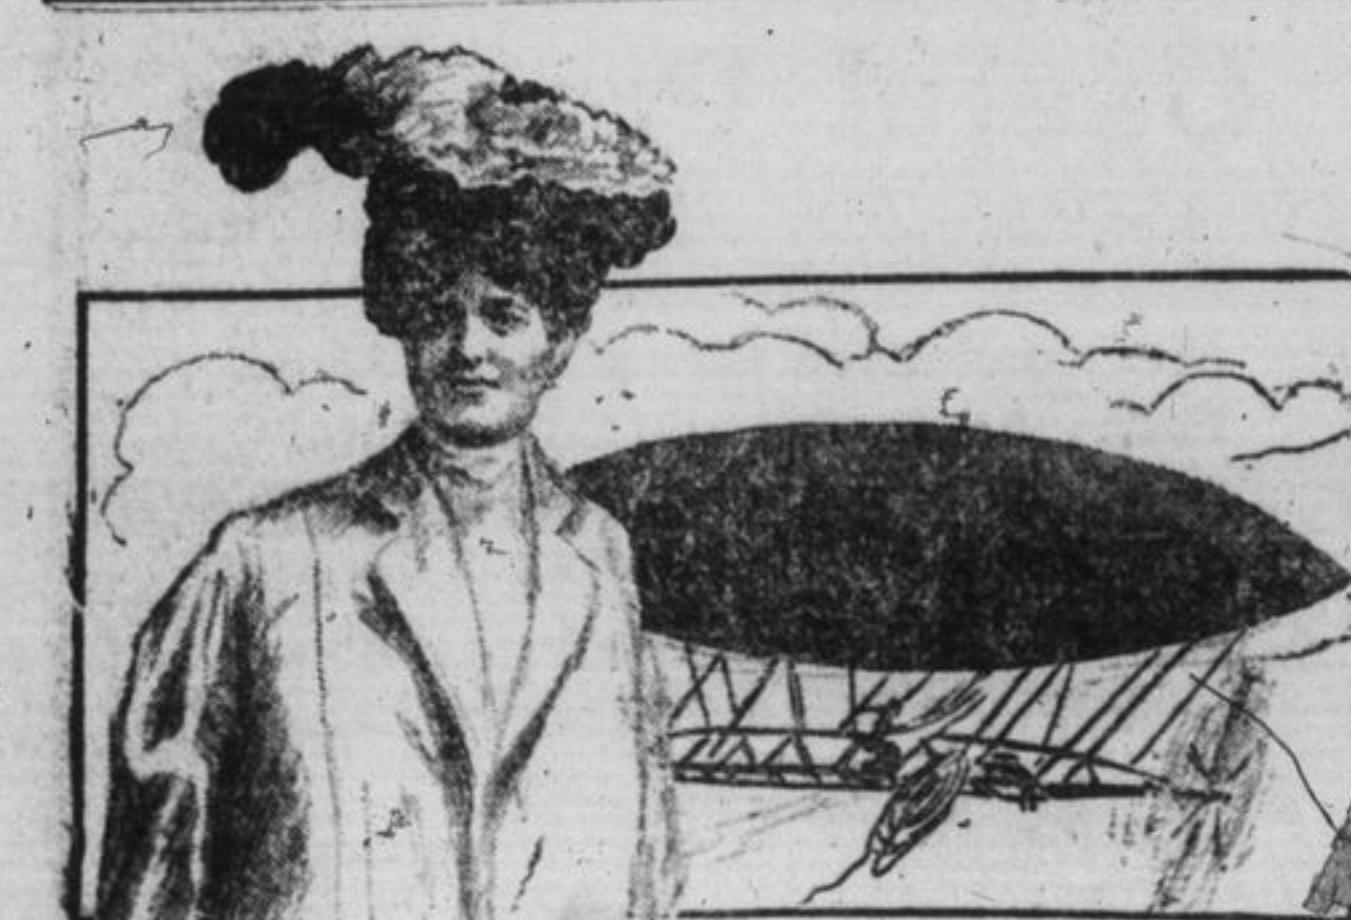

The Duke of Devonshire was favored with a regular blizzard, and the king wisely refrained from joining the guns. Thursday, though very cold, was bright and bracing, and his majesty motored over to join the sportsmen in the vicinity of Edensor, and bundled up in a tunic. Queen Alexandra also motored thither in the afternoon with her maid and watched the shooting for nearly an hour. Quite a crowd of spectators, gentle and simple, looked on at the sport. Soon after the queen had departed the king mounted

May Appoint A Negro.

Washington, Feb. 1.—It was admitted at the White House that the president is considering the name of Ralph Tyler, a negro, of Columbus, Ohio, for the position of surveyor of customs at Cincinnati.

If you once try Carter's Little River Pills for sick headache, biliousness or constipation, you will never be without them. They are purely vegetable, small and easy to take. Don't forget this.

Two pairs of gloves beat three of all kind.

The only female aviator in the world. She is an Oklahoma girl and made a number of ascensions with M. Santos Dumont.

A GAMBLING TRUST

DENS UNDER GUISE OF SOCIAL CLUBS.

Women Among Victims—After Losing Their Money Some Take Off Jewels and Sell Them to Brokers.

Paris, Feb. 2.—Sensational revelations have been made concerning the gambling dens of Ostend, Namur, Spa and Liège, making an invasion of the interesting old Derbyshire residence and remaining to tea. The king and queen concluded their visit to Chatsworth on Monday. Before leaving his majesty conferred on the Duke of Devonshire the honor of Knight Grand Cross of the Victorian Order.

An Economical Power.

New gas plants are being introduced on the Bolivian tablelands, says a British consular report. The fuel problem there is a serious one, and these suction gas plants are being used in Bolivian mines with anthracite for fuel as the most economical power.

London, Feb. 1.—It was admitted at the White House that the president is considering the name of Ralph Tyler, a negro, of Columbus, Ohio, for the position of surveyor of customs at Cincinnati.

If you once try Carter's Little River Pills for sick headache, biliousness or constipation, you will never be without them. They are purely vegetable, small and easy to take. Don't forget this.

Two pairs of gloves beat three of all kind.

When You Take Cold

One way is to pay no attention to it; at least, not until it develops into pneumonia, or bronchitis, or pleurisy. Another way is to take Dr. Aver's Cherry Pectoral. If he says, "The best thing for colds," then take it. Do as he says, anyway.

We publish the formulae of all our preparations.

sound of an association, give it a high-sounding title, take a house, and start gambling.

One of his clubs, called the Club de la Paix, was founded by M. Marquet, an immense membership of men and women, the subscription being quite a nominal amount, and it was here that most of the heavy losses by women occurred.

M. Marquet, who runs gambling rooms in Ostend, Namur, Dinant, Spa and Liège, has had an extraordinary career. He was a waiter in Ostend cafe, and in 1899 he married the owner's widow. With her money he started roulette at Ostend and Spa, and by suppressing the zero for a few hours each day he made his tables so popular that in a short time he made an immense fortune.

He organized his men in a wonderfully clever way, teaching them in a school for croupiers which he ran, and paying them so highly that they were all devoted to him.

In his Paris houses he introduced a new form of bacarat, which proved exceedingly popular, but very costly to his clients.

He recently offered a prize of $40,000 for the owner of the first airplane which should fly from Paris to Ostend.

Silence By Arson.

London, Feb. 2.—An extraordinary method of suicide was described yesterday, during the inquest on Ernest Christopher Murray at the St. Pancras coroner's court. He barricaded himself in a room, set fire to his clothing and the floor of the room with butter, and set fire to the room. The jury found that he committed suicide while of unsound mind by setting his room on fire.

Bellringers On Strike.

Liverpool, Feb. 2.—The bell ringers of St. Giles' Parish church, Newcastle-Upon-Tyne, Staffs, have resigned in mass because of a dispute with the churchwardens.

Rev. J. W. Dunn, it is alleged, that some of their privileges have been restricted. The bells of the parish church have not been rung this year.

Ruin For Undertakers.

London, Feb. 2.—An undertaker who was sued yesterday at the Lambeth county court for money due for coffin furniture explained his inability to pay by saying that his business had fallen off because of the decrease in the death rate. He declared that last year was the worst he had ever known.

Crows Stop A Train.

Paris, Feb. 2.—A train was brought to a stand near Liverdun, yesterday, by the presence on the line of thousands of crows engaged in picking up the refuse thrown out of the restaurant car of the Luxembourg express. The train stopped in that section to load the train, and they were so numerous in such numbers that the engine wheels skidded, and the train was temporarily stopped.

Brigands Rob Diplomatists.

Tehran, Feb. 2.—All appearances to the contrary, a certain marquis has disappeared. One week ago he received a note from a Dr. Draper, a dentist, in the name of M. Draper, a dental surgeon. The marquis said that he was a Belgian, Mme. Armantine Van Gelder, a beauty specialist, aged nineteen, of Brussels, had filed a complaint charging the marquis with swindling her out of $400 and valuable articles of silver.

The marquis was astounded. What!

He was a man of title and wealth, accused of swindling her. He would not agree to a hearing before the magistrate that he was an excellent boxer, and set fire to the room. Two members of the German legation, while out shooting with a woman, were robbed. The post from the south has been robbed twelve miles off of Tehran, and the road guards, on going to the rescue, lost a few killed and wounded.

Gold Paint For Sixpence.

London, Feb. 2.—At Yarmouth Jane Watts, a married woman, was remanded on charges of attempting to pass as half-sovereigns gilded sixpence. At her home, at Stokesbury, two bottles of liquid gold paint, one partly used, were discovered.

Mirrors For Soldiers.

Paris, Feb. 2.—The general in command of the 2nd French Infantry at Arras has ordered a large number to be fixed in the barracks yard so that the soldiers may make sure that they are spruce and smart before leaving the barracks gates.

Even a busy man must take a day off sooner or later for the purpose of attending his own funeral.

title of the Marquise de St. Andre, ex-attache of embassy.

In this capacity he made the acquaintance of a wealthy widow lady of Rouen, who advanced him $40,000.

This lady's mother, unknown to her daughter, lent the noble marquis another $30,000. He spent the money in royal fashion, taking a fine house on the Avenue d'Iéna, and engaging a staff of servants. Unfortunately for himself, the widow discovered that he was intriguing with one of her friends, a married woman, who had lent him $25,000. She was so indignant that she made a complaint to the police, but her fear of complicity prevented the marquis from being exposed.

He then went to Belgium, where he met a Mrs. Durcamps, with a fortune of $20,000. He proposed marriage and was accepted, but just before the money he told her his real name, adding that he was the natural son of the Duke de Penthièvre. Mrs. Durcamps was anxious to become a duchess. A year later he left the house.

A year later he left the wedding took place. A year later he left the house.

He then went to Belgium, where he met a Mrs. Durcamps, with a fortune of $20,000. He proposed marriage and was accepted, but just before the money he told her his real name, adding that he was the natural son of the Duke de Penthièvre. Mrs. Durcamps was anxious to become a duchess. A year later he left the house.

He then went to Belgium, where he met a Mrs. Durcamps, with a fortune of $20,000. He proposed marriage and was accepted, but just before the money he told her his real name, adding that he was the natural son of the Duke de Penthièvre. Mrs. Durcamps was anxious to become a duchess. A year later he left the house.

He then went to Belgium, where he met a Mrs. Durcamps, with a fortune of $20,000. He proposed marriage and was accepted, but just before the money he told her his real name, adding that he was the natural son of the Duke de Penthièvre. Mrs. Durcamps was anxious to become a duchess. A year later he left the house.

He then went to Belgium, where he met a Mrs. Durcamps, with a fortune of $20,000. He proposed marriage and was accepted, but just before the money he told her his real name, adding that he was the natural son of the Duke de Penthièvre. Mrs. Durcamps was anxious to become a duchess. A year later he left the house.

He then went to Belgium, where he met a Mrs. Durcamps, with a fortune of $20,000. He proposed marriage and was accepted, but just before the money he told her his real name, adding that he was the natural son of the Duke de Penthièvre. Mrs. Durcamps was anxious to become a duchess. A year later he left the house.

He then went to Belgium, where he met a Mrs. Durcamps, with a fortune of $20,000. He proposed marriage and was accepted, but just before the money he told her his real name, adding that he was the natural son of the Duke de Penthièvre. Mrs. Durcamps was anxious to become a duchess. A year later he left the house.

He then went to Belgium, where he met a Mrs. Durcamps, with a fortune of $20,000. He proposed marriage and was accepted, but just before the money he told her his real name, adding that he was the natural son of the Duke de Penthièvre. Mrs. Durcamps was anxious to become a duchess. A year later he left the house.

He then went to Belgium, where he met a Mrs. Durcamps, with a fortune of $20,000. He proposed marriage and was accepted, but just before the money he told her his real name, adding that he was the natural son of the Duke de Penthièvre. Mrs. Durcamps was anxious to become a duchess. A year later he left the house.

He then went to Belgium, where he met a Mrs. Durcamps, with a fortune of $20,000. He proposed marriage and was accepted, but just before the money he told her his real name, adding that he was the natural son of the Duke de Penthièvre. Mrs. Durcamps was anxious to become a duchess. A year later he left the house.

He then went to Belgium, where he met a Mrs. Durcamps, with a fortune of $20,000. He proposed marriage and was accepted, but just before the money he told her his real name, adding that he was the natural son of the Duke de Penthièvre. Mrs. Durcamps was anxious to become a duchess. A year later he left the house.

He then went to Belgium, where he met a Mrs. Durcamps, with a fortune of $20,000. He proposed marriage and was accepted, but just before the money he told her his real name, adding that he was the natural son of the Duke de Penthièvre. Mrs. Durcamps was anxious to become a duchess. A year later he left the house.

He then went to Belgium, where he met a Mrs. Durcamps, with a fortune of $20,000. He proposed marriage and was accepted, but just before the money he told her his real name, adding that he was the natural son of the Duke de Penthièvre. Mrs. Durcamps was anxious to become a duchess. A year later he left the house.

He then went to Belgium, where he met a Mrs. Durcamps, with a fortune of $20,000. He proposed marriage and was accepted, but just before the money he told her his real name, adding that he was the natural son of the Duke de Penthièvre. Mrs. Durcamps was anxious to become a duchess. A year later he left the house.

He then went to Belgium, where he met a Mrs. Durcamps, with a fortune of $20,000. He proposed marriage and was accepted, but just before the money he told her his real name, adding that he was the natural son of the Duke de Penthièvre. Mrs. Durcamps was anxious to become a duchess. A year later he left the house.

He then went to Belgium, where he met a Mrs. Durcamps, with a fortune of $20,000. He proposed marriage and was accepted, but just before the money he told her his real name, adding that he was the natural son of the Duke de Penthièvre. Mrs. Durcamps was anxious to become a duchess. A year later he left the house.

He then went to Belgium, where he met a Mrs. Durcamps, with a fortune of $20,000. He proposed marriage and was accepted, but just before the money he told her his real name, adding that he was the natural son of the Duke de Penthièvre. Mrs. Durcamps was anxious to become a duchess. A year later he left the house.

He then went to Belgium, where he met a Mrs. Durcamps, with a fortune of $20,000. He proposed marriage and was accepted, but just before the money he told her his real name, adding that he was the natural son of the Duke de Penthièvre. Mrs. Durcamps was anxious to become a duchess. A year later he left the house.

AS SEEN FROM AFAR

EXTRAORDINARY STORY IN CALIFORNIA PAPER.

Tells of Winter in Canada—Nine-Foot Snowfall; Drifts 56 Feet High, and Tunnels From House to House.

Winnipeg, Feb. 1.—Here is the latest dispatch sent broadcast over the United States. It is taken from the Los Angeles Herald.

"Winipeg, Jan. 28.—Reports from Prince Albert tell of a terrific snow-storm. The flakes fell for six days incessantly to a depth of nine feet in the open, and drifts fifty-four feet high piled up. Fortunately, the snow was soft, so the settlers had no difficulty in digging tunnels from house to house. It is not probable that the snow will disappear before spring, and many farmers are arranging to live under it for the winter. A few who did not have their fall ploughing done are carrying up the snow in the fields and are carrying on the work as usual. Their only complaint is the dimness of the light. Since the mantle of snow is so thick, no fire is required in the houses, and, in order to prevent being overcome by heat, little cooking is being done. While it is absolutely necessary to come to the surface, the people use sleds; the sleds are carefully covered with traps to prevent draughts from annoying those under the snow."

Woman's Hat Stops A Play.

Paris, Feb. 2.—The performance at the Theatre d' l'Ambigu was stopped for twenty minutes, yesterday, while the angry audience insisted on a woman removing a large hat which she was wearing. Shortly afterward the woman left the house on the advice of the police commissioner.

Letter Delivered By Water.

Liverpool, Feb. 2.—A lighthouse-keeper living on the Bishop lighthouse, Scilly Isles, put a letter, wishing a farmer living at Newford Farm, a happy New Year, into a bottle and threw it into the sea. The bottle was found a few hours later by some children playing on the beach. It had been carried eight miles by the tide.

New Pine Air Cure For Catarrh Glands

Dwellers in pine forests never have colds, never know the meaning of catarrh.

Upon this fact is built "Catarrh-zone," which forces into the lungs and nostrils the healing balms and soothing antiseptics of the pine forest.

The healthful vapor of "Catarrh-zone" cures the worst of coughs, colds and catarrh—does it in a pleasant, simple way.

The timid corners of the lungs are treated with the aromatic parts of the aromatic tubercles, which are inserted every cell in the nose and throat is bathed in the antiseptic balms of Catarrh-zone.

Simply invaluable is Catarrh-zone.

Healthful air, colds, sores to cure, husking, whooping cough, catarrh, nose colds or bronchitis—try it yourself.

Complete two months' treatment, guaranteed, price $1; small (trial) size 25¢, dealers, or N. C. Polson & Co., Hartford, Conn., U.S.A., and Kingston, Ont.