PREMIER WHITNEY'S WAY.

Suggests How to Overcome the Three-Fifths Clause of Local Option.

A Strong Speech Made by the Ministerial Leader—Prohibition in the Rural Districts Could Be Accomplished in Five Years—The Authority of the Municipal Councils to Put Up Licenses to Any Figure Desired,

Toronto News.

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the Grand Council of Ontario, Royal Templars of Temperance, was celebrated by a banquet in Zion Congregational church, Toronto. The event also marked the opening of the ninth session of the grand council, composed of delegates who had arrived from points throughout the province. Hon. J. P. Whitney, replying to "Our Province," made a spirited address, urging the need of Canadians for a better sense of their responsibilities. His speech, as it touched on the temperance situation, was reported in the friendly Toronto News:

"I have spent a great portion of my life endeavoring to think out the question that brings you here. And while Providence is kind enough to allow me to continue in public life, I propose to devote a certain portion of my time to thinking out a remedy for the drink evil in this country, while knowing full well that I shall receive very little gratitude for doing so. I will be told, as I am told day by day, that I and the party with which I am connected are in alliance with the liquor trade. I will be told that by men who have spent a generation side by side with the liquor trade. I want it understood that I have done what was in my power—feebly, I admit, with defects. I am certain, but nevertheless with an honest desire and intention. And that is why I value the privilege of being here to-night. The second reason is that I never received such an invitation before in this city. I insist that I am a co-worker with you people in the great object you have in view.

"Far be it from me to suggest that the government of which I am the head is infallible, and does not make mistakes. I may say we have, and I know we will, because we are mortals. But you must allow me to say that as far as local option is concerned, you gained forty-three or forty-four elections in a short time during the present year, owing to the law that was passed last year. In sixteen years previously you gained 101 such elections—and forty-three or forty-four in the last few months because of the law which had let down the bars. I speak with a good deal of pride with relation to that, and I hope to be able to do other things, alongside of and with your people, particularly with reference to the amelioration of the law in order to bring about a still further lessening of the drink evil in this country. (Applause.) And I should be ready to do it even in the midst of misrepresentation—and I shall have the misrepresentation, no doubt of that—but I am doing it only because I am convinced that it is the duty of every man who occupies a position of any influence in this world to do that which is reasonable for the betterment of his fellow-men, and let me just say that it strikes me that everybody that has this object in view should join with the others who have the same object in view, no matter whether their methods are exactly the same or not.

"Now, let me say I believe this, and my belief is born of experience and observation—and I am sure you will admit I have had considerable experience—I believe if there were thorough accord with all the people in this province who desire the lessening of the drink evil, and if we never heard such things as we see in the letters I am getting—neither Christian nor fair, manly or generous—if we recognize that although one man's methods cannot be the same as another man's methods his object is the same, it ought to be sufficient. The tendency of people's minds is in the direction of local option, and if there are not greed on to turn backward by having their motives assailed and that sort of thing. I believe the time would come inside of five years when practically all the rural districts would be made local option in this province.

"Let me tell you something which, it strikes me, you do not all know. Under the municipal law as it stands to-day any municipal council which, as you are aware, is composed of five members, three of that council, not one of whom necessarily polled for himself a majority of the votes in the municipality, may pass a by-law raising the license fee for hotels in that municipality to $200. They can go on in addition to that, and pass a resolution making the license fee $500 if they like, or $1,000, or any sum they choose, and that resolution or by-law will be made legal by a vote of the people in that municipality, a mere majority vote. So that to-day there is that opportunity before every municipality in this province, and you know perfectly well that in any township municipality, if the license fee were raised to $1,000, there would be nobody after one, and it is well to know that this opportunity is before us.

"I have not only proved what my desires have been in this matter since I was in public life, but I proved them when I was attempting to get into public life. I was defeated by a majority of twenty-five, because I went on the platform a few months before and said that while I was not convinced of anything like prohibition that I believed every lover of his country, in view of the evils of the liquor traffic, should be willing to make any reasonable experiment to see whether or not the experiment would result in the lessening of the drink evil, and, therefore, I said these words in favor of the Scott act and voted for it and lost my election. I tell you these things in a reminiscent way to show you that my sympathies are with the cause you have in view."

Costume of Silk or Light-Weight Cloth.

The sketch depicts a pretty model which would be suitable for a variety of materials. The bodice was cut with a rounded yoke upper part, the sections of which were joined together in the middle of the front and back by straps of velvet. Flat silk-covered buttons were also used as trimming, the sleeves being open caps of the material, under which were undersleeves of lace. The inner yoke was of lace, and the skirt was made with a plaited panel down the middle of the front, at each side and in the back.

Butter Frauds In Ohio.

Columbus, O., Feb. 21.—Prosecutions are pending all over the state against persons who are selling oleomargarine as butter, and for coloring it to make it appear like butter. The frauds have been very extensive and up to the present the state dairy and food inspector has prosecuted seventy-seven offenders for violating the state food laws in this connection. Sixty prosecutions were for offering oleomargarine for sale as butter and the remaining seventeen for coloring it to make it appear like butter. Fines commensurate with the seriousness of the offences are being assessed. Agents are reported to be operating in different parts of the state selling receipts for which it is claimed, with the aid of adulterants, two pounds of butter can be produced from what if required under ordinary circumstances now to produce one.

Reclaim Fifty Million Acres.

Washington, Feb. 21.—The government reclamation service is at present, preparing a report to present to the house dealing with a stupendous enterprise which, if carried into effect, will mean the reclamation of over fifty million acres of waste land comprising the greater American desert, and will cost in or about $1,500,000,000. It will be pointed out, however, that the work, when completed, will create $2,350,000,000 worth of taxable property and will provide homes for over three million of the future population of the country. This vast tract which the bureau will endeavour to make arable, is situated in Colorado, Utah and Nevada and comprises no less than two-fifths of the area of the United States.

Having a friend who lost his life by an operation, I desisted from ever having that experiment tried on me. I owe you a debt of gratitude. Tips For The Farmers

BY UNCLE JOSH.

The Kingston market was almost entirely deserted on Tuesday—in fact it was one of the smallest, if not the smallest offering in some time. The eggs offered could easily have been counted, and the butter only consisted of two baskets, and a portion of this the good farmer sold on her way to town. The farmers, no doubt, are waiting for Saturday market. A large number who were in search of butter and eggs on Tuesday, were sadly disappointed. No doubt the farmers will have enough and plenty for all on Saturday.

The reports of the finding of a bottle in a cheese branded as of Canadian origin, and sold in London, has created considerable interest in dairy circles. A note in the bottle gave an address in New York state.

The habit of placing articles containing notes in cheese, in order to communicate with consumers, is deplored by all men who have the interest of the trade at heart. If generally indulged in, it would tend to injure the reputation of the output of Canadian factories. In referring to the case, J. A. Reddick says:

"The fact that the person who signed the note gave a New York state post office address seems to have given rise to the inference that the cheese was of United States origin, but marked with a Canadian registered brand. It is possible that this may be a correct inference, but I do not think so. In the first place, there is nothing in the correspondence to show how the cheese was branded or if it was branded at all. A. J. Rawson, who brought the matter to my attention, would not have failed to have mentioned it if he had had any suspicion as to the origin of the cheese. Moreover, the registered brand No. 530 belongs to a well-known cheese factory in Leeds county. It will be easy to ascertain the true facts of the case and steps are being taken with that end in view."

"Agricultural education should be the motto of the farmers of to-day," said a well-known farmer of the Kingston district to-day. "We know a great deal now, but very little compared with what will be known and practised by the farmers of the next generation. Every day we are learning something new. Agricultural education means increased intelligence in all matters that have to do with the profession and business of farming."

The incubator plan for raising chickens has been tried by many persons this year. Some have hatched them, and with the mistakes and failures of last year, they ought to do better work now. The little chicks should be cared for.

Whole milk will produce better veal calves than skim milk, and develop them quicker says Hoard's Dairyman, but it is questionable whether this method is the most profitable. A good calf can be raised by feeding whole milk for two weeks and then add some skim milk—increasing it until half of the milk allowance is skim milk. Some cornmeal may be added, when the calf is two or three weeks old, increasing the amount as the calf demands it.

Because an animal is a brother or little mate to some great hog does not necessarily mean that he is a great breeder, says S. H. Naylor, in the Live Stock World. Remember that a good breeding animal does not get all good ones, but that the good ones are the kind to tie to.

A device to break a cow from sucking herself is to put a large bull ring in her nose, says a writer in the Breeders' Gazette. He has never known it to fail. Should it fail, he suggests wiring a second ring to the first, and there will be no more trouble.

Ninety per cent. of the short-fed cattle marketed at Chicago, either lose money or do not produce best results, was remarked by a veteran cattle man, says the Breeders' Gazette. There is only one season, he says, when this stuff, fed on corn sixty or ninety days, is profitable; that is in the spring before Texas grass beef becomes available and after frozen stock have been exhausted.

One cow fed for a period of twelve days on corn-and-cob meal and then twelve days on ear corn, gave 15.2 pounds of milk more during the time she was fed the corn-and-cob meal. This was the result of an experiment at the New Jersey Station, says Iowa Homestead. It needs no experiment to teach dairymen that it pays to grind grain, especially corn, and it has been found that seventy pounds of corn-and-cob meal is equal in its feeding value to seventy pounds of pure cornmeal.

Expensive barns and stables, says Kimball's Dairy Farmer, are not necessary for the production of sanitary milk. Common sense, cleanliness, and quick cooling are the three main points.

Just because it's colder and you may not be able to smell the odors from the cream separator so plainly, don't imagine that it doesn't need as careful cleaning.

If the ensilage gives your butter an "off" flavor do not condemn the silo. Perhaps your barn is not properly ventilated. Try milking before feeding the ensilage; then the odors disseminated during the feeding will not be absorbed by the milk.

The stockman needs even more skill in reading character than the professional man. The latter has words for a guide, the former must read the thoughts and motives of his subjects with only looks and actions as indices. No two animals can be best handled in just the same way, patience and persistence are necessary in the management of farm stock—and they are more often successful than the rod. Study the disposition of each animal if you would easily control it.

The most profitable hog is probably that one which is farrowed early in the spring and marketed the latter part of the same year. A boy less than a year old that can be made to weigh 200 to 250 pounds will be the profitable boy. It is rarely profitable to keep a hog over winter unless the conditions are favorable, hogs following

SYDENHAM ICE RACES

Drew a Large Crowd—Results of the Contests.

Sydenham, Feb. 21.—A fine day favored the racing men on Wednesday, and some good races were the result. Tuesday turned out so stormy that a postponement had to be made and all the horses and their owners and friends, remained over, filling the hotels. Bright and early the sports turned out and had the fine wide half-mile track on Sydenham Lake scraped and in excellent condition for Wednesday's races.

The village was a lively spot by noon, and after dinner everyone made a bee line for the ice, fully a thousand congregating around the track by two o'clock. A large crowd of sports drove out from Kingston and were prominent participaters. The large purse of $275 drew a fine field of horses. The 2.50 class was the first race, and the starter, "Sam" Harkness, from Kingston, called them out promptly at 2.30 o'clock. Leighton Guess was appointed time-keeper and the judges were Cliff Rutledge and James Sherman of Sydenham. The purse was $50, and the entries were "Am Patch," owned by Mulville, Westport; "Lord Brandon," by Corkey, Kingston; "Trussell," by Lyons, Harrowsmith; "Lady Thorn," by Merriman, Battersea; and "Starlight," by Martin, Westport. "Am Patch" was an easy winner in three straight heats, "Lord Brandon" and "Trussell" fought hard for second place, but it was won by "Lord Brandon" in the last two heats. Fourth place was taken easily by "Lady Thorn." "Starlight" dropping out after the first heat. The time made by "Am Patch" in the three heats was 2.39½, 2.39 and 2.36.

The last race of the day was the 2.20 class, purse $65. The entries were "Frank C." owned by Gibson of Gananoque; "Miss Appleby," by Murphy, of Portland; "Nellie G." by Graves of Harrowsmith, and "Pretty Nell," by McCue Bros. of Kingston. It was a closely contested race, the winner in three straight heats being "Frank C." but he was closely followed by "Miss Appleby," who shows great promise, and took second place in the three heats. The third place was a fight between the other two horses and "Nellie G." won out in the last two heats.

The time made in this race by "Frank C." in each heat was 2.33, 2.30 and 2.27.

The Sydenham brass band enlivened the occasion. Thursday's races include a 2.30 class with a purse of $60, and a free-for-all with a purse of $75, and entries are well filled up.

The Unity Of The Spirit.

The real bond that unites men in real fellowship, is not the unity of a creed or any mere mental agreement. It is the unity of the spirit, of love and common purpose. Love spans all difference of belief, and a common purpose overleaps all variance of opinion regarding method. The end is the main thing. No real barrier need separate Catholic from Protestant, orthodox from liberal. We are all one in our affections and our kindly purposes. Let us rid ourselves of these paltry labels that divide us into alien groups, and recognize our common unity as those who seek the good.
