A Noble Doctor's Horrid Nightmare.
A Case of Strangely Perturbed Emotions Resembling Mental Atrophy.
One day last week a well-known doctor, who had probably been up late the night previous, had a disagreeable mid-day experience. He appeared at the Toronto Board of Health meeting apparently in his normal condition, but whether he lost consciousness or not is not stated. During the meeting he imagined he was surrounded by "Sips" and "blood-suckers" which he thought were the manufactures of all patent or proprietary medicines. We understand some of his conferees suggested a dose of Psychine to quiet his nerves. The explanation of this strange hallucination appears to have been that Psychine is curing so many people and so cutting into his practice that it worked on his mental faculties. This is not surprising, as Psychine is certainly accomplishing a wonderful work in the cure of some of the most baffling cases to physicians. As for all the more ordinary cases of stubborn coughs, colds, influenza, bronchitis, catarrh, pneumonia, night sweats, it is the quickest and greatest known cure. Psychine is curing many cases of wasting disease and consumption that have been pronounced hopeless by the leading doctors. The able and broad-minded doctors of course, approve of this, but the little fellows don't like Psychine. The following is from the doctor's own district:
"I had not been for Psychine, I would have been a dead man. My trouble started with Grippe, pneumonia and typhoid fever followed, then serious lung trouble, and the fear thing I knew I was in consumption. Of course the doctors could not cure me, and the treatment I got in the hospitals and convalescent home only acted as a respite. The disease came back with renewed violence, and I went to the country to try and find relief in the fresh air."
"While out of the city I began to use Psychine, and I am only too glad to say it proved a blessing to me. After using it for a time I was able to return home. I kept on, and was soon able to be about. Now I weigh fully 210 pounds. When I started to use Psychine I only weighed 140 pounds. Psychine, and nothing else, has brought back my health."

Daily Whig.
Experience In Glasgow.
The taxpayers are referred to Glasgow for an example of what can be accomplished by municipal management. The London Times has had a series of special articles on the subject, and its grievance is that while the civic revenues have been increasing so have the public expenditure and the public debt. The debt has been increased by the number of things, outside of water, gas, and electricity, into which the city has embarked.

The Whig has looked up the record with respect to electricity and finds that it is not disturbing. The electric plant was acquired in 1892 for $75,000 and gradually developed and modernized. The amount of capital is now over $5,000,000, and the profits, according to one account, in 1904 over $400,000. This did not include taxes, for in Scotland all public utilities are taxed, and they are therefore put on the same footing as private enterprises in this respect. "After making liberal allowance for depreciation, the department places the balance," we are told, "to its credit, paying nothing for the relief of the taxpayers." It is added, "Glasgow does not run enterprises for the benefit of all its citizens."

With regard to the gas. The plants were purchased by the city, in 1889, and a profit has been realized on them every year since. The sum invested is two millions of dollars. Originally the private owners were given stock in payment of their interest, and later the city bought this stock, and went on reducing the rates from $1.50 per thousand down to 48c. for motive power and 54c. for lighting. The Chronicle continues: "When the plants are fully paid for, which will not be for many years at present rate, Glasgow will not pay more than 30c. per thousand feet for its gas."
The ideal position in public ownership is not to continue a public debt, by selling to it every dollar of expenditure in the way of permanent improvements. That means large sums of borrowed money. It is the result of the theory that succeeding generations, not the present, shall pay for these things. It is not Glasgow's idea. Here it is held that the debt shall be reduced, that the plants shall not be burdened with debt, but that the interest account being reduced or wiped out, there will not be the need of raising so much money, and the cost of the service go down accordingly.

No Steam About This.
The letter of Ald. Nickle contains suggestions with regard to street lighting which are entitled, on their merits, to serious consideration. The cost of street lighting has perhaps varied according to circumstances, and it may be necessary to make a calculation each year, upon the data then available, in order that the city may be given every advantage which is accruing to it.
In 1905 there was a substantial reduction in the charge for street lighting. The plant had not been long in the possession of the city, and the experiment in public ownership was somewhat limited. It may be that the records of the departments were not complete, and that the price per lamp per year was not based on any close analysis of accounts. But now, though the improvements in the power house are not complete, it should be possible to get at the actual cost of the street lighting, and it is for the council to decide whether, that cost being below the amount now charged for lights, there should be any adjustment or reduction in the rates.

The Whig is not certain that the percentage of cost for last year's charges has been added into the estimate for the air lights. There was a reference in the report to the large amount which would be necessary for maintenance in 1905 and 1906, and if this large amount is not necessary for maintenance during the current year there must, of course, be a very material difference in the results. If there is any surplus over and above the cost of the service the city's claims should have due consideration. There should, however, be no guess work about this. The manager of the plant should submit a carefully prepared statement of the facts and finances.
As to the procedure with regard to street lighting. The contract should practically be a yearly one. That is, if Ald. Nickle's proposition is acceptable and a great deal can be said in support of it—there should be a definite arrangement respecting the amount to be expended in street lighting, and every business man will see the wisdom of standing by the budget when it has been passed.

In other words, the council should deal with its finances as the individual dealer with his. The income is limited or fixed, and the expenditure should be limited or fixed. Anything in the way of haphazard procedure in connection at least with the public utility should not be contemplated for a moment.
What committee should administer the street lighting is not of material concern. The policy being determined—a certain amount of lights being supplied for a certain sum—it does not matter much what committee supervises the service. The only responsibility is to see that the contract is faithfully carried out.

Use Of Streets.
There is only one point in the letter of Ald. Chown which calls for comment. The Whig has emphasized the other points referred to, and a repetition of them will not add to their value. A resolution of the council has been quoted to the effect that the Bell Telephone company pays $750 a year for "the exclusive use of streets." The word "exclusive" explains everything, and recalls conditions which will stand investigation.
The Whig has stated that the Bell Telephone company holds a charter from the federal parliament which permits it to enter towns and cities at will and put its poles down where it likes. It is only necessary to go back a few years and revive the clash which occurred between the city and the company, when the poles were being erected along Ontario street, and in front of the city hall. Objection was taken, and an effort was made to prevent the company from carrying out its plans. It triumphed. It had the law on its side, and after a parley, to no effect, the work went on.

Some years later it was observed by Dr. Curtis that the company was allowing some western cities a certain sum annually for the monopoly of the telephone business, and a special committee of the council made representations which brought to the city $400 a year for a number of years.
In 1905, when Dr. Bell was mayor, he was anxious that there should be competition in this telephone business. A company which is operating an independent plant in Peterboro wanted to come here. An American company had correspondence on the subject. The Bell company pressed for a renewal of its agreement on the ground that it proposed improvements, and did not desire to enter upon them until it had a new understanding with the council.
What did it seek? The use of the streets? Nay, it had that already, and while negotiations were pending it was pushing its extensions in different directions. What it wanted was the "exclusive use of the streets," and the monopoly it enjoys to-day for $750 a year.
Eventually the council agreed to this, and for three reasons: (1) That the other companies were not in a position to do business, (2) that the city did not desire to see a new company disfiguring the streets with its poles, and (3) that the competition would probably add to the expense of the service since the business men would have to be attached to both the telephone systems.
It will thus be seen that the "exclusive use of the streets" means in this case, it is one way of dealing with the matter, and it by no means intelligently expresses all the existing conditions.

Editorial Notes.
Gas at $1 per thousand for all purposes? Is that it, Ald. Toye? Good for you.
The chairman of the street department is on the warpath. Something is doing.
There should be a building inspector, and he should do his duty without fear, favour or affection.
There is a general demand for cheaper gas and electricity. The consumers of these things should assert themselves.
Victoria ward is more interested than any other ward in the building of the west end sewer. What is the matter with its aldermen?
On dit that the light, heat and power committee contemplates a pleasant surprise. What is it? Are the people to get cheaper light and power?
A citizen has it that gas at $1.50 per thousand feet is cheaper than coal oil. All right. Drop the price and make gas cheaper than candle light.
There never was a time when so many people were looking into municipal matters. And looking as into a well-sewing things but not the bottom of them.
The council is right in seeking to enforce its by-law respecting the safety of the public buildings. What is to be of an ordinance if it is not to be put in force?
Ald. Craig puts a new face on the water works question. He shows that the surpluses have been very small, considering the large interest at stake, and that they should not have excited the envy of anyone.

What the city needs is an executive committee, whose function is to reverse or reconcile the reports of all the other committees. Belleville has this legislative reform, and Belleville is not usually regarded as very fast municipally.

Canada's Progress.
Buffalo Times.
Canada's progress has been marked during the past decade. The tide of immigration has been flowing strong by its farm lands. From a total of 49,000 immigrants in 1901 the number increased to 130,000 in 1904 and 200,000 in 1906. This is greater in proportion to the whole number of inhabitants than the number of immigrants to the United States. A large number of the new settlers in Canada emigrated from this country. The unsettled territory is, however, still vast. Lack of labor to develop its agricultural and mineral resources is Canada's greatest drawback.
