A Voice From the Stomach

A Bloodless Fight Between a Tablet and a Habit—The Tablet Wins.

At the age of 22, Clarence had good digestion. He had gastric juice that could dissolve doughnuts and turn pig skins into good blood corpuscles.

At the age of 24 he began to be prone about the waist and lean backwards. He also began to cultivate several chins. In his new-found pride he began to think it his duty to gorge himself on everything, the good and the bad, for appetite feeds on appetite.

His pictures showed that he took on weight after he put his collar on. At the age of 26 Clarence married and went to boarding. On top of all this he attended oyster suppers and wine dinners, which reduced the size of his collar from 16 1/2 to 15. With still abiding faith in the strength of his stomach he gulped his meals, and chewed them afterwards.

At the age of 28 Clarence began to hear an inward voice, warning from the stomach. After each meal he would feel bloated—and belching became a habit.

He began to be a light eater—and a hearty thinker. He tried to think out a cure, for now he would sit at his meals absolutely disgusted at the thought or sight of anything to eat.

He would sit down at his meals without the trace of an appetite, just because it was time to eat. He would often feel a rawing, unsatisfied "still-hungry" feeling in his stomach, even after he was through eating, whether his meal was well cooked or not.

And suffered a good many other things with his stomach that he could not explain, but that made him grouchy, miserable, out-of-sorts and generally sour on everybody and everything.

Finally he read an account, something like this, about the truly wonderful results obtained from Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets in all cases of stomach trouble, dyspepsia, and so on. He bought a 50c. box of the drug store, and took the whole box. When he started, he had little faith—and less appetite. When he finished he had absolute faith, and more appetite—and more good cheer. Things began to taste different and better to him.

Now he has no more dyspepsia, no more indigestion, no more loss of appetite, brass, irritation, burning sensation, heartburn, nausea, eructations, and memory of the past. He remembers one ingredient of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest for you 3,000 grains of food, just as it did for Clarence.

This relieves your stomach of the work of digesting until your stomach can get strong and healthy again. Your stomach has been overworked and abused. It's lagged out. It needs a rest.

Let Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets do the work of your stomach. You will be surprised how fine you'll feel after eating, and how luxuriously good everything will taste to you.

Feed the call of the stomach now! There's a word of good cheer in one box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets,—at any drug store, 50c.

Send us your name and address to-day, and we will at once send you by mail a sample package, free. Address: F. A. Stuart Co., 94 Stuart Bldg., Marsland, Mich.

NEWS OF NEWBURGH

THE HIGH SCHOOL TEACHER FAILS TO COME.

And the School Board Will Have to Hustle—Epworth Leaguers at Selby-Barber Store For the Village.

Newburgh, March 21.—The members of the Epworth League, to the number of fifty, enjoyed a trip to Selby on Friday evening. A number from the league took part in the concert given by the Selby League, and after the programme the Newburgh visitors were entertained at the paragonage in Selby.

Born on Wednesday to Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Thomson, a son, Mrs. Beaman left for her home in Kempsville, on Friday, after spending the winter with her daughters here. Mr. Harrington, travelling agent, has purchased N. J. Lemmon's barber shop and has secured the services of Mr. Marchant, of Tweed, to take charge. Percy Madden and J. E. Madden spent Sunday at Mrs. A. Madden's. Miss Ella Chant entertained on Saturday afternoon, and Mrs. G. B. Thomson on Wednesday afternoon.

The high and public schools close on Thursday, for the Easter holidays. William Stevenson returned from Pittsburg on Monday, to take a position in the foundry here. Just at present there is a scarcity of houses in the village, there being only one or two vacant buildings. Lenten services are being held in St. John's church this week. Miss Taylor, Montreal, is visiting her grandmother, Mrs. D. B. Stickney. During the offertory in the Methodist church, on Sunday evening, Miss Taylor sang a solo, with fine effect. Mrs. Caton and Mrs. Lloyd, Naamans, spent Wednesday at Mrs. A. Madden's. Miss Caroline Finkle was taken ill, on Sunday evening, but was better this morning. It is understood that James Grogan has sold his house. Thomas Winters is out again.

J. L. Moore, Norwood, the teacher who was appointed successor to G. G. Miller, on the Newburgh high school, was held in St. John's church this week. He could not come. This means that the board will have to make haste in filling the vacancy. The board can now advertise for a teacher to take the subjects taught by Mr. Nesbitt, and allow Mr. Denoyer, the incoming principal, to take moderns, which work he is particularly well qualified to take. Ernest Gandier is spending the week in Toronto.

Children's Fancy Coats. Every mother wishes to have her child look the pick of perfection. Jenkins' nobby coats in scarlet and blue will do the deed.

Friends of the late Stanford White are preparing to hold, as soon as the "shaw trial" is over, a series of meetings, at which they will pay tribute to his artistic achievements and genius. New Year's day will before long be the general polling day for municipal elections throughout Ontario. Such, at least, is the conviction of the legislative private bill committee.

Christy's English hats at Bibby's. C. W. Hartman, of Clarksburg, is being boomed for an appointment in the senate. The New York Telegraph believes that Thaw will be found insane. Jenkins' hats have always been the leaders of fashion. Attorney Delmas declares that Thaw is sane beyond a doubt.

Hutch, A Body Builder. When one eats food the nutritive part goes to make up the different tissues of the body. If there is any flaw in the process it will result in disease of some one of the organs of the body. The digestion in this way plays a most important part in one's health. Hutch is a splendid digestion and stomach treatment. It is composed of ingredients which are chemically combined to keep the digestion in good working order. Hutch will not allow any clogging or derangement. Hutch is a doctor for ten cents.

Dust on the Ocean. To talk of a "dusty" ocean highway sounds absurd, but the expression is perfectly accurate. Every one who is familiar with ships knows that, no matter how carefully the decks may be washed in the morning, a great quantity of dust will collect by nightfall. You say, "But the modern steamships burn hundreds of tons of coal a day, easily accounts for such a deposit." True, but the records of sailing vessels show that the latter collect more dust than a steamer. On a recent voyage of a sailing vessel—a journey which lasted ninety-seven days—twenty-four barrels of dust were swept from the decks. The captain was a man of scientific tastes, and made careful observations, but could not solve the mystery. Some, no doubt, comes from the wear and tear on the sails and rigging, but they account for only a small portion. To add to the mystery, bits of cork, wood and vegetable fibre are frequently found in this sea dust. Where does it come from?

An Old Veteran. The oldest enlisted man on the rolls of the United States army is Sergt. David Robertson, of the Hospital Corps, stationed on Governor's Island. He is a Scot, and 74 years old. He has been in continuous service, having the extraordinary record of never being lost a day.

Some Distance Apart. Green—What do you mean by saying John Brown is a distant relative of yours? I thought he was your brother.

Brown—Well, there are twelve children in our family. He's the oldest, and I'm the youngest.

FEMALE INEBRIATES.

Increase of Drunkenness Among Englishwomen.

Careful observers of social conditions in both the upper and the lower classes of society cannot fail to have noted of late a decided increase in the addiction to alcoholic liquors on the part of women. Published statistics relating to the number and ages of women convicted of drunkenness give one no real idea of the extent of the evil, for only a very small fraction of the intemperate fall into the hands of the police. Moreover, though a woman does not become drunk unless she has been intemperate, she may easily be highly intemperate without ever becoming drunk. It is notorious that a drunken woman is reclaimed only with the greatest difficulty, for she knows that she has unsexed herself. The intemperate woman injures her reputation, the intemperate woman her health.

Secret Drinking. Many women take to secret drinking the base of womanhood—by reason of the lonely loneliness they live, to soften the sorrow which life has so many women or to deaden that anxiety about the future which is so harassing to the timid minds of so many of the women of every social and every sign of the times when the evil factory girls, who think lightly of the present and still less of the future, force upon the girls, in small payments to accumulate until Christmas-eve and then to be spent in spirits, wine and cakes.

Increased facilities for drinking are to be numbered among the causes of the increasing intemperance among women. Women travel alone to a far greater extent than was formerly the case; women's club houses every opportunity to those who wish to indulge in potent liquors: some of the big stores and mammoth drapery establishments have refreshment saloons; restaurants and railway buffets continue to multiply, while the pastry cook with a wine license is very much in evidence in every residential district. A woman in a good position in life may be intemperate to a degree without ever having recourse to the ordinary public house. It is not pretended that all the places enumerated above have spirit licenses, but intemperance in port and sherry or even in bottled ale is almost equally destructive to health.

Deploable Effect. Intemperance has a deplorable effect on the nervous system of women, whom it tends rapidly to degrade morally as well as physically, unfitting them for those domestic responsibilities which should be the first care of the women of every race. Intemperance among men is bad enough, but among women it is a far more serious matter, since in the future the fate of a race, a kingdom or an empire may be imperiled. Intemperance among women is incompatible with the welfare of the children, even if they are unaffected by a bad heredity, must be affected by evil parental example. It is because of this that the drunkard's mother is regarded as the curse to her family, and the drunkard to the state. Even the most unprejudiced and tolerant of moderate drinkers and the most tolerant of moderate drinkers, since in the future the fate of a race, a kingdom or an empire may be imperiled.

Powerful Nerve Poisons. Among the lower orders gin is the beverage of election, or, failing that, "four ale" in immoderate quantities. The liquor is another powerful nerve poison, which women who can afford it and is certainly the most destructive of all, containing, as it always does, those deleterious elements so necessary to make the taste of the cheap alcohol, which is so raw and fiery that it could not be swallowed in its natural state. The mineral oils and alcohols act as powerful nerve poisons if taken in sufficiently large doses, and over a sufficient period of time, and in the seductive flavors of the liquor containing them lies their danger to women.

Hope for the future of our woman-kind lies in the fact that all women are to some extent the slaves of fashion, and once it becomes known that the fashion for women to drink freely of potent liquors at dinners, dances and other convivial assemblies intemperance among women is a thing of the past. But against the pet vice of secret drinking the only remedy is in the teaching of temperance and hygiene.—London Chronicle.

THE KING EN-ROUTE. In the early part of the year King Edward almost always takes a short trip abroad, and the following few points about His Majesty's mode of traveling will not be out of place.

Frequently, when traveling in Germany, he favors the Dover and Calais route, and on his arrival at the Gare Maritime of the latter town, partakes of a light luncheon, which invariably consists of clear soup, two poached eggs on toast, a slice of cold chicken, and a plentiful supply of fresh fruit.

His Majesty rarely takes cheese, and is equally averse to solid food, but his luncheons over King Edward orders a huge bundle of newspapers and periodicals to be brought to his carriage, and these, together with a supply of cigars, keep him occupied until his arrival in the French capital. His Majesty is an inveterate newspaper reader.

In a Day Seventy-Five Murders Occurred. Bournemouth, March 22.—The aroused peasants, who have refrained from killing, are now blood mad and every Jew that offers the slightest resistance is put to death instantly. In the last twenty-four hours seventy-five murders have been reported, and more than three hundred Jews have been badly wounded. Numerous cases of horrible outrages perpetrated against women have come to light.

FURNACES IN ENGLAND.

John Bull Prefers to See a Star in Open Grate.

According to London papers, Englishmen are up in arms over a threatened invasion of what they regard as one of their inherent rights, the right to keep their houses unconsumably cold. At a recent meeting of remedy clubs resolutions were passed condemning a rumored attempt to supply open fires with furnaces. The British business and farmers assembled agreed that home would be anything but attractive had it always an opening reminiscent of the House of Commons, or, worst still, of the reading room of the British Museum.

There is reason to believe that the house that is improperly heated possesses a number of advantages over the house that is thoroughly heated, although it is impossible to persuade people on this side of the water that any change is desirable. It costs much less partly to heat a house—to heat the ends of two or three rooms—for one thing, and that is an important consideration, surely, when coal goes up whenever the temperature goes down. Again, given an awful cold, piled near an open fireplace, and almost anybody can keep a fire going, whereas it is a very different matter to decide to the cellar and fix a furnace. The trouble with most furnaces is that they are located in the cellar.

Then, too, if callers call at all at a house in which their seats rather than their respects; they do not accept invitations to be seated and rock the hours away chatting about nothing in particular while the members of the family on whom they are calling are waiting for an opportunity to go to bed.

It isn't surprising that Englishmen are opposed to warm houses, but why they continue to cling to open fire is a mystery. The open fire is more or less ornamental, it is true, but it merely serves to accentuate the general chill and gloom which pervade the average English "living room."

THE PARAGRAPH PULPIT. In the past the chief motive in religion has evidently been to escape the punishment of evil. Devil-doing has been the all-important art. To-day a new motive is asserting itself with growing force. It is of being good and doing good for good's sake. The thought of future reward is no longer the main motive for righteousness. It is enough to have the joy of the doing. Do good, because it is better to do good than evil. Help others, because it is better than hurting them. Be pure and unselfish and loving, not because you fear hell, but because it is better than being impure and selfish and unloving.
