A BLOW AT REBATING.
The life insurance companies protest, not without some cause, against the proposal to penalize the directors and management for the offences of rebating. Rebating is not only a nuisance but an evil. It is so admitted by the insurance men themselves. All who gave evidence respecting it before the royal commission testified in unfavorable terms to the effects of it, and the commissioners felt that they were called upon specially to deal with it. Hence the provision which has caused all the commotion. The method of cure corresponds with that in connection with election cases. The man who is bribed and the briber have not always been punished. Sometimes the sufferer by his indirection and iniquity has been the candidate who knew nothing of their work and was not really culpable for it.

The proposed insurance law holds the managers and directors to account for the offences of the agents, and makes the fine $1,000 for each conviction. The agent and the insurers—the parties directly affected and directly responsible—are exempt from punishment. This is not right. Moreover any one, knowing about the deal, can lay the complaint, and if it leads to a conviction he will be entitled to one half of the fine. This fine, too, cannot be paid by the company, and out of its funds. That is expressly provided against.

The desire is to make the managing directors and officers see the un wisdom of retaining in that service any one who is given to illegal acts, but the penalty is out of all keeping with the risks that are assumed.

NOT SAFE AT LARGE.
The last has not been heard of the Thaw case, but it is evident that it cannot drag its weary way much longer. The case is tired of it, and the prosecution, and the people. The defence may not be. Behind it are the millions of a great estate, and it is wonderful what an army of talent it invites and the spectacular proceedings in which it indulges.

Some comment has been made on the fact that in this issue there has been a tremendous struggle between justice and wealth. A spoiled boy has involved himself in a crime, the usual penalty, of which is death, and to save him there is no end of sacrifice. The defence makes an expensive fight, and the prosecution is necessarily obliged to exercise its energies accordingly.

The result is a titanic battle upon the result of which the honour of the state and the hopes of the criminal depend. It is not often that two months are spent on a trial and hundreds of thousands of dollars; but it is not often that society is involved in scandal and that the resources of a rich family are tapped in protection of an imperilled degenerate.

So far from the scene of trial, one can only judge of the man by what is said of him. But his actions, his letters, his tendency to become eccentric all indicate that Thaw is not an ordinary individual. Jerome calls him a paranoic. Others would call him an imbecile. Humanity generally sympathizes with a criminal, and if he is mentally deficient the place for him is a public institution where he will be free from the brainstorms that are so destructive. The poor wife knows him better than any one, and she has had at different times to hurry to his side lest he do some "terrible thing." Which suggests that he is given to violent outbreaks, and that the alienists are right in concluding that he is not safe to run at large.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier's presence must be magnetic and mollifying when the opposition members plead for it. The commons will be hurried to a close so that the premier and his colleagues may go to England.

SCHOOL BOARD IN TRAVAIL.
The board of education has passed its budget, after a long night's session and a wearisome debate. The proposal was to reduce the estimate on the side of the public schools, by at least $200, in view of the tightened position of the city financially. But the majority were firm on the estimate, and the budget for this department of education was adopted with a reduction of only $200. The public schools are, however, not extensively managed. This will appear by the report of the minister of education, which gives the information about the province and according to which the cost per pupil stands about the lowest, if not the lowest, in Ontario, whether the estimate be made according to enrolled or average attendance.

The Collegiate Institute's estimates come in for a closer examination, because as one school, the chief of the system, it commanded more attention. Its cost has been variously referred to, but it was made apparent by the records of the province that it stands in favourable comparison with any similar institution in Ontario. Some economies were suggested, some being in connection with the equipment—some saving was suggested in connection with the management of the public schools—and it is expected that they will be effected.

It seems that the technical department has not developed as it was expected to do. While the number of technical students is decreasing in place of increasing the department is made use of to a greater extent than formerly by the regular students, and this has entailed an expense in equipment which has not been met by the ordinary fee. For this reason, and in order that the demands on the council might be limited, it was moved that the fees be readjusted. This provided for a loan discussion, and as a result of it there was a compromise and the amount to be collected in fees this year will be $5,200 in place of $4,700 as estimated.

The domestic science estimate of $900 was attacked. A motion was made that no new expense be incurred in connection with the schools for the present, and it was defeated by one vote. The finance committee of the council may see in this a division of opinion which may influence it in its proceedings. Or it may follow the example of the board of control in Toronto, and summon before it the finance committee of the board to explain its budget.

The net result of the night's work was the decision to demand $38,325 from the council—$29,365 in behalf of public school, $8,910 in behalf of high school, and $900 for domestic science. Had a furniture item of $300 (as urged) been dropped, and the item of $900 for domestic science, the further reduction would have been $1,200.

EDITORIAL NOTES.
Old age pensions are still talked of. It is a popular theme with some people, who like to draw money much better than to pay it.
It is all very well for some trustees to say they are not afraid of public opinion. But if they had to raise the taxes would they be quite willing to do it?
The London Morning Post refers to Mr. Bourassa as "a plagiarist of the late Honore Mercier." Mr. Bourassa may, or may not, be tickled with this sort of criticism.

The land jobbing of some members of parliament was a bad leak, but abuse of the insurance commissioners does not abate the scandal. They simply recorded facts.
The insanity plea does not cut any swath in England. In connection with a murder trial the judge would not let it be discussed, saying that it did not affect the issue.
The board of education essayed to be economical last evening. It pared down some items of expenditure, but it left the council still to do the worrying about the taxes.

The Ross rifle is not the only one which burst or gave the user of it a scare. The Lee-Enfield and Metford have proved deficient in certain circumstances. This does not say that the Ross rifle cannot be improved.

Lord Rosebery is disturbed over the Irish home rule measure. He does not expect the government measure to go too far, but he does not like the species meanwhile of some members of parliament. He had better wait until the bill comes down before he passes upon it.

The Mail and Empire says of the G. T.P. between Winnipeg and the Pacific: "For seventy-five per cent. of the cost of that line we provide the money." We do not provide a dollar of it. We simply guarantee the interest on a portion of the bonds, and we hold the road as security.

Mr. Tolmie, who is a liberal, too, is now moving in parliament to have the members' sessional indemnity reduced to $1,500. There is not much chance of the subject being debated this session, which will be temporarily good for Mr. Tolmie's personal comfort. No member can favor the reduction and be really popular with his fellows.

Mrs. Ward Draws A Line.
New York Tribune.
Woman suffrage is dead for the present session unless the government presses its own measure for larger facilities in local elections. Closure was necessary for carrying Mr. Dickinson's bill to a second reading, and as it was not moved from the front bench the speaker would not take the responsibility of forcing its passage when there was a powerful minority. The most damaging blow received by the suffragists comes from a woman. Mrs. Humphrey Ward's letter in the Times concedes the participation of women in every department of local government, but draws the line at the parliamentary franchise on the ground that their work in the world differs from men's work, and that they ought not to be armed with political power when they cannot face responsibility for action. This letter is more effective than cordons of mounted police in restricting the energies of the suffragists.
