How's your Roof?

Is it Lightning-proof, Fire-proof, Water-proof?

If not, you should learn all about our "Safe Lock" Galvanized Steel Shingles. They are proof against every element. The lock, on all four sides, makes it impossible for rain or snow to back up under the shingles and rust the nail holes and saw edges. This feature has been imitated, but is found in its perfection only in

Our "Safe Lock" Shingles.

Don't use wood shingles. Nowadays, they are expensive and very inferior. They catch deposits of dust and dirt, which soon rot the shingles. Then the roof begins to leak. Patch all you like, you can't keep ahead of the leaks. There's no economy in a wooden roof.

Users everywhere are delighted with "Safe Lock" Shingles. Talk to them about the roofing question. We'll send you names of users in your own vicinity, if you drop us a card.

SEPARATE WAIST IS NO LONGER FASHIONABLE.

Every Smart Gown Must Be Finished With Skirt and Waist to Match—Something About the Blouse.

New York, April 13.—From the very best authorities come the news that the separate waist is no longer fashionable; that every smart gown must be finished with a waist and skirt to match, and yet again is fashion proved to be wrong in so far as that never were there so many models for separate waists as there are this season, and these can be worn with any kind of suit—the tailor made, the more elaborate evening, and even the silk skirt.

The lingerie blouses are exquisite. If possible more exquisite than last year, more elaborate and executed by attractive while the embroidery is of the finest. These once again have come into fashion the boned and fitted waists of silk and lace. In fact, there does not seem to be any material that cannot be combined with one or two others, while the variety of colors is endless.

Just now the blouse of the coming season and the blouse of the past season jostle each other in the shops. The southern season has fogged the former into prominence, and the annual spring sales have lowered the prices of the latter and brought them forward in the shops of bargains.

After all, the blouse of the summer and of the winter is much alike nowadays, when many women wear cozy blouses of lingerie stuff and lace and embroidery the year round, but it is not the lingerie blouse that is figured among the marked down goods. It, if attractive enough, will stand chance of sale even after spring and the host of silk blouses and chiffon and mousseline made for accompaniments to winter coat and skirt costumes, or for house wear with light skirts, are being included in the sales and one may find excellent bargains among them.

The silk blouses or waists that are again in style are very often as intricate as though they were intended for a waist to match a skirt. A most attractive model was made of plain and figured silk both. This was trimmed with heavy lace. The waists were large, full puffs that extend only to the elbow. There is a high draped belt, with a long buckle in front, and the collar is made of folded lace and is finished in front with a row of the same material. A dainty touch is given by the plain tulle which fastens the lace tie at the throat with a buckle to match that at the bodice belt. The soft finished tulle waists are made on the most elaborate models this spring, and when not trimmed with lace they are most lavishly embroidered.

Lace and guipure blouses, although the windows are full of them, seem less necessary to the wardrobe than was the case last year. The blouse that is correct to-day is really a part of the gown, and is so covered by some form of drapery as to show little except guipure and underleaves. In many cases it is decorated with the trimming of the gown. To be worn with the morning coat the skirt suit and it would seem that the coat, and skirt suit is to be worn only in the morning—are some attractive shirts of striped batiste, lavishly trimmed in lace or hand embroidery and silk mousseline have been the most popular materials; their fragile texture being often offset by trimming of heavy lace or embroideries to give them body.

A provision in the accessory world that is pretty well assumed takes the form of tulle arranged in ribbon, lace; but lace net chiffon, and into a belt proper, while others, again, display a horizontal line above the waist, which is continued below the arms.

Any number of novelties will be introduced during the spring. Little white waistcoats buttoned just inside the tailor-made coats, will be worn. This permits those who appreciate variety to make frequent change in their costumes at small expense. Some blouses show facings and insertion of broad silk, and this combination of materials will probably take the place of velvet and cloth mixtures so much worn during the winter.

There are, too, many models—simple yet still admirable. One little hand-some blouse gives an impression of extreme delicacy, yet is of the most superbly decorative design, a very sheer lustrous white silk of the medium type, with low round neck, which is surrounded by a line of lace heading, through which a white silk ribbon is drawn. The shallow yoke is made of fine lace, the shoulder sleeves is finished with lace and a line of the heading, interlaced by ribbon, the underleaves formed of the same lace as the yoke.

Blouses in net, chiffon, cloth and silk are offered in the popular groves, greens, browns, etc., and are ornamented with embroideries and other trimmings in self color, a ravishing note of cream or white being used next to the face and as a flush to the elbow or three-quarter sleeve.

A new feature of the separate blouse is the epaulettes over the shoulder and shaped over the sleeve. Slashed and silver brocade, are lined with the softest and finest chiffon, and lace and net are trimmed in the Caroline way, and made open from the shoulder.

One of the season's favorites is the embroidered dress goods. There are pongees that are embroidered in self color and which are as smart as they can be. In this list can be mentioned a pongee of that shade of brown, known as old apricot. This is nothing like the apricot to which we have been accustomed for seasons. It is a very pale brown, it is soft, bright and some material as the dress they acquired in the latest fad. To each company are the latest fad. To each dress one's cloak, one undergarment, one pair of shoes is the theory and practice will be added that of the possession of a stripped muslin to harmonize with the patterns on dresses.

A pretty and serviceable petticoat can be made of plain white cambric with plenty of frills at the hem of inch-wide border of colors. This frilling can be bought ready made, but is much enhanced in appearance if it is edged in turn, with narrow white Valenciennes.

Those who do not care for opaque striped materials—silks and broads as contrasted with chiffons, voiles and so on—and yet are weary of transparency rays, should use striped silks as a foundation, and then veil them with plain tulle, laces, and nets.

Brocade white silk petticoats with wide lace flounces are replacing those of tulle and are certainly much more serviceable. Japanese and pongee petticoats with hemstitched or embroidered flounces will be worn under main and lawn frocks.

This is a season of novelties, and the term can be applied to the new frock which have a surface that resembles crepe yet which are really fondled in texture and coloring.

Passmentries used so much now are so fine and much like colored lace that it is difficult to tell them apart. Ornamentation of this sort must be the exact shade of the gown. There is great scope for originality in a gown with this trimming, for the arrangement of the passmenterie may be varied.

Judging from the models the tailors have to show, grey and white striped wool is to be a preferred material. Every smart tailor has it, but as a rule he controls but the pattern, so it may not become too common. One

FASHION'S FORM.

Street Dress of Accordion-Plaited Material.

Accordion plaiting is again in favor, especially in frocks for young girls and the model here depicted is particularly effective in design. Brown, soft-finish surah was used for the original frock, the trimming consisting of bands of peau de soie to match, outlined with very narrow brown silk cord, and fastened with brown and gilt buttons. The deep vest had a band of heavy crepe lace outlining the little chemise of tucked batiste and lace insertion.

Scriptural Courtship.

Kansas City Journal.

If this story had come from Topoka, we should have been more readily inclined to believe it, because Topoka is familiar to all things biblical is proverbial. But it is a good story, even if it isn't its first appearance on earth, and it is told thus by the Jewell county Monitor:

A young gentleman at church conceived a most sudden and violent passion for a young lady in the next pew, and felt desirous of entering into a courtship on the spot, but the place not suiting a formal declaration the exigency suggested the following plan:

He politely handed his fair neighbor a Bible open with a pin stuck in the following text, second epistle of John, verse 5: "And now I beseech thee, lady, not as though I wrote a new commandment unto thee, but that which we had from the beginning, that we love one another." She returned it with the following, second chapter of Ruth, verse 10: "Then she fell on her face and bowed herself to the ground and said unto him, Why have I found favor in thy eyes that thou shouldst take notice of me, seeing I am a stranger to you?" He returned the book pointing to verse 12 of the third chapter of John: "Having many things to write unto you, but I trust to come unto you and speak face to face." From the above interview the marriage took place the following week.

Pensions For The Aged.

The Census.

Germany has expended $13,500,000 for age pensions, to say nothing of $555,700,000 for sickness, and $232,750,000 for accident. It is strange that this matter has not attracted more attention in an advanced country like the United States, which pays more than $142,000,000 a year to army and navy pensions, and has spent $6,264,130,257 in that way since 1861. The census figures show that in 1900 there were 3,660,498 persons of 65 or more years in the United States. This is 10 per cent. of the whole population. Of these, 600,926 were 70 to 74 years; 360,696, 75 to 79 years; 182,304, 80 to 84 years; 66,389, 85 to 89 years; 15,636, 90 to 94 years; 4,838, 95 to 99 years, and 2,088, a hundred years and over. Among the 3,660,488 persons of 65 years and more, there were 1,944,051 married men and 521,220 married women, 410,565 widowers, 905,139 widows, 89,152 bachelors and 90,858 spinsters.

Beware Of Lumbago.

Any pain in the back is commonly called lumbago whether it be a steady ache, a sharp pain, a sudden spasm, or recurring ache on soreness. No matter what form the trouble takes be prompt to use an effective remedy.

There is none better than Smith's White Linctament. Whether the attack is due to congestion of the kidneys or of the external muscles, this remedy will cure. Big bottles, 25c., at Wadsworth's drug store.

Better Fitted For Scaffold.

Youth's Complaint.

The village carpenter had given so generously of his services and sound advice toward rebuilding the little memorial chapel that when it was completed he should be asked to speak after the luncheon which was to follow the dedication exercises.

The day and the carpenter's turn came duly.

"Ladies and gentlemen—dear friends—" he began, his good, brown face very red, indeed. "I am a good chisel before fitted for the scaffold than for public speaking."

Then he resumed what he had said, and sat down amid roars of laughter.

EARTH'S TALLEST WOMAN.

ARRIVES IN LONDON.

The Tyrolean giantess, Marie Fassmauer, arrived in London last week and was greeted by a large crowd at the railway station. This peasant woman, eight feet in height, smiles pleasantly enough at the surprise that her appearance excites, and her young sister—a handsome girl of normal height—seems positively delighted to find herself "walking on" with the tallest woman in Europe. Marie Fassmauer attained her present stature sixteen years ago, when she was only 12 years of age, and only quite recently ceased working with her brothers and sisters on the farm at home to take up the more profitable work of a music hall "star."
