Most people know that if they have been sick they need Scott's Emulsion to bring back health and strength.

But the strongest point about Scott's Emulsion is that you don't have to be sick to get results from it.

It keeps up the athlete's strength, puts fat on thin people, makes a fretful baby happy, brings color to a pale girl's cheeks, and prevents coughs, colds and consumption.

Food in concentrated form for sick and well, young and old, rich and poor.

And it contains no drugs and no alcohol.

SOME OF THE NEWCOMERS NO GAIN TO CANADA AT ALL.

For Bettering Our Immigration Service - Fresh Arrivals Prefer Town to Country Life-Will Not Go On the Farms-Not Sufficien Attention Paid to Rural Districts.

In the current number of the Em was a delegate from the Canterbury Chamber of Commerce to the Congress of Chambers held in Montreal in 1903 makes some excellent suggestions for he bettering of our immigration se vice in the United Kingdom, He h evidently given careful study to the in our British immigran into any false estimates of the real gain to this country. The saying that in numbers there is strength may questioned when it is applied to some of the swarms that have come across the sea to recruit our population.

Are a Minus Quantity. Scores of thousands of these ne of a gain, a weakness rather than a strength to Canada. In the West where we want tillers of the soil, the acreage under cultivation has by no the population. But there has been a very striking increase in the nun of the Western interior provinces. A very large proportion of the imgrants from the Western States and from Northern Europe went on the soil, but the people from Southern Eu-rope and many from the United Kingdom preferred life in the towns and cities. If all were productively engaged there they would be a source wealth to the country only second in value to the farming class.

Many Undesirables. But in the towns of the West as well as those of the East the exceptionally good times we have enjoyed for years afford opportunities for hangers-on and parasites who contribute nothing to the country's output. Mr. Adams the population in our West, but he good anywhere. In the opinion of Mr. of this element being so large is that the rural districts of Britain are practically ignored by our immigration exerted through city offices.

Go to Rural Districts rities we get far the greater part of our immigrants. Mr. Adams vinced that the British rural distri would furnish us exactly the kind of useful immigrants we want if pursuits, and with savings amounting to from £100 to £500, abound in the United Kingdom, where so small a capital is of little help to them. With their training, their small accumulations of cash, and their wives, daughters, and sisters schooled in the household duties of farming. Englishmen of that type would be able to improve their lot immeasurably, and would be a real Cheap Farms In West, In our West, as Mr. Adams truly remarks, such an agriculturist would be able to buy a farm, already broken up, for a sum equal to about two size in England. But the British small farmer, who has nothing to look forward to but hard work and more onerous conditions, knows little or nothing about the grand opportunities of this country. Our immigration agents do not give him their attenthe thickly-settled towns. Mr. Adams advises that the Dominion Government establish agencies in the heart of each rural district. PERILS OF PIONEERING.

People loll in cushioned Pullmans or leisurely discuss their dessert in the diner as the train whirls them through the mountains, clattering across trestle-spanned gorges, now rushing along the edge of dizzy cliffs, where the roadbed, a narrow shelf carved in the rock, clings to the face

Those travelers in luxurious high speed trains, how many of them, as hey gaze indolently toward the towering snow peaks and the shadowy depths of the canyons, pause to think of the surveyors who mapped the road, and whose pioneer work has made it possible to travel de luxe through this grand scenery?

Pathfinders at Work To the average occupant of the par-lor car the thought of camping out in deep snow of the winter woods would be no less abhorrent than the idea of crawling for hours in the broiling sun along steep side-hills and over rock-slides bereft of shade, one's tongue akin to dry flannel, and water-well, perhaps half a mile sway. But these are commonplace events in the life of the railway surveyor.

Let the reader imagine that he has taken congo of civilization, and that scented, overalled crowd that constitutes a survey camp—fifty miles up the pack trail that winds off through the mountains from the very last jumping off place on the railway.

The "Get Up" Call. Early in the morning-horribly ear-just as a faint light—the first pale shafts of sunrise-is pushing up over and while yet the stars gleam in the frosty sky, above the black tops of A COOK. APPLY TO MRS. NICKLE, the pines, comes the reveille, produced by the cookie, (the chef's assistant) means "get up," and fifteen minutes later a similar, but greatly modified, alarm suffices to call the faithful to breakfast. During the progress of the meal the daylight gets a chance to expand, and soon after the last man has satisfied his hun-ger comes the call "All out."

Now all hands "hit the trail" for

Lunch finished and a pipe smoked and the afternoon grind commences If the survey has had easy ground agents, nearly all of whose effects are | that morning there are now perhaps grade must be followed, and, unlike the wagon road, there is no flexibility allowed. This rigid adherence to fixed line often places the surveyors in most unpleasant positions, and ledge or projecting rock on the face of a bluff that the transit man must place his mark. This means that he has to clamber there with his instrument, set up the tripods, squin through the telescope, and read angles-and probably all this careful adjustment whilst standing precari ously on a place that might be quite comfortable for a mountain goat.

When Footing Is Bad. If the footing in bad places appears precarious, the rope is used, and with the end of this the more agile of the men proceeds to surmount the ob- ternoon. > Return to Camp. The return to camp is a veritable triumphant progress as compared with the doleful sortie of the morning. True, it is down grade instead of uphill, but even that consideration hardly accounts for the rapidity with which the distance is covered, and the celerity and ease with which the obstructing logs are honord over.
