"SPOOK SUIT" FOR £1,000.

Illusionist Fails to Receive Prize London, May 9 .- The trial of what is known as the "£1,000 spook case is attracting much interest in London. The case grows out of the claim of I. N. Maskelyne, the London illu sionist, to £1,000 offered by the Rev. T. Colley, who calls himself Archdeacon Colley; for the reproduction by trick of certain effects the clergyman witnessed which he said, were due to the influence of spirits.

There seems to be no reasonable doubt that Mr. Maskelyne earned the money, but Mr. Colley would not pay and in the course of time Maskelyne in a pamphlet, said things that Colley didn't like, the statements includ ing an allegation that Colley had no right to the title of archdencon. Colley sued for libel, and Maskelyne made a counter suit for £1,000.

It looks as though Mr. Colley would lose both ways. He was under cross-examination a day and a half, and fared much as that Pittsburg alienist whom Mr. Jerome so unmercifully wigged at the beginning of the
