Gets the Most Heat Out of the Least Gas.

In designing the Oxford Gas Range the object was to get the greatest economy of fuel as well as the highest efficiency.

There is a considerable loss of gas from the burner on the ordinary range. When the pressure is too strong the gas is forced through the burner and wasted before it can be consumed. With reduced pressure you don't get enough

When on duty "protecting the boss," atop the big truck, he barks at policemen just as furiously as he would at a bearded man who entered his own home unintroduced. Furthermore, he means business: The truck, for the time being, is his country, with the "boss" the reigning sovereign, and he the loyal, vigilant army guarding all frontiers at once He was alert as usual, vesterday afternoon, when the truck was being driven through the Rue Royale, He saw a crowd of people and an endless stream of vehicles passing, and barked away at as many of them as he could count. He knew as little as he cared about street traffic regulations and when a policeman held up a baton and the truck came to a stop he did not understand that it was all as peaceful as The Hague intentions.
