The members of the local Orange odges and 'Prentice Boys, now in session in the city, attended divine service in St. Paul's church, at 7.30 o'clock last night. #### Pick Roses.

Roses, like many other flowers, should be freely picked. If, however it is desired to leave the flower on its bush rather than to bring it into the house, the bush should be watched so that when the leaves begin to fall from the rose that has been in bloom for some time it should be plucked at once. If you permit it to COAT lie on the twig, the plant will go to seed and many of the buds (particularly those near by) will fail to bloom.

PIN AND CANDLE AUCTIONS Odd Usage By Which Purchaser

Was Found The custom of letting a close of pasture land in the parish of Tatworth Dorset by "cardle auction" has just been celebrated, the last bidder before the light went out being adjudged the owner for the ensuing year. This is one of those curious old usages in which our forefathers tool apparently an especial delight, and variation of which was the pin-andcandle auction. A pin was thrust into a candle about an inch from the top, and bidding went on until the cantile was down to the pin, when the latter, of course, dropped into the candle-stick, and the last bidder was declared to be the purchaser,

In 1893, at Aldermaston, near Reading, a large estate changed hands after this peculiar fashion, and last year a ship was sold in Liverpool by the Racing auctions, again, used to be ery popular, and that the custom survives to the present day was proved a) few weeks back, when, at Bourne, in Lincolnshire, a piece of and was disposed of in this manner At each bid a boy was started to run to a certain public-liouse, and the successful bidder was he whose bid had not been challenged when the last boy Then, too, there are auctions which are dependent upon the blasts blown horns, upon the fight of birds, tain flowers. The Dutch auction is, course, no real "auction," the bid being decreased instead of increased.
