PEACE CONFERENCE.

Armaments May Come Up For Consideration.

The Hague, June 20.—The second session of the peace conference, which opened yesterday, yesterday afternoon, lasting only one hour. Committees were appointed on arbitration, land, war, maritime war and the Geneva convention.

To prevent friction at the outset the question of the limitation of armaments was ignored temporarily, though there is a well-defined plan to bring it up at the first favorable opportunity in the form of a proposition to reiterate the resolution adopted by the last conference, recommending that the governments again study the subject and to postpone consideration of the question until the next conference.

Reward For Murderers.

New York, June 20.—A reward of five thousand dollars is offered for the arrest and conviction of two men who murdered Julian T. Rosenheim, president of the London Needle company, in Pelham, who was struck down while he was walking in a secluded path in his own grounds.

Love For Widow Grew Cold.

St. Catharines, Ont., June 20.—Sir William Mulock reserved decision in an interesting case. Mrs. Royal, a Thorold widow, and Patrick McAndrews became engaged. Mrs. Royal owned her home, subject to a mortgage. McAndrews agreed to buy the house at the mortgage sale and fit it up for her as a wedding present. He carried out his arrangement, so far as the purchase and fitting up of the property was concerned, but his love grew cold for the widow, and he not only broke off the engagement, but handed the house over to his half brother. Mrs. Royal sued for possession.

Diamonds More Numerous.

Washington, June 20.—Consul Frank D. Hill, in a report on diamond mining from Amsterdam, estimated that the 1906 production from South Africa will be 1,500,000 carats greater than the production according to the last available returns, which were 3,000,000 carats. The total South African production annually, if Mr. Hill's figures are correct, the output of diamonds from South Africa will increase next year about fifty per cent.

Diamond mine owners are disturbed over whether the largely increased output that is expected will force down the price.

HE SHOT HER

A Pair Tried Hard To Suicide.

HIS WIFE SUCCEEDED

BUT HER HUSBAND LOST HIS NERVE.

He Shot the Woman—Did Not Know She Was Already Dead From the Effects of Inhaling Illuminating Gas.

New York, June 20.—Under pressure of a merciless examination, James Wardell, twenty-six years old, confessed to the authorities that in furtherance of a suicide pact he shot his wife, nineteen years old.

At the time of his confession Wardell did not know that an autopsy had disclosed that his wife was dead from illuminating gas when he fired the bullet into her brain.

Mrs. Wardell was found dead in her bed in West 25th street Monday night. Wardell was arrested and told the police that his wife had shot herself after the two had agreed to die together. His courage failed him when the time came for self-destruction.

While it was suspected that Wardell had shot his wife the autopsy developed that the woman had died from inhaling gas. Finally Wardell broke down and said:

"We fixed it up so that we would turn on the gas. If she got unconscious first and it looked like I couldn't die by the gas I was to shoot her and then shoot myself. If I got unconscious first and she got shot, she was to shoot me and kill herself. After a while she looked like she was all in. I was pretty weak, but I started for the door. But I figured that I would be a coward if I didn't carry out the agreement, so I turned back. I kissed her and her lips were cold. Then I took the gun and shot her in the head. After that I turned the gun on myself, and pulled the trigger, but the gun snapped three times, and then I lost my nerve."

MODERN VOLCAN.
Sir C. Palmer Built Three Miles of Warships.

London, June 20.—In the romance of industry the career of Sir Charles Palmer, M.P. for Jarrow, who has just died, takes a prominent place.

Sir Charles was born eighty-five years ago in Sibley, a very small place connected with the Durham coal-mining industry. As a coal master he found great difficulty in getting his coal shipped to London via a reasonable time. So he began building wooden sailing vessels at Jarrow, then a small, obscure village on the banks of the Tyne. To-day it is one of the great industrial centres of England, with a population of 40,000. Ten thousand of the population work in the yards controlled by the man who was known as the "Modern Vulcan."

When the marine engine was sprung on the shipbuilding world, young Palmer saw his opportunity. He at once turned his attention from wooden hulls to iron "tramp" steamers.

This beginning paved the way to more ambitious attempts, and soon afterwards Sir C. Palmer's firm built the Terrence, the largest steamer in the world, at the time of the Crimean war.

From that time the Jarrow shipyard has built scores of ships for the navy, as well as for the merchant service. It is estimated that if placed in a line the naval vessels alone turned out at Jarrow would stretch for three miles.

TO ENQUIRE

As To Need Of Inspection Of Convents.

A BILL INTRODUCED

REDMOND SAYS IT WILL BE GROSS INSULT

To Roman Catholics of Ireland and England—The Bill of the Prime Minister Will Likely Not Be Pressed—Lord Robert Cecil Gives Notice of a Motion.

London, June 20.—Despite an angry Irish protest the House of Commons, by a vote of 125 to 121, carried, yesterday, a motion permitting the introduction of a bill for the appointment of a commission to enquire into the need of inspection of monastic and conventual institutions. Mr. Redmond, the Irish leader, declared that this motion implied a gross offence and insult to Roman Catholics in Ireland and England. On learning the result of the division, Mr. Redmond said: "This puts an end to the liberal alliance anyhow."

Redmond has suddenly arisen as to whether the prime minister's resolution against the House of Lords will be discussed by the House of Commons on June 24th. It is stated Lord Robert Cecil has given notice of his intention to introduce a bill in the House of Lords to alter or reject a Commons. Under the rule of the latter house no motion can be proposed dealing with a subject already covered by a bill. Hence Lord Robert's bill, if pressed, would block the prime minister's.

TO ERADICATE HOBOES.
Railways Trying to Secure National Commission.

Chicago, Ill., June 20.—Harriman, Hill and other big railroad chiefs have entered into an agreement with the national conference of charities and corrections to secure a national commission of vagrancy. The plan is to clear all railroads and small towns of hobo hordes, or vagrants, and to force them to be sanitary, to earn their living or to disappear altogether from districts where the strong arm of the commission can reach them.

It is estimated that "hobos" cost the railroads annually $2,500,000. They infect the yards, set fire to cars, throw switches out of mail, assault and cause disastrous wrecks with appalling loss of life and property.

RIGHTS LIMITED.

Hon. A. E. Aylesworth Discusses Complaint From Kingston.

Toronto Globe.
Ottawa, June 19.—Hon. A. E. Aylesworth, minister of justice, in discussing the action of the warden of the Kingston penitentiary in refusing to allow the members of the Frontenac county grand jury to officially inspect the penitentiary, explained that the grand jury had no legal right to inspect the penitentiary. In common law the rights and duties of grand juries in respect to the inspection of public buildings was very vaguely defined, resting on custom rather than any specific instruction by statute.

According to long-established precedent grand juries were supposed to visit and report upon the management of county jails and other local public buildings, but no statute and no precedent gave them power to inspect provincial or federal institutions. The Frontenac county grand jury had no more right to officially visit and report upon the penitentiary than had the grand jury of any other county in Ontario, inasmuch as the penitentiary was not a local county institution.

Consequently the warden was justified in refusing to allow the grand jury any more privileges than those accorded to ordinary visitors. Mr. Aylesworth pointed out that last year when the grand jury, at Kingston, saw fit to make some severe strictures upon the manner in which the prisoners at the penitentiary were fed their comments were not justified by the facts of the case, and were subversive of discipline at the penitentiary. The present ruling had been adopted after careful consideration some years ago.

Moreover, he added, there was not the same need for inspection of penitentiaries and other federal and provincial institutions by grand juries as existed in case of local county institutions. The former were always under constant inspection by trained government inspectors, and inmates having grievances could easily bring them to the attention of the police or of the proper authorities for investigation.

GOVERNMENT CONTROLS.

There is No Possibility of Mob Rule.

Paris, June 20.—Official advice received by Premier Clemenceau, yesterday, give the number of casualties in yesterday's rioting at Narbonne, as five killed and eighty severely injured, scores sustaining minor injuries.

The injuries were all victims of the charges made by the cavalry to break down the barricades erected in the streets by the strikers. The government, to-day, has the upper hand and there is no present possibility of mob rule.

THREW A BOMB.

But Luckily It Did Not Go Off.

The cartridge fell among the benches which were crowded with deputies, but a disaster was averted for the fuse becoming detached in the flight of the missile. The man who threw the cartridge was arrested and is reported to be insane.
