Daily Whig.

A LESSON TO ONTARIO.

Mr. Hughes made short work of some bills which were laid before him as governor of New York. He vetoed them at once. For instance some of the cities had provisions in their charters that the municipality would not be liable for accidents if it did not have a notice or knowledge of defects in sidewalks and streets. Rochester had such a "protection" in its laws and the result was that no one could succeed in extracting damages from it.

The city had occasion to go to Albany for some remedial legislation, and then the unfair advantage it was taking of its people came to the front. The governor would have no more of it. The loaded legislation against the unfortunate citizen—had to go, and a Rochester paper, in commenting upon the case, admitted that Mr. Hughes was sound in his reasoning and advice.

Other cities aiming at similar "protection," let it go. They did not court a collision with the governor. Instead, it became apparent early in the year that there presided at Albany one who was farseeing, intellectual, and just, and as many as two hundred and fifty bills went into the waste paper basket rather than before him. The governor was not invited to give an opinion upon them.

In passing it may be remarked that the legislature of Ontario has something to learn from this man. The Municipal Union has been urging an amendment to the law, such as Rochester desired, and the governor vetoed it. If the principle is wrong in New York it cannot be right in Ontario.

LET THE EXPERTS ALONE.

The special commission which represented the National Civic Federation of the United States, and made a study of public ownership of certain utilities, emphasizes points upon which there can be no possible difference of opinion. There is success to the management under some conditions, but in any case there has to be (1) an expert direction of the business, (2) the exclusion of political influence and personal favoritism, and (3) a separation of the funds and a strict accounting of every department.

The time may come when the spirit which obtains in Germany may assert itself in Canada and the United States, and men will be trained for the public business, promoted on their merits, and commissioned to act always in the public interest. The Germans, in civic affairs, do not lose sight of the legislative functions which belong to the people's elect, but they do not interfere with the administration of affairs. This is entrusted to officials who are specially qualified for the duties that are assigned to them.

The public utility in this country is safe enough if its direction is not marred by incompetency and its finances are not mixed and muddled for political effect. Municipal government suffers in the fact that it is not continuous, that its policy is not fixed, and that its aims are not always free from partisan effects.

The New York Civic Commission has done well to go so deeply and so thoroughly into a subject of large public interest, and to make some points more than usually distinct. The local utilities, one is moved to add, are safest when in charge practically of experts who understand what is wanted and who will do what is right if they are left alone.

A VERY INSPIRING LIFE.

It is a coincidence that while the name of Rameses II is being attacked as that of a great fraud, while the ruins of temples and statues represented him as a great monarch, the name of Cromer is being exalted and honored in England for the time above every other name. Nor is the person they acclaim the subject of vanity and the eager seeker of distinction. On the contrary he is most modest in his demeanor, most unassuming in manner, and yet most worthy of the title a contemporary has bestowed, that of "the biggest living Englishman." The works of his life, his great achievements, have been brought into notice by the vote in parliament to him of a quarter of a million dollars, so placing him on the plane of the generals who have made themselves famous in war.

Cromer (as Evelyn Baring), a major in the army, with a penchant for finance, was sent to Egypt, in 1876, when his government, for $20,000,000, purchased a controlling interest in the Suez canal. He did not remain long at that time, but went to India, financier for its governor-general, Arabi, during his absence, undertook to clear the land of all Europeans, and there were many murders. England called upon the powers to help her to protect the Suez canal, but as all declined she undertook the task alone, and recalled Baring. From 1882 until now he has been the dominant force, the masterful mind, that has done so much to transform the land of the Pharaohs.

Under him and his associates, the cities of Egypt have become clean and sanitary; popular education, arts and sciences have been established; transportation, by steam and electricity, has replaced travel by dromedary and mule; the vast works at Assouan, costing millions and damming and distributing the waters of the Nile to the arid places, were undertaken and completed; land values were advanced 1,000 per cent; foreign capital was introduced and safely invested; the annual revenues were doubled; the canal shares held by England increased from twenty to one hundred and fifty millions; the army was reorganized and made efficient; and prosperity and peace were apparent on every hand.

All this is the result practically of one man's devotion to the public service. He puts on record this fact, and it should be an inspiration to every young man: "When I came to Egypt I made up my mind that the work was big enough for the life of one man, and that I would give my time to it and not ask promotion until I had made it a complete success." In 1884 it was supposed to be nearly done, but twenty-five years have passed since then, and Moustapha Fahmy Pasha, minister of the interior, admits that the time has not yet come when Egypt can be left to its own resources, Lord Cromer only retired from the Egyptian service because, as he writes: "After spending forty-nine years in it I am thoroughly worn out and really unable to support any longer the excessive strain which the work entailed."

To the man with such a record the mother country owes much more than it can express. The vote of more than a half, exercised in commerce, would have recognized in commerce, his retiring allowance. He was Egypt's saviour, and England's saviour, too, so far as her interests in Egypt were concerned.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The separate school pupils in Hamilton led in the entrance examinations. How is that? What does the record in Kingston indicate?

The Mail does not see any improvement in the stuffing of voters' lists at Trenton. But if this thing had been done by a grit official wouldn't there have been a row?

The British Medical Association believes that the public should bear the expense of caring for the sick. And the medical men cannot be accused of entertaining socialistic ideas.

The Harmsworths hammered the soap combine, in England, and put it out of business. But they have found it very expensive work. So far they have paid a million dollars in libel suits.

The libel suits of late have been going with the newspapers. This does not discourage men in the east, and La Nationalist and La Patrie will have the honor, if honor it is, of defending their opinions in the courts.

A contemporary says that the liberals have always been against a free franchise. They have, eh? Who clipped or emaciated the manhood suffrage act at the last session of the legislature? Ask Mr. Foy or Mr. Whitney?

THE ANNUAL CRUISE OF THE L. Y. R. A.

The Canada Cup Races—The C. A. A. U. Will Continue to Perform the Good Work it Has Been Doing.

The Adelaide crew in the Canada cup races will consist of Skipper Aemilius Jarvis, James McMurray and Charles Lowndes, and Daniel Parker, and four others, professional, with young William Jarvis, son of Mr. Jarvis, as spare man. The match will be the best three in five, and will be sailed on consecutive days, as follows, though only three may be necessary: Saturday, August 10th, twenty-one miles, triangular course; Monday, August 12th, eighteen miles, to windward, and return; Tuesday, August 13th, twenty-one miles, triangular; Wednesday, August 14th, eighteen miles, to windward and return; Thursday, August 15th, twenty-one miles, triangle. There is a time limit of five hours. The Adelaide left today for Charlotte, under a light rig, and a convoy of R.Y.C. boats.

A Good Shot.

Ontario Journal.

If everyone could do as well with the Ross rifle as Sir Charles Ross himself does, we fancy some criticism would be silenced. He put on forty-one out of a possible fifty at nine hundred yards at Rockville the other day. That is going some, and the rifle didn't hurt him a bit.

Some One In Error.

Hamilton Times.

Here's Hon. Mr. Monteith protesting that the dominion government's policy does not permit Ontario to get enough immigrants. And a few days ago his worship the mayor was going to descend on Ottawa and demand that they be prevented from coming to Ontario, or at least this part of the province!

A Touch Of Socialism.

Montreal Gazette.

The Ontario government collected as legacy duty from Senator Fulford's estate the sum of $35,000. This sum is second only to the amount collected from George Gooderham's estate, which is given as $519,000. These estates, during the lifetime of the men who created them, paid their due share of all the taxes to which they were liable. The death duties in operation come near the socialist's plan of taking away from the able man the fruits of his ability.

A New Legal Condition.

Toronto News.

By a bill passed at the last session of the New York state legislature a new law is made a misdemeanor punishable with a maximum fine of $250 or a maximum sentence of imprisonment for six months, or both. The law, which will take effect on September 1st, will reduce divorce actions by one-half, according to some of its supporters, as district attorneys can bring criminal prosecutions on the evidence brought out at divorce trials. On the other hand, private persons can cause prosecution by complaint to the authorities, and the law, it is feared, may foster blackmail.

Good For McIlroy.

Ottawa Journal.

"The true patriot," said Rev. W. A. McIlroy, of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, "will not raise the race cry with a view of promoting his own political ends," and added that though these are his temper which leads to occasional outbursts of anger such as are sometimes witnessed at the parliament building. His chief fault, however, in the eyes of certain conservative workers was that he was a liberal, and held an office with emoluments. It is no secret that he has been an object of pursuit ever since the change of government, and his quarrel with certain Breasted clergymen was a god-send to his opponents. It will be remembered that his successor was nominated even before he was dismissed, and it would be difficult to get better evidence of the temper of the patronage element of the conservative party in Brantford. Whatever Mr. Woodiyatt's faults may be, generally he was a satisfactory police magistrate, and if, on one or two questions, there was suspicion of personal bias, this is true of most men who sit in the high courts. If Mr. Woodiyatt had been a conservative he would still be police magistrate. Indeed, the complaints which led to his removal would hardly have received a moment's consideration by the government.

RAMSES II. GREAT FRAUD.

Vanity Led Him to Have Name Cut on Monuments.

London, Aug. 2.—Egyptologists claim they have discovered that Rameses II is a fraud and that he is not entitled to the appellation of "Great," which historians have given him. Recent explorations, it is said, have developed the fact that the many temples and monuments bearing his name, and therefore supposedly his work, existed about a thousand years before him. The explorers believe the king was vain and caused his name to be cut everywhere.

F. Prof. Naville, one of the official explorers of antiquities in Egypt, has this to say about Rameses: "The more we discover about Rameses the more convinced we are that he was a fraud. He was not great in any way, but his vanity was colossal. To satisfy this he conceived the notion of causing his name to be inscribed on every statue and monument that he planned. The plan succeeded only too well for many years. In consequence of it explorers decided that he must have been a great king. Now we are beginning to find him out."

Thomas L. Borrowman (the black fox man) of Wyoming, accompanied by his daughter, Miss Roberta, and his grandson, Master Lavergne Hasbrouck, visited his brother, William Borrowman, Middleville, from Friday to Monday, of last week. Mr. Borrowman sold a black fox skin, last spring in London, England, for £210.

A PRETTY MILKMAID

Thinks Peruna is a Wonderful Medicine.

MISS ANNIE HENDREN.

MISS ANNIE HENDREN, Rock Wash., writes: "I feel better than I have for four years. I have taken several bottles of Peruna and one bottle of Manna. I can now do all my work in house, milk the cows, take care of milk, and so forth. I think Peruna most wonderful medicine. I believe I would be in bed to-day had I not written to you for advice. Peruna has made me a well happy girl. I can never say too much for Peruna."

Not only women of rank and leisure praise Peruna, but the industrious and busy women engaged in honest toil are not without Dr. Hartman's famous renowned remedy.

The Doctor has prescribed it for thousands women every year and never fails to receive a multitude of letters like the above, thanking him for his advice, and especially for the dental benefits received from Peruna.
