Miser's Passion For Money Turned His Brain.

Berlin, Aug. 13.—One of the richest land owners in the vicinity of Darmstadt, Philip Harman Von Florentin, died here yesterday of such an extent that he starved his horses to death. He was charged with doing this and sent to prison. A medical inquiry has since proved that love of money and stinginess had turned his brain. The appeal court found him irresponsible and ordered his release. In the course of the investigation it was discovered that the lunatic's wife was also suffering from starvation, while his daughter died some time ago with suspicious symptoms of the same kind.

Wounded Woman Tells Police Assailant is Guilty of Two Murders.—Can Support Her Statement.

Chicago, Aug. 13.—An attempt to murder a woman with a knife in her hand at 317 Aberdeen street last evening and the arrest here alleged assailant may result in clearing two mysterious cases that have remained unsolved for many years.

Through the statement of Mrs. Mary Murray, thirty-five years old, who was found almost unconscious on the sidewalk of her home; it is thought possible that a prisoner held at Maxwell street station may be charged with the death of a woman in Italy and that of a man in New York. For five years Mrs. Murray has cared for the living rooms of her fellow tenant, James De Lara, who owns a grocery in another part of the building. Yesterday De Lara complained that she was not doing her work properly. An argument followed and De Lara, it is charged, attacked her with a knife. The woman was cut several times before she fled. She fainted on reaching the street and was found suffering from loss of blood by Policeman O'Connell.

After receiving the attention of a physician, Mrs. Murray made a statement to Lieut. Thomas Coughlin concerning her assailant. "De Lara is not his right name," Mrs. Murray told the police. "He is known in Italy as Carlos Mastelone, and is wanted there for the murder of a woman in 1890. He escaped from Italy, and came to New York under the name of Charles De Lara. There he murdered a man in Canal and Front street, and came to Chicago. While in New York he owned the Hotel Calebron, and catered to immigrants.

To support her statements, Mrs. Murray stated that De Lara, as he is known, had several scars on his body, received in his fight with the man who she said he murdered in New York. On examination the police said they found the scars, but De Lara explained their presence by saying they were relics of a fight he had when he was a boy. Denials of both accusations were made by De Lara.

The Italian consul and the New York police have taken up the investigation.

HORROR SIGHTS.

Arabs Killed One Another in Seeking Plunder.

London, Aug. 13.—The Casbah correspondent of the Daily Mail, describing a tour of the ruined town on Saturday, says:

In the back part of the town the French soldiers brought infinitely less death than the Arab bullets. Corpses were lying contorted on the streets. Many were stabbed and gashed with knives. Heads were battered with axes, and enormous bald heads blackened with powder showed where men died at short range by Arab weapons.

Many so killed were Arabs, huge limbed giants. The plunderers had fought among themselves for one another's plunder, and killed one another in a contest to escape along the narrow lanes when the French soldiers, hundreds of bodies were piled, a white clad Arab corpse dotted the whole plain.

When the fleet arrived and the heavy bombardment of the exterior of the city commenced there was a rush to escape, but the only exit into safety of the country was a single gate on the south side, where the warships dropped a rain of shells. Here, along the wall, hundreds of bodies were piled, a white clad Arab corpse dotted the whole plain.

More Arabs were killed here than in the whole interior of the town. They were lying among piles of goods of every description, bales of silly-cotton cloth, chests of tea, piles of sugar, every commodity. Many had been trampled to death in the struggle to reach the exit, which was like that at a theatre fire.

"Saturday two English ladies, at the request of the French authorities, because they were able to speak Arabic, paid visits to the houses of the leading Moorish families to enquire as to the safety of the Moorish ladies. It is not known what they learned into tears, raised their feet when they entered, and piteously implored protection.

"The English ladies returned pale and trembling with the horror of the stories they heard, which they were unable to repeat. Tales of bleeding ears, where Arabs, violating the sanctity of the women's quarters, had torn jewelry settings away, were the chief of the horrors they heard. I myself saw several young and beautiful dressed Moorish ladies killed by the same shrapnel as their assailants."

A Family Gathering.

A family gathering was held at the home of Joseph B. Abramson, Barrie street, on Sunday, August 11th. Those present were: Moss Abramson, father, from Boston; Mrs. Goldie Green, sister, from Boako, Maine; Mrs. Sarah Isenbud, a cousin from New York city; Miss Katie Abramson, from Boston; Mrs. Jennie Abramson, a sister-in-law from Boston; Mr. and Mrs. H. Abramson of this city; Alec Abramson and family, this city; Robert Abramson, a friend, city; Miss Edith Abramson, a cousin, city, and several others. After dinner, a driving party was formed, and a happy time spent in enjoying the scenery of the surrounding country.

Late Mrs. Sands.

Mrs. J. S. Sands, an old resident of Kingston, passed peacefully away, Tuesday morning, at her home, 259 Queen street. She was born in Armagh, Ireland, and came to Canada when twelve years of age, and had spent all of her life in this country in and around Kingston. She was survived by her husband, three daughters and one son, also three sisters. The daughters are Mrs. J. A. Madill, Kingston; Mrs. John Madill, Napanee; E. C. Mitchell, Kingston, and the son, J. A. Sands, Toronto. Mrs. Sands was a devoted member and attendant at Chalmers church, and only when taken ill did she relinquish her duty to the church. The funeral will take place Thursday afternoon, and will be of a private nature.

Smith-McClelland.

The couple were married under a floral arch, and the parlor was beautifully decorated with flowers.

Who Gets the Most Out of Life?

Not the wealthiest, not the most learned, nor the idler—but the man who has good health and works for his living. This truth is trite, but not trivial.

Every man should guard his health as his most valuable possession. The more so because health is easier to retain than regain.

Keep your grip on health by regular exercise, reasonable care in eating and requisite sleep. Take Beecham's Pills occasionally, to tone the stomach and keep the liver and bowels in good working order. And don't worry.
