It was in October, 1904, that a Comidea of a Christmas stamp, advanced by a postal official, Mr. Holboell. I do not know how much of it was original with him. There had been charity stamps before. They are used in Austria, and in people to buy them for stamp collections. And I know that they were considered in Germany, but for some reason, I believe, did not find favor. I think I can guess the reason. They didn't have the right spokesman. It remained for Hans Christian Andersen's countrymen to enlist Santa Claus. With him as their champion they don't have to ask anybody to buy the stamps in Denmark. Their only trouble is how to print enough. The people, the king, and the post office think of nothing else than how they can best help along the cause.

than how they can best help along the cause.

This was the upshot of the committee's work: that two million stamps were to be printed, and sold through the post offices at two oere cach (about half a cent) during the Christmas season—to be exact, from December 9 to January 6—the proceeds to be used in building a hospital for tubercular children, something like our Sea Breeze in New York. The government stipulated only that the stamps should be different in size and shape from the ordinary postage stamps, so as to be easily distinguishable from them. The Christmas stamp is not good for postage; every other way it is good—for the man who buys it and puts it on his letter; for the clerk who cancels it with a glad thought for the hittle waifs with every whack; for the postman who delivers the letter with a smile as broad and as good as Christmas itself. The proof that they like it is this: that they refused to a man to take anything for the ref their work. In the plan of the commit-tee there was provided a small profit of the oere on each sheet of fifty stamps, refused to a man to take anything for to oere on each sheet of fifty stamps,

The executive committee of four that was appointed to manage things had their hands full giving out stamps. They were not allowed to give out much else. Labor, office rent, furniture—everything outside of the actual printing of the stamps—was given to them. When it was all over, it was shown that 4,113,000 stamps had been sold and paid for—about two for every man, woman, and shild in the country.
