DR. WARD MERRILL DEAD.

Passed Away at Ottawa on Tuesday Night.

Very many in Kingston will learn with sincere regret of the death of Dr. Ward Merrill, who passed to rest in Ottawa on Tuesday night, after a brief illness of spinal meningitis. Dr. Merrill was intimately known here, having been at Queen's University for eight years. He graduated in arts in 1890, and in medicine in 1902. For some time past he practised his profession in Chatham, near Ottawa. While at Queen's, he was one of the university's stellar rugby and hockey players. At hockey he was best known for the greatest cover-point Queen's ever had. On the rugby team he played half back. Dr. Merrill is survived by his young wife.

THIRTY DAYS IN JAIL

WAS GIVEN WESLEY PARKS BY JUDGE PRICE.

The Prisoner Assaulted Peter Boomhauer in Kennebec—Two Young Men Charged With Theft Given Their Liberty.

Wesley Parks, Kennebec, appeared before Judge Price in chambers, Wednesday morning, charged with assaulting Peter Boomhauer on August 10th. The fight arose over the cutting of some hay in a marsh, or heaver meadow, thought to be common property. On the day in question Parks and a man named Howard were cutting hay when Boomhauer and his son drove up and ordered them off the premises. Parks was armed with a scythe and the complainant used a fork in the scarp and both showed evidence of the fray. Boomhauer was badly cut in the left wrist, and the prisoner had a tap over the head.

HETTY GREEN TALKS

SUMMER GIRL AND HER LITTLE VANITIES FOOLISH

Admits That She Was Gay Once—Wore as Many Trimmings As a Christmas Tree; Now She Detests 'Em.

New York, Sept. 3.—"Young girls of to-day are too extravagant. They think too much about clothes and they don't have enough to do. If they had some useful work to occupy their thoughts they would not run to such extravagances."

So spoke Mrs. Hetty Green, the world's greatest woman financier, at her lecture in the Chemical National bank she watched the tide of girls, young and old, in summer finery, turning toward Brooklyn bridge and Goney Island.

"I speak from experience," she added. "Perhaps you don't know it, but I was quite a belle when I was young. But I outgrew all that sort of thing. These rainbow silks and metal fingers are not to my taste. I used to have these things. I used to have more fixings and trimmings on me than there is on a Christmas tree. I have more sense now."

She tugged restlessly at the strings which, in a costly, latest sort of way were holding her tiny bonnet on her head. She spoke in a hoarse, almost inaudible voice and the most careful concentration was necessary in following her remarks. In one hand she held a much worn, small black bag. With the other she was constantly doing something, tugging at her caps, pulling or rolling her bonnet strings or emphasizing her remarks by jerking the lapel of my coat.

"No, I don't like society, and I seldom go out. Last season I went to one reception given in my honor. One reason why I'm so tired to-day that I can hardly talk to you is that my daughter Sylvia is going to visit the principal club with her mother's consent, but not her blessing."

"Society hasn't enough to do to keep it out of mischief. Those so-called fashionable women spend all their time these days at bridge and smoking cigarettes and drinking weak tea and strong whiskey. Every one of them ought to be down here working, and they would be better off."

Her manner changed to an odd combination of indignation and humor. "The airs some of these people put on amuse me. Before they got their money some of them made pants for their children and some of their husbands' old trousers and now they drive about in their own carriages and hold their noses up in the air. They do not know how to use their money yet. They are not accustomed to it. We had money in our family for four generations. O, they can't teach me anything about that."

She paused in her reminiscences to laugh until tears came to her eyes, and then she added grimly: "But Hetty is living yet."

To describe the real Hetty Green is a difficult task. To describe her clothes and her personal appearance, or rather her dress, separately, is to create two distinct personages, and only an alchemist could amalgamate the two personages in a single description. But even a mere man recognizes the fact that the clothes and the woman are somehow a part of each other in Hetty Green's case.

AT THE POLICE COURT.

Merchant Fined For Violating By-Law.

"I will never take another drink." This is an old, old story—one that is told in nearly every police court from day to day, and when Alfred McKenty, an old timer, fell back on it in the police court this morning he did not get any sympathy from magistrate Farrell. He would not deny that he was intoxicated, but pleaded very hard for another chance.

"You were given a chance the last time you were here," said Magistrate, as he imposed a fine of $2 and costs.

Constable Thomas Mullinger had Isaac Zacks, a Princess street merchant, summoned for violating one of the city by-laws, in having allowed a packing case to remain on the sidewalk in front of his store all one day. The accused entered a plea of "not guilty," and Constable Mullinger was called to tell his story.

The officer said that on Saturday night, while on the Princess street beat a citizen called his attention to the box which was in front of Mr. Zack's store. This was about five minutes to eleven o'clock, but when he came back to the store a few minutes afterwards the box was still on the wall.

The magistrate told Zacks that he should not violate the law. "I did not know that was the law," he pleaded.

"I cannot help that," replied the court, "a man in your business should know about these things."

In reply to a question from the magistrate Zacks said that he had lived in Kingston for eleven years and a half.

"And don't you read the daily papers," queried the court.

"Sometimes I do."

Magistrate Farrell said that only two weeks ago a number of merchants had been fined for violating the by-law.

Zacks said that if the policeman had told him to take the box off the street he would have gladly complied with the request.

The penalty was $2 and costs.

One hundred people left Kingston to-day on the farm laborers' excursion to the west. The excursionists left on the Kingston & Pembroke train at 12:10 o'clock noon.
