PRISONS IN CHINA

FEARFUL STATE OF CRIMINALS CONFINED.

Some From Cruelty Become in Appearance As Wild As Beasts of the Forest—Punishment For Purposes of Extortion, That Kills Many.

The first thing which impresses the European visitor to the Chinese prison is the absolute stony character of the structure itself. If one gets permission to visit the prisoners in Canton, and shoals of globe trotters do wend their way thither after they have seen the prison receiving ground, it will be found to be a ramshackle building of no pretense whatsoever.

The question will be asked, "By what means are the prisoners held in safety if the structures in which they are incarcerated are so flimsy and insecure?" The answer, says the East of Asia Magazine, is brief. Without exception the prisoners are fettered. Many have chains on the legs only. These are the less dangerous and have been guilty of the less important crimes. Others, in addition, have fetters on their wrists which make it impossible for them to escape.

Lastly, a few prisoners were not only manacled on the ankles, but wore a chain around their necks, and the ends of which was attached a block of granite. The prisoner would walk from place to place within the courtyard, but he could move beyond the length of his chain but a few feet. In the morning, carrying it in his shackled arms, drop it again where he wished to stop. In addition to the chains worn by day, all the male prisoners are further shackled at night. By means of two heavy beams, in which holes have been made for the ankles of the prisoners, a rude but effective method is discovered for detaining the prisoners in absolute security.

The prisoners, who during the day have been loitering in the courtyard, are in the evening taken to their cells, and made to lie side by side on a raised platform. The upper of the two beams is then raised, and each man is compelled to place his ankle in the hole made in the lower beam, and the upper beam is replaced, and the prisoners are held by the feet in these rude stocks. There is no possibility of escape. They are allowed to rest on their backs, and in an uncomfortable position they pass the hours.

In addition to this, however, special cruelties are perpetrated on certain prisoners who, for some reason or other, are exempted from capital punishment. Prisoners there are whose appearance becomes as wild as the beasts of the forest; who, with heavy canes on their shoulders, are made to march in a file through the prison for the term of their natural lives. I have seen them moving to and fro like caged hyenas in their dens at a menagerie. Their appearance is revolting.

Night and day, as far as I remember, both asleep and awake, this heavy burden rested on their shoulders, though some of them, in order to sleep, were unable to understand. On the other hand, in a prison I visited a few weeks ago I was informed that the canes were not at night. A crowd of the prisoners might sleep, but their unshaven heads, their unwashed faces, their clanking fetters, their hopeless looks, their diseased and their bebruted souls, can never be forgotten.

But, although under the recognized system of punishment Chinese prisoners must live a life which to us of the west would be unbearable, it would not be so to them if they were fairly treated and were saved from the exactions and barteries to which they are subjected at the hands of their rapacious keepers.

When a prisoner first goes into the wards the warders claim his clothes and his money, and he is left with the barest necessities to cover his nakedness. He is robbed of all his cash, as a matter of course. Those who are condemned are compelled, under a threat of the whip, to beg letters to their relatives requesting them to forward money.

If the unfortunate man hesitates to accede to this demand, the warders, assisted by some of the oldest prisoners, will take it upon themselves to search his twenty years' residence have accorded them certain privileges—take the man in hand during the night. The hands of the prisoners are fastened by a rope, and the other end of the rope is then passed through a ring which hangs from the roof of the ward.

Warders then point the unhappy wretch who is left hanging in mire by the hands. Should he attempt to cry out his mouth and throat are filled with ashes. When the breath has almost left his body and he is choking he is lowered, and under the terror of renewal of this torture he is eager to promise almost anything.

Many die under this ordeal. But as it is assumed among the mandarins that mortality must be high and as no official probing is ever dreamed of a general statement as to natural death is sufficient.

With Women

It's Looks First.

The average woman considers her looks first; her health afterwards. That's why we hear of so many cases of broken health and nervous prostration.

She wears furs and heavy garments on a cold afternoon; in the evening, with the thinnest gowns, she attends the theatre or party.

These fooleries irregularities in dress reap their own reward in suffering. It is only when colds that lead to pneumonia results that she gets frightened and seeks a remedy that restores her health.

Let her take Ferronzo!

It soon gives vigor to the body, quickly brings color to the cheeks, restores the nerves and strengthens the system.

Ferronzo sharpens the appetite, invigorates indigestion, adds weight, it gives the muscles tone and elasticity, that makes the ailing one feel young, strong and vigorous.

It restores the color, gives good color, high spirits and energy, you Ferronzo; it's the best nourishing tonic made. Sold everywhere in 25c. boxes.

Impossible to Acclimatize Them.

Say Foresters.

Brooklyn Eagle.

The United States foresters have discovered that trees in their habits are fixed and almost inflexible, and that it is impossible to acclimatize them. For centuries—indeed, as long as we have record—each species has kept in its beaten ways, insisting on the same average temperature and climate to grow where this could not be found; seeking and occupying certain kinds of soil, and demanding certain amounts of moisture and avoiding situations where these were wanting.

The latest authorities go so far as to declare that trees cannot be acclimatized; that is, that even the ingenuity and perseverance of man is unable to induce trees to change their habits far enough to adopt a country not closely like their native habitat. For a time the forester may use various devices to subvert a tried usage of artificial conditions, by which, so to speak, the tree is deluded into feeling at home. But as soon as the forester's care is withdrawn, each, and every, the tree is seized with homesickness and dies.

This fastidiousness in the habits of trees has its good and its bad sides. It absolutely limits the forester's choice of trees to grow in given regions. To seek to force growth in uncongenial conditions is entirely fruitless. But, on the other hand, there is practical certainty that trees, if they are planted in a soil where the average warmth and moisture of the growing season from year to year ranges between a certain degree, wherever that degree is, the Northern Hemisphere at least—the same average is found, the forester may plant beech or spruce, whether or not they be already there, with confidence.

There is a close relation between a tree's demands upon temperature and its demands upon soil. Given the proper growth, it will grow where the soil is unfriendly; and given the most congenial soil it will grow where the temperature is not ideal. The colder and wetter the soil, the better will it grow where the temperature is high.

There is a wide variation among trees as to the range of temperature which they endure. Some, such as the Douglas fir, the spruce, the pine, the cedar, grow over wide areas from north to south; others, such as Mexican white pine, eucalyptus, or redwood, are more narrowly confined. But it should not be forgotten that only geographical lines can be drawn for the distribution of any species. The right temperature conditions may be found outside of the geographical distribution at higher or lower altitudes. A southern species whose home is in the mountains may possess a second home in the northern latitudes of a level country, and a northern lowland species may arrive also on mountains in the south.

Frequently trees are distributed over a country not continuously, but in isolated groups, like black hemlock, which occurs in the Sierras, in the Cascades and at sea level in Alaska, but not in the lower country between. This is simply because the required temperature, though present in the northern part of a region, is found only in the higher altitudes as one goes farther and farther to the south.

The forester, following these broad first principles of silviculture, may work in harmony with nature and so achieve in every locality the best results with the lowest percentage of failure.

Tact In A Salesman.

Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"One of the most difficult things in our business," said the proprietor of one of the retail clothing stores, "is to get hold of salesmen with the requisite amount of tact. I believe more tact is required of salesmen in our line than almost any other."

"Not long ago we had a young salesman here who thought the only way to please a customer was to keep up a line of 'con' talk. One day a plain looking man came in to look at a button suit. Well, as he was putting the coat on the old fellow the salesman patted him on the shoulder and told him in a friendly way that he looked like a real college boy, all right."

"If there was anything that the customer didn't want to look like it was a college boy, and he left without buying a suit."

Another time the same salesman nearly queered a sale with a poor, consumptive, emaciated looking middle-aged man who appeared to have one leg in the grave and the other one dragging. If there was any subject that should have been avoided it was that of his state of health. But the man, who was blown in between those large stones by the fury of the storm he met in his knowledge that he remembered him from a previous visit to the store, said, "Well, how is your health these days?"

"It was enough to remember the man that he was probably there to buy his grave clothes."

Funny Stunt Of A Tornado.

White City (Kan.) Register.

Attending the story of every cyclone there is something of the nature of a freak to be related. During the small twister in the Highland district recently the almost incredible happened. But we must return to the fact that it was wrought by truthful men. Between two corners of a barn (Mr. Rutherford's barn, we believe) the feathers and perhaps the feet of a chicken protruded. The stories were intact and showed no signs of ever having been disturbed by man or the power of the elements. But the chicken was blown in between those large stones by the fury of the storm he met in his knowledge that he remembered him from a previous visit to the store, said, "Well, how is your health these days?"

"It was enough to remember the man that he was probably there to buy his grave clothes."

Easy Way To Get Iron.

Any person who is run down or who has impoverished blood needs iron. Most iron preparations consist of salts or are hard to assimilate. Wade's Iron Tonic Pills (Laxative) provides a remedy which is free from these objections. These pills agree with everybody. They give prompt benefit and permanent results. They are a great nerve strengthener and blood maker. In boxes 25c., at Wade's drug store. Money back if not satisfactory.

Something In A Name.

"This," said the editor of the unbarbered hair as he pulled a manuscript from his pocket, "is a fugitive poem."

"Why do you call it a fugitive poem?" asked his friend.

"Because," explained the versifier, "every time I hand it to an editor I have to run for my life."

HABITS OF TREES.

RIGHT HAND ON BOTH HANDS.

Four-Fifths of the Babies Said to Be Ambidextrous.

Many reasons have been advanced for the prevalence of right-handedness. It is by some said to be the result of nursing and infantile treatment, to be due to early practice in writing and drawing, to be the outcome of warfare, education, and heredity. The result of mechanical law and other remote causes, according to The Strand. Sir James Sawyer declares that the preferential use of the right hand is due to the fact that in primitive days man used the right hand for the purposes of offence, so as to keep clear of the vital spot as far as possible from the assault of an adversary. Recent experiments and observations, however, prove that single-handedness is merely the result of faulty or restricted education.

It is a curious instance of human contrivance that should one eye, ear, or one leg of a child show signs of disability the result of the parent would instantly seek the cause of and if possible remedy for that lamentable condition; yet for some inexplicable reason or prejudice the left hand of the average child is ruthlessly and deliberately neglected, until in mature years it is an undeveloped, useless, and almost unnecessary appendage.

Careful observations have shown that out of every hundred persons born into this world eight are congenitally ambidextrous—that is to say, they will instinctively reach for an object with either hand and only require proper instruction and training to develop both hands and arms to an equal degree of strength and skill.

Of the remaining 20, 17 will be right-handed, while the other three will show a natural bias toward the left hand. The cultivation of ambidexterity, therefore, offers no insuperable difficulties, and the economical, physiological, and psychological advantages are enormous.

It is said that the Japanese soldiers can use their weapons with equal skill either hand, for they are trained to be ambidextrous from childhood. At school they are taught to write and draw with both hands. In drawing and painting no supporting device whatever is used, the entire arm being employed.

The German educational authorities, too, are at present giving considerable attention to left hand work, especially in their technical schools. The students are taught to saw, plane, and hammer as well with the left hand as with the right, and the economical and industrial importance of ambidexterity is fully impressed upon the minds of young men and women.

Vancouver's Disgrace.

Toronto Saturday Night.

No man, black or white, yellow or brown, should be in peril of his life or in danger of losing his property in this white and civilized country. The jails at Vancouver show that before we were excluded from Canada but the Asiatic who is in should be in absolute security as to life and property—and being a foreigner here is more than a special obligation to protect him and pursue and punish any who assail him.

On this continent there is no danger so greatly to be feared as the tendency to mistake the masses of people to a yelling multitude in the streets to suspend constitutions, codes, laws, and subvert order for a few tumultuous hours, all this on the ground that the people rule and the people did it. It is not so. It is a ruinous fallacy. The yelling crowd, out of its senses, incapable of reflection—is not the people.

SEALED TENDERS

Addressed to the undersigned, and enclosed for him at Latchford, Ont., received at this office until October 10, 1907, inclusively. For construction of a dam across the Great River at Latchford, District of Northumberland, Ontario, tenders will be received to and specification to be seen at the office of J. G. Sing, Esq., Resident Engineer, Confederation Life Building, Toronto, Ontario, and at the Department of Public Works, Ottawa, Ontario. Tenders will not be considered until they are opened in public session with the actual signatures of the tenderers.

An accepted cheque on a chartered payable to the order of the Hon. the Minister of Public Works, for the sum of five hundred dollars ($500), must accompany each tender. The cheque will be forfeited if the tenderer declines the contract or if he fails to complete the work contracted for within the time specified in the notice of tender.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,
J. G. SING, Esq., Resident Engineer.

Department of Public Works,
Ottawa, September 14, 1907.

Newspapers will not be paid for advertisement in this notice of tender. Authority from the Department.
