ELECTION BEES ARE HUMMING.

Mr. Hearst, of New York, is about to be projected into another election, and one that will presently produce a president for the United States. The design of the Independent League, which was organized in several states, and principally in the divisions or territories where the Hearst papers supplied the inspiration, there was a suspicion that the aim of it was to exalt Mr. Hearst. His money was freely spent in the initial organization.

The New York mayoralty election was nearly a victory for Hearst. McClellan was declared elected, by a small majority, but under circumstances which robbed it of all glory. The attempts to prevent a scrutiny of the vote, attempts that are continued to this day, detracted from the honors of the office. The election for the governorship, later, was also a tribute to the democratic candidate. He lost somewhat by his methods and might have won out had he been opposed by some one else than Hughes. The present head of the state government is certainly a very superior man, and the only one of any account, from his party, to secure the endorsement of the people.

In these struggles Hearst proved himself to be a stronger man than he was supposed to be. Granted that he is but the echo, journalistically, of another and a better, that he benefited by the brilliant campaign of his associates, the fact remains that he developed in platform power, and in some places carried himself surprisingly. And yet is he the man for president? Will the prophecy of Arthur Brisbane, his editor, that he would eventually land in the White House and lead the national government, come true? Bryan, the democratic leader, is not rising in popularity. Roosevelt is pledged not to run again. Taft is not rallying to his support, the united strength of the republican party. Is this the hour, the opening, the one chance of the Independent?

The publisher of the North American is ambitious enough for anything. He will accept a nomination if it is tendered to him. He will probably, with all his defects, run as well as anyone outside of Roosevelt, and as the interest of a nation may yet force him to become a candidate.

CRITICISING THE CRITICS.

Charles G. Fraser, who signs himself the "Secretary of the Public School Department, Ontario Educational Association," has, after mature reflection, essayed to chastise Mr. Ellis, because he has dared to speak disrespectfully of the education department. Mr. Fraser has taken his time before expressing the great indignation which has risen within him. Mr. Ellis commenced his letters to the Toronto News on August 1st, and made the course progressive. In the Whig's opinion, he committed one serious mistake at the outset, in an article, which most of the promises made by the Whitney party while in opposition "had been kept with an unusual degree of fidelity," because, as his task developed, he had occasion to show that while a great deal in the way of reform had been undertaken very little had been effected. The argument in elaboration scarcely fitted in with the fulsome praise of the opening lines.

Mr. Fraser is not a match for Mr. Ellis. His defence of the government's policy is about what one would expect from a person who is either blinded to defects or so partisan in spirit that he cannot judge of the merits of the case. Mr. Ellis has discussed educational subjects in detail. Mr. Fraser should either do the same thing or leave the work to some one who has the qualification. The letter of the "Secretary of the Public School Department, Ontario Educational Association," in the Toronto News of September 21st, is not an answer to Mr. Ellis. It is a tirade of abuse, and on this account is of no value as a technical contribution.

The humor of the situation is afforded when Mr. Fraser names fourteen questions which the department has "attempted to solve." He uses this gratifying phrase advisedly. He may have attempted something, but it has not, as a matter of fact, accomplished very much, as Mr. Ellis avers. The university question was the work of a commission. The school book question, so far as it has been dealt with, bears the impress of a commission. But it is not settled far from it. The serious difficulties which it presents are crowding the department at the present moment. The minimum salary I was there ever a law which was attended with so much confusion? And the department is entitled to little credit concerning it. That law is going to be enforced said its author. But when the trustees in the land rose up in their might and boarded the department there was a sudden drop in the demands of authority, and a repeal of certain sections. This took place without consulting some inspectors who were still busy doing missionary work and exerting the influence, which an alert public opinion would have anticipated.

This one could go down in the list which Mr. Fraser submits and show that the education department has left things pretty much as they were and that the people who see great improvements are giving evidence of a most lively imagination. At any rate the cause of education is not to be helped by personalities. It is not sacred, and not free from criticism. The man who is now in the superintendent's office was formerly the keenest critic of the school system. One need not now go back to enquire whether the defects he saw when a teacher disappeared under his mastery touch when he became an inspector. His example being good it cannot be a sin for Mr. Ellis or any other man of ideas and experience to write as he feels, so long as he is reasonable, or has proper motives and is governed by exalted ideals. Mr. Ellis' style may not be perfect, but it is immeasurably superior to that of Mr. Fraser, the "Secretary of the Public School Department, Ontario Educational Association."

If an investigation takes place and it is difficult for the government to refuse one, it must be insisted upon that he be made to cover both parties—the liberal fund and the conservative fund. That will be the only means to satisfy public opinion.

Curry A Winner.
Montreal Gazette.

J. W. Curry, who is the liberal candidate for election to the Ontario legislature in East York, condemns the suggestion that the license law be commissioned. Such a proposition carried into effect would, he holds, be showing an unforgivable weakness on the part of those whom the people had placed in power, coupled with an inability to honestly perform their functions. There are yet some old-fashioned ideas entertained by men fit for public life, and Mr. Curry has some of them.

The mental attitude of Dr. Smith excites no wonder when his comments are read. Anything that he has to say only expresses his pitiable uncertainty with the subject. No further proof of his lack of common sense could be forthcoming than his designating the individualism of George as socialism.

Attitude of Japan.
Ottawa Citizen.

Japan is committed to the attitude that she will insist on her subjects having all the rights of subjects of a first class power. This means that they can go where they like and live as they please, so long as they strictly observe the laws of the country where they are living in. In the same manner they all other foreign subjects. There is the straight issue. What are Britain and the United States going to do about it? They, with Russia, are geographically the nearest first class power to Japan. And Russia has been linked. A first class power can make any immigration laws it sees fit, but they must apply equally to all the subjects of other first class powers. There is likely to be trouble. The United States of America, next to Russia, are the first to feel the overflow from over-nudated Japan. In view of the attitude of the Japanese government, they are the first that must have to answer the question whether Japan will be accorded the complete rights of a first-class power or not.

PHYSICIAN DENOUNCES ASCETICISM IN FOOD.

Goos For Vegetarianism—A Good Word For Mutton Chops—Address Has Already Started a Violent Controversy.

London, Sept. 21.—Sir James Crich-ton, Browne, who, in addition to other medical honors, possesses that of being a fellow of the Academy of Medicine, of New York, ran full tilt against a small host of fads, follies, and fallacies last week. Vegetarianism was one of the subjects on which he treated his laudable. What he called the fad of deprivation—the new cry that we are overloading our stomachs—was another.

"All fashionable food fads and follies of the hour are in the nature of deprivation," said this eminent physician in his presidential address to the Sanitary Inspectors' Association, holding its annual meeting at Llandudno. "At one time the tendency was to stuff, and every new kind of nutriment was hailed as a boon to humanity. Now the pendulum has swung to the opposite extreme. Aldermen are like lathes, citizens are like down for athletic sports; only duodecim portions are served at dinners; even light wines are looked at askance, while split soda waters are in vogue. On all sides the cry is, 'What do you do with it?'"

"So fierce in some quarters is the propaganda of dietetic asceticism that in dread of being suspected of gluttony, we can only indulge a semi-starvation in secret. It is curious that this craze should have come upon us and reached so high a pitch at a time when we have only just awakened fully to the ravages of semi-starvation in common and realized the truth that that one of the main causes of such physical and mental degeneracy as exists amongst us is bad and insufficient food."

Sir James pointed out that one very common cause of food fads and follies nowadays was directed to the specific object of getting women to look lady-like. Women must be tall, slim, and fragile, and the middle-aged were running the risk of acquiring the prematurely shrunk shanks of patachon. In one town lemons were largely consumed by factory girls, some girls eating five or six a day—often of rind and all—in the hope of emaciating and idealizing themselves.

Then the learned president denounced vegetarians. He was a firm believer, he said, in the virtues of the mutton chop, and would be glad to see sirloin beef regularly on the Sunday dinner table of every family in the land. To questions frequently put to him as to whether this or that article of food was wholesome, he would reply in a combination of Byron and Edgewood: "Take the gifts the gods provide thee. Nothing is common or unclean in itself, but it may be so over his excess. Nothing Byron ever wrote, says some critics, in the remark that 'beef would be plain food if only others are quarrelling as to whether Dryden or Shelley was meant.'

THE PRICE OF BEEF

Low Prices When Harvest is in.

A writer in The Brooklyn Evening Eagle, in an investigation into the cause of the late heavy 750 pounds, the retail price of beef today, of 1881 was $35.62, therefore, you could buy a carcass of than one-third larger than buy in 1907 for the same amount.

These figures are probably and they will not astonish one person why Mr. Bryan to scare the country in 1896 few severe agitation was several years previous to the farmers who raise cattle had making money. The price of the beef for a long time normally low. The western were not prosperous. They were ready to go in for splitting land in two, and permanently the gold standard.

When the business of the was saved by the ending of the gold standard in 1896, the price of all farm products advanced. Then came the boom, untempered by the history, and an influx of no million immigrants each year, farmers of the west became prosperous than they had before, and a large element of prosperity. The fact that the demand for beef exceeded the supply packing concerns did much larger profits than before, but the cattle raiser encountered.

We shall have the best price again when the country as comes to be prosperous and a long period of hard times. Anybody who has seen the industrial conditions that prevailed in 1894, including universal unemployment and thousands of men seeking work, should stop out from and make his preference of iron, steel and nearly every for about double the 1894 price should not feel also show advance?
