THE PRICE OF BEEF.

Low Prices When Hard Times Set In.

Hartford Times.

A writer in The Brooklyn Eagle summarizes an investigation of the beef trade by saying:

An average carcase of dressed beef weighs 750 pounds; the retail price of a carcase of beef to-day is $150; the retail price of a carcase of beef in 1894 was $95.62; therefore, in 1894 you could buy a carcase of beef more than one-third larger than you can buy in 1907 for the same amount of money.

These figures are probably accurate, and they will not astonish anybody. One reason why Mr. Bryan was able to scare the country in 1896 with his free silver agitation was that for several years previous the western farmers who raise cattle had not been making money. The price of beef "on the hoof" for a long time was abnormally low. The western farmers were not prosperous. That made them ready to go in for splitting the dollar in two, and permanently abolishing the gold standard.

When the business of the country was saved by the ending of the repudiation movement in 1896-1897, the price of all farm products began to advance. Then came the industrial boom, unexampled in the country's history, and an influx of more than a million immigrants each year. The farmers of the west became more prosperous than they had ever been before, and a large element in this prosperity was the fact that the demand for beef exceeded the supply. The big packing concerns did not make much larger profits than they made before, but the cattle raisers profited enormously.

We shall have the beef prices of 1894 again when the country as a whole ceases to be prosperous and a prolonged period of hard times sets in. Anybody who wants to restore the industrial conditions that prevailed in 1894, including universal low wages and thousands of men seeking for work, should step out from the ranks and make his preferences known. When iron, steel and nearly everything sells for about double the 1894 price, why should not beef also show a similar advance?

A MEAN ACT.

Man Took Son's Chickens to Sell For Liquor.

London, Ont., Sept. 26.—Frederick Dutton appeared in police court, charged with stealing his little boy's chickens and selling them in order to buy liquor. His wife laid the information, charging him with common theft. Magistrate Love characterized the act as one of the meanest that he had ever dealt with, and remanded the prisoner for a week.

CHALLENGE REFUSED

RACE OF SMALL YACHTS SOUGHT BY SIR THOMAS.

English Merchant's Proposition of Reduction From 90 Feet to 68 Declared Out of the Question.

New York, Sept. 26.—Sir Thomas Lipton's challenge for a contest for the America's cup in 1908 was declined last night by the New York Yacht Club.

Sir Thomas asked for a race for sloops under the sixty-eight-foot rating and the members of the club based their refusal to race on the general proposition that the America's cup represents a trophy for the speediest type of yacht that can be produced on a water line length of ninety feet or under, and that, therefore, any proposition to limit the size of the boats must be refused.

The members of the New York Yacht Club, at the meeting called to consider Sir Thomas' fourth challenge for a cup race voted unanimously to reject the challenge after Lewis Cass Ledyard, former commodore of the club, made a speech in which he described the deed of gift governing cup contests as drawn up by George L. Schuyler in 1887.

HAS REACHED QUEBEC.

The Collision of the Hurona and Mongolian.

Quebec, Sept. 26.—The steamer Hurona, in collision with the Mongolian, arrived in port this morning. She is anchored in the stream. Mr. Reford, the agent of the Thomson line, will reach here this afternoon. The Hurona will, afterwards, proceed to Montreal, but she may subsequently return to this port. The vessel has not a full cargo and it consists of iron, etc. The extent of the damage the Hurona received is not known yet. The vessel's stem is somewhat damaged. She had on board all the passengers of the Mongolian, who disembarked at Quebec this morning, all well.

The Mongolian arrived in port at 9.30 o'clock.

The collision occurred on Sunday night, in the vicinity of Point Amour. The Mongolian was struck on the port side forward. She is making water in the forepeak only, and her pumps are able to keep it under control. Her passengers, thirty-eight in number, were transferred to the Hurona as a precautionary measure. The Mongolian received the greater damage of the two vessels; as the water is only in the forepeak, it is reasonable to suppose that her cargo has suffered little, if any, damage. The vessel has also on board many head of cattle.

If the damage is not too expensive and she is not drawing too much water, the Mongolian will be sent to Montreal, as it would be difficult to find sufficient accommodation here for such a large cargo and so many cattle.

SENIOR SERIES BEST.

For the Limestones Thinks Secretary Hay.

There will be a special meeting of the Limestone Football Club at the Iroquois Hotel to-night, at 7.30, when every member is earnestly requested to be present. It will be fully decided whether to enter the junior, intermediate or senior series, and it will likely be the latter.

Charles Moxley heard from Secretary Hay of the O.R.F.U., this morning, and he said that the senior series would be the best. If a junior team is entered, home and home games will be played with Gananoque, and whoever wins this will have to wait until the western sections are finished. Again, if an intermediate team is entered, not a game will be played until the western sections are over, unless they play home and home games with Galt, and other far distant places, which from a financial standpoint is impossible. The only thing left is the senior series, and this offers every advantage. The group would be, Ottawa Athletic Club, Westmount and Limestones. This series would be a good money making one as it should draw large gates.

There is no reason why Kingston should not have a senior team again, and one that would win the laurels that have so often laid within our gates in years past. The citizens and players will take more interest in a senior team, and the men will work harder for it. It is to be hoped that a large turnout will be present to-night.

Want Better Terms.

Toronto, Sept. 26.—Deputations from various branches of the inland revenue service waited upon the civil service commission, this morning, when a general increase of thirty-three and one-third per cent. in salaries was asked, and also that superannuation be granted. The suggestion was also advanced that while under the present system political appointments to the service would be made, friction might be avoided by a consultation between those who have the patronage and the collector, who would have to deal with such officers after the appointments are made.

Woman's Sudden Death.

Cobourg, Ont., Sept. 26.—Taken suddenly ill in church on Sunday evening, Miss Minnie Munro died Tuesday afternoon in Dr. John R. Irwin's office, where she had been first carried. Death was due to appendicitis. Her illness was at first thought to be due to a severe attack of indigestion. The remains were forwarded to Seaforth for interment. Miss Munro had been employed in the woolen mills here and was about twenty years of age.

LAROSE PEOPLE LOST.

Judgment Given in the Court of Appeal.

Toronto, Sept. 26.—The celebrated mining case of the Larose Milling company against the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario railway commission, was decided in the court of appeal, this morning, the Larose people losing on every point. The plaintiffs appealed from judgment of Justice Mabee, dismissing with costs, an action brought before the railway commission, the Right-of-Way Mining company, and certain individuals for an injunction and other relief in respect to the mining rights on a three-acre strip of land in the Cobalt district. The question involved was the title to a portion of the land occupied by the Temiskaming railway and the minerals beneath the surface. Plaintiffs alleged that they had proper title and sought to enjoin the defendants, the Right-of-Way Mining company, from removing ore on the strip in question, the latter claiming title through the railway commission. The court of appeal unanimously dismissed the appeal, Justice Meredith remarking that plaintiffs had failed to prove that they ever had bought or paid for, or were ever entitled to the lands in question.

May Drop Sir Henry.

Montreal, Sept. 26.—It is reported in the inner circle of the Dominion Steel & Iron company, that, at their next annual meeting, Sir Henry M. Pellatt, Toronto, will be dropped from the list of directors, and that some other director more in harmony with the policy of the company, and less interested in the Dominion Coal company, will be elected to fill his place. This is the result of a disagreement that has existed between Sir Henry Pellatt and his brother directors of the steel company ever since the difficulties with the coal company came to an impasse.

SEWED ON HIS HEAD

DOCTOR SAVED LIFE OF DECAPITATED MAN.

Bernard Rush Was Badly Injured in Elevator Accident—Largest Muscles of Neck Snapped—Over Twenty Nerves, Muscles and Blood Vessels Had to Be Sutured.

New York, Sept. 26.—Three surgeons at St. Gregory's hospital had a hard struggle, yesterday, to save the life of a man who was almost beheaded by an elevator in a building at No. 213 Front street. The patient, Bernard Rush, while taking a load of fish from the first to the second floor, slipped and became wedged between the floor and the platform of the elevator. The elevator was stopped in time to save his head from being torn from the shoulders. At the hospital it was found that in addition to the large muscles of the neck being severed, several small arteries and veins were separated. The patient was conscious throughout the operation, which was performed without anaesthetics of any kind. Rush was powerless to move his head because the largest muscles of the neck were snapped in two.

The physicians worked over the patient for nearly three hours, sewing together blood vessels and various structures of the neck. The jugular vein and the windpipe were not seriously injured. The neck was cut from ear to ear as cleanly as though it was done by a razor.

According to the physicians, more than twenty-two blood vessels, nerves, muscles, veins and arteries had to be sutured. The operation was a tedious one, some of the vessels being so small that the finest catgut had to be used.

The physicians said that the only thing that saved the man's life was that the head was forced backward. If it had been thrown forward it would have broken the spinal cord and several of the vertebrae, causing certain death. The man is expected to recover.

Not A Safe Man To Wed.

Youth's Companion.

The notions in regard to courtship and marriage held by Tibbie, the young Scotch woman who presided over the Jameson kitchen were a never ending source of amusement to her mistress. "I've taken me mind off Archie MacLachlan, ma'am," Tibbie announced one day, referring to a young carpenter who had haunted her domain for some weeks. "He's no the man for me. I can see that weel."

"What has poor Archie done?" asked Mrs. Jameson, her heart filled with joy at the knowledge that she was not to lose her domestic treasure, as she had feared.

"It's what he hasna done, ma'am," responded Tibbie, briskly. "I put a few tests to him. I said, 'Archie, if ye had a wife, an' come home some day to find she'd gone gadding, what'd you do?' And he looked at me with that foolish smile o' his, an' said, he I'd put it to rights mysel'."

Again I tried him with churcheing. Said I, 'Archie, if ye had a wife that some Sawbeth morning would on ey' tell ye she was too tired to hide the thoughts o' sitting under the minister, what'd you do?' An' again he smiled foolish at me, an' said, I'd go an' listen for two.'

"And at last I tried him with the vanities o' this world. I said, Archie, if ye had a wife that would take some o' your hard earned money an' spend it for gay ribbons an' kickshaws to put on herself,' what'd you do?' An' he smiled broader than ever, an', says he, 'I'd take my pleasure lookin' at her wi' 'em on her.'

"So then I up an' told him he'd best be lookin' elsewhere for a wife.

"You'd be a fearful pleasant man to wed, I said to him, 'but sich easy-going ways wouldna train a lass like me.'

"The answer to every one o' the three questions should a' been, I'd take a stick to her, and you know it!'

"So, now we've parted, ma'am."

Pleasing Spectacle.

San Francisco Argonaut.

In the early days of Kansas, Judge Strang was district judge on the bench in Dodge City. Every time he was absent the lawyers of Dodge City would elect an old ex-confederate colonel, practicing law there, as judge pro tem. A stranger drifted into Dodge City and soon noticed that the old "rebel" was always chosen judge pro tem. He couldn't understand it. He asked an attorney how it came about. "Oh, we do it because we like to see the old sardine take the oath of allegiance to the United States," said the attorney.

The longest run is the Great Western's from Paddington to Plymouth, 225¾ miles, at a speed of 54.8 miles per hour, though the Midland miles per hour, though the Midland have one nearly as good from Leeds to St. Pancras, 106¼ miles, at 55.3 miles an hour.

Helped The Lad.

A lad, with a dinner pail, fell at noon, on the market square and spilled the contents, which he was carrying to his father. The boy was greatly distressed. Police Constable Arniel came to his aid, so did J. S. Henderson, who gave the constable a quarter to secure a refilling at Con. Millan's. The genial boniface heard the story and added a large section of meat, condiments and pastry, telling the lad to take a bite himself of the good things.

Applied Geometry.

A dispute at the Montreal morgue, to-day, over the identity of the remains of a man, was decided by the coroner sending an officer to a house to try the key found on the man's person. As it fitted the lock, it was proved that the remains were those of Louis W. Fallardeau.

Squeak Repression.

An unusual service is held each July, on St. Swithin's day, at the church of Old Weston, Huntingdonshire, England. On that noted day—famous for its supposed influence on the weather during the ensuing forty days, the floor of this village church is strewn with new-mown hay. This custom had an extraordinary origin. The villagers of Old Weston in old times had a propensity for buying boots in July, and for commencing to wear them on the day of the noted saint. Accordingly irritating noise was caused by squeaking and creaking boots when the people trooped in to service that day. The noise much excited a wealthy man who was rather eccentric. He, therefore, left in his will money to be spent each year in providing a quantity of new-mown hay to be spread over the floor of the church as a preventive of the noise caused by new boots. The bequest has been duly employed for this purpose for many decades, and on St. Swithin's day the parish churchyard has appearances of a hay field.

Vain superstition is by no means dead in ultra civilized England. On a recent Sunday, an interesting proof of this was seen in the parish church of Sutcombe, North Devon. A woman suffering from epilepsy sat in the porch as the congregation came out from morning service, and thirty married men, who at her request had attended church, passed her one by one, dropping a penny in her lap. The thirtieth took the pennies and gave the woman a half crown, to be made into a ring for her to wear.

A monster entertainment was recently given in the open air, near the main gate of the city of Peking, on behalf of famine sufferers. Nine girls' schools were represented in calisthenic exercises by girls of bluest blood, all with unbound feet. Then came a lecture by Mrs. Li, a pioneer woman educator. The spectacle of a Chinese woman speaking in public to an audience of thousands illustrates the tremendous strides China is taking.

A September Dream.

O, I dreamt a dream the other night,
And I must up and away
To the hills and the dales and the distant lakes,
And feel a hand in the fray.

O, I heard the swish and the tumbling wash
Of the waters through the glade;
And I felt the grab of my goodcraft's keel,
As it wound through the rocks and the shade.

O, I heard the moan of the bellowing moose,
And the camp-fire's crack at nights,
And I saw the dark-blue vault above,
And the flare of the northern lights.

O, I tramped the marsh, and I scaled the heights,
And I corralled my quarry at dun;
But I woke at crash of the galloping game—
Its hunting time!—give me my gun!

An Implication.

From Smiles.

It was a Saturday night and all parts of the theatre were crowded.

In the gallery a young woman sat in front of a corpulent man, who caused much annoyance by his frequent and free observations.

The lady's patience became exhausted, and, turning round to her tormentor, she delivered a sharp rebuke.

"I wish you would be quiet, sir, and remember that we did not come here to listen to your impertinent remarks."

"Very well, Liza," said the garrulous one, "but pray, do not eat me."

"You are in no danger," replied the young woman, "I am a Jewess."
