IS EVOLUTION GOD? ly song is of a wondrous theme, How all things came to be, The universe and me.

First, simple elements affoat; In all space Nebulæ— The mystic hush was broken by A centrifugal spree,

And stars flew East, and stars flew West, Appeared the Milky Way, Bright Orion, the Moon, the Earth, And all the world held sway.

The cooling breath, the motion, light, Appeared the Monkey cebus.

"Pithecanthropus Erectus," So Dubois named the first bold ape, That dimly dared reflect us. In this strange creature's soul, When neither man nor ape he was,

But half-and-half, not whole. But time rolled on, the magic word, "Evolution" set him free! The hazy mental state was cleared, Came full-fledged you and me!

And now, organic unity Is settled though 'tis late, The sages of the age place all On evolution's slate.

All evil, and all good,

All science and philosophy

All soul, yea, even God!

And Atonement, have an end But rather is an after-thought Of the Jewish mind so bold!

To think the Resurrection of

In spite of God and me!

Came then the cry, "New Theology," The new, we'll live it too.

From the City Temple came, In three weeks hatched to fame.

Or, God AND Evolution, which? With person, love and rod.

And is there yet a mercy-seat In which man may know God? And is there not a sacrifice, Redemption in His blood?

O, feed my soul with the food that feeds Then shall I feel and find Him near, And late He'll make it plain.
