KIDNEY TROUBLES

Increasing Among Women, But Sufferers Need Not Despair

THE BEST ADVICE IS FREE

Of all the diseases known, with which the female organism is afflicted, kidney disease is the most fatal and statistics show that this disease is on the increase among women.

Mrs. Emma Sawyer

Unless early and correct treatment is applied the patient seldom survives when once the disease is fastened upon her. We believe Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the most efficient treatment for chronic kidney trouble of women and is the only medicine especially prepared for this purpose.

When a woman is troubled with pain or weight in her back, frequent painful or scalding urination, swelling of limbs or feet, swelling under the eyes, an uneasy, tired feeling in the region of the kidneys or notices a sediment in the urine, she should lose no time in commencing treatment with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it may be the means of saving her life.

For proof, read what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for Mrs. Sawyer.

I cannot express the terrible suffering I had to endure. A derangement of the female organs developed nervous prostration and a serious kidney trouble. The doctor attended me for a year, but I kept getting worse, until I was unable to do anything, and I finally decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as a last resort, and I am to-day a well woman. I cannot praise it too highly, and I will every suffering woman about my case. Mrs. Emma Sawyer, Conway, Ga.

The Man And His Job. Keep your mind on your job and don't watch the clock. The most hopeless kind of an employee is the man who goes home on time, but comes down to the office ten or fifteen minutes late.

Casey was once eating his lunch next to an open keg of dynamite. When Clancy, a fellow workman of the same nationality, knocked out his pipe and the rim of the keg. When the boss came out to ascertain the cause of the explosion, he found only one Irishman where he had expected to see two, and immediately asked where Casey was, and how long he would be gone. "If he comes back as fast as he went away," replied Clancy, "he won't be long."

This story was told by a prominent manufacturer in St. Louis to a number of employees who were in the habit of not coming back as fast as they went away. The effect was phenomenal, as the next morning everybody was on the job at half-past eight.

New York, Oct. 21.—One thousand persons were rendered homeless by a fire which swept the triangle, bounded by Grand, Perry and Newark streets, Hoboken, this morning, and destroyed seventeen buildings. Death of Mrs. Way. On Tuesday, October 1st, death entered and bore from among us one of the most respected and best loved of our residents, in the person of Mrs. P. Way, aged fifty-three. Although in poor health for some time, her death came suddenly. Deceased was a devoted member of the Roman Catholic church, whose pastor, Rev. Father Carey, administered the last consolation of the church to her in her home. Her funeral, which took place on the 3rd, was largely attended from her late residence at Erinville church, where solemn requiem mass was celebrated. Afterwards her remains were placed in the vault to await interment in the family plot in White Lake cemetery, October 11th. The traits of her character, kindness and piety, which characterized her, were striking and captivating. Her life was exemplary, to her family, and to whom much sympathy is extended, edifying to her neighbors and consistent with religion.

CONDEMNED OF MENELIK

Pope Makes Plea For Old Abyssinian Priest.

Rome, Oct. 21.—Thirty-six years ago the Abyssinian chief, Aba Sakali, was condemned to death by King Menelik for becoming a convert to Catholicism. The chief escaped from prison and joined the Capuchin missionaries, Bishop Massia, who ordained him a priest and brought him to Rome, where he has lived ever since. One of the chiefs accompanying the Abyssinian mission, which recently had an audience with the pope and Meth's father. The pope, on hearing of the pathetic meeting, sent an autograph letter to King Menelik, asking pardon for the old chief and permission for him to return to Abyssinia, where his wife and child, who had believed him dead, are still living.

HE BLEW OUT THE GAS AND WAS FOUND DEAD IN THE MORNING. John Mitchell, of Brewer's Mills, Met His Death in Baltimore—He Had Gone Away on a Holiday.

On October 18th John Mitchell, the adopted son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Manion, Brewer's Mills, left for New York and Baltimore on the New York excursion. On Saturday, October 19th, his body arrived on the Cape Cod and was taken to his late residence for burial. The late Mr. Mitchell was adopted by Michael Manion, who he was two years old, or twenty-four years ago the exact day he died. During his life he has never been away from home, having spent all his time at the farm living a simple farmer's life.

This fall he wanted to travel and see part of the country, so he left for New York. After spending a few days in the above city he went to Baltimore, where he engaged rooms in a private boarding house. When he came back he found the house on Thursday night the gas was lit in his room. Being tired, he quickly undressed and prepared for bed, and in a thoughtless moment blew out the gas. He was from the house the next morning when his landlady went to awaken him. His foster parents were heart-broken when they received the sad intelligence as they had brought the deceased up from childhood and cared for him as if he had been their own child. The remains were laid in their last resting place on Sunday morning.

LONDON'S TRIBUTE TO CRIME

Annual Burden Upon Ratepayers About $15,000,000.

The annual bill that peaceful, law-abiding Londoners have to pay for crime will show an alarming increase this year, says The London Express.

All this season the international "crooks" have been busy supplying the shops, houses and pockets of honest citizens and reaping a record harvest, and the public will have to pay for it.

This boom in crime and the consequent activity among criminals entail a double loss on the public, for not only is the money they steal but heavy extra bills have to be paid for detective and police services.

The total cost this year is estimated at more than $15,000,000. These millions have to be provided to pay for the police courts, prisons, detectives and prosecuting officers. The estimate is based on the latest available figures, it is as follows:

Police and courts, £1,900,000; railway and private detectives, £340,000; lost property, £600,000; loss by injuries and assaults, £300,000; loss in labor of criminals, £300,000; making a total of £3,140,000.

The London lawbreakers who run up this enormous bill make away with a lump sum equal to the total earnings of the population of a town the size of Brighton.

Daily Warfare. Under the eyes of the public every day a constant warfare is being waged between the police and the "crooks." The ordinary citizen, unless he is unfortunate enough to be the victim of a robbery, pays little attention to the struggle between crime and the law, but at every great railway station and race meeting, and in all busy streets, the daily drama is playing.

A spruce, well-groomed man, in fashionable clothing, may be seen entering a first-class carriage, while a quiet, starchy looking man in a bowler hat watches him carefully out of a corner of his eye.

Travelers who are not "in the know" pay little attention to the man who is surprised to learn that the man of gentlemanly appearance is a notorious "crook," and the longer on the platform a detective, who has just recognized him.

Unless there is a warrant out for the arrest of the "crook," or he is caught in the act of theft, the detective does nothing but keep a watchful eye on his man, and find out, if possible, his destination. Messages can then be sent to the local police of the city where he is likely to "crook" will search for fresh adventures, but, if they are too late to warn the local force, there is soon news of some robbed mansion or daring theft.

Robberies Prevented. Hundreds of robberies are nipped in the bud by the mere presence of detectives in crowded places, for the thieves know the police by sight just as well as the detectives know the criminals.

In the ring at a race meeting a tall man will engage another well-dressed man in conversation for a moment. The man thus addressed hurriedly leaves, and none who are not in the secret suspect that a Scotland Yard detective has recognized his well-known pickpocket or confidence trickster and warned him off.

These little scenes—incidents in the great battle for the protection of the public—are enacted dozens of times a day, and "crooks" learn to their cost that their best-laid schemes may be upset in a moment by the intervention of some affable plain-clothes policeman who knows them by their Christian names even!

Scotland Yard detectives are daily supplied with photographs and particulars of all the known thieves who are out of prison, and they know the habits and customs of all the most notorious offenders.

The average observer cannot distinguish the lawbreakers in the bustling crowds from those who are there to see that the law is not broken, or each side is trying to outwit the other, and just at present the best "crooks" are having slightly the best of the contest, because of their numbers.

Scenes at a "Wake." An extraordinary story comes from Youghal, County Cork. A young man named O'Donnell, who had been an inmate in a charitable institution there, died a short time ago, and arrangements were made for his interment in the County Waterford. A coffin was ordered, and forwarded to the institution. Next morning the relatives removed it to the place of the funeral, and the coffin was placed in the hearse. As the hearse started, the coffin was found to be empty. The hearse was returned to the place of the funeral, and the coffin was found to be empty. The hearse was returned to the place of the funeral, and the coffin was found to be empty.
