Why Is There Objection?
A baker asked the Whig, this morning, why there was such opposition to reducing the size of the loaf of bread. Why would people prefer to have the price raised? If the pound and a half loaf was raised to six cents, the proposition would be just the same. Five cents, however, was a standard figure, and was better to retain it, and lessen the weight of the loaves. The same system was adopted in other lines of business. It was simply a case of six of one and half a dozen of the other.

HAPPY 'LITTLE' CHILDREN.

Seen at The Orphans' Home Jubilee.
A happy thought it was that decided to combine the jubilee and annual meeting of the Orphans' Home, and having both in the big, bright building itself rather than in the city hall. Any number of people were at the joint function there on Friday, and spent the happiest of afternoons. The home is the one charity that does not come before the public with sales, etc., but no surer sign of the beneficent work being done there, under the immediate supervision of Mr. and Mrs. Smeaton, could there be than the happy faces of the ninety little ones, on the roll now, and their unaffraid responsiveness to the friendly advances of strangers.
J. B. Walker, the chairman, said he thought our city was unique in its use of the term "home" for such an institution; it suggested the supplying of much that the little waifs therein have lost.
The secretary, Miss Muckleston, read extracts of the first annual report of 1889, by Mrs. Cartwright, and a comparison of the little Earl street house, of that date, with the short one, and there with the large building, showed how wonderfully the work, which appeals to all the best instincts, had been blessed. One thousand children have gone through the home, and there have been but few disappointments. A list was read of the founders of the home. Some of them were represented by daughters at the affair yesterday. Mrs. Muckleston by Mrs. Wocky and the Misses Muckleston, Mrs. Deacon by Mrs. Sydenham McGill, Mrs. Machar by Miss Machar, Mrs. Henry by several descendants.
The treasurer, Mrs. R. W. Garrett, reported receipts of $4,311, and disbursements as $3,984.
Archdeacon Macmorine said this jubilee was as the jubilee of the chosen people, a time of gladness.
Rev. C. A. Sykes, spoke of having been much interested in the work in Montreal, but that there he had not noticed in the children's happy "mothered" look he saw on the faces of those before him. The work of the women to the men. Men would find their own lives enriched if they often took part in just such work as the Orphans' Home tries to do.
Mr. McIntyre, in the impassioned speeches, welcomed the guest of honor, Mrs. Hugh Fraser, the only surviving member of the old board. With a mind as bright, and a step as light, as in the Bible, she is the same charming companion, the same benevolently-minded woman, as in the fifties. Mrs. Fraser received many congratulations later. Mr. McIntyre also welcomed the quarterly board and the descendants of the home's first workers.
Choruses by the children interspersed the speeches, and then tea was served.
The evening with Mrs. J. M. Machar and Mrs. James Cappon, in charge, was really lovely with barbers arranged so skillfully that the centre of the table looked like a miniature barbers' shop. In many silver candlesticks red candles shone, and the tea just added the finishing touch to the home-likeness of it all.
A place to which many went, and spent a happy few minutes, was the playroom, furnished by Mrs. R. W. Brock, in memory of the mother, all-wise devoted to the home's interests.
Mrs. B. M. Britton, Hon. are playing things and boxes to hold them, beautiful pictures on the wall—all that goes to make up a real nursery. An endowment has been given to maintain it.
Besides the clergy mentioned above there were present Canon Starr, Rev. Principal Gordon, Rev. Dr. Macgillivray and Rev. W. F. Fitzgerald. Col. McGill represented the military.

RICH WOMAN DIES IN SQUALOR AND WANT.
Left Husband at Church Door After Marriage and Lived Alone Since.
London, Oct. 26.—A tragic story of an old woman's solitary life in a house packed with money and valuables was told at the inquest held yesterday, on Mrs. Jane Chutton, a widow of eighty-seven, who was found dead in her house at Elliott Road, Chiswick.
Mrs. Chutton, it was stated, was married in 1861 to a man of independent means, but left him at the church door and never saw him again. Twenty years ago Mrs. Chutton took a house in Elliott Road, and she had lived there ever since with a dog as her sole companion. A woman obtained food for her and brought it to the house, but it was seldom that any one was allowed past the door.
As Mrs. Chutton had not been seen for several days the police forced an entrance on Tuesday evening, and found her dead.
The place was indescribably dirty, dust covering the floors and furniture to a depth of a quarter of an inch; but it proved to be a storehouse of treasures. A box in the bedroom contained bank notes to the value of $8,200 and console amounting to $4,750. A check book showed that she had drawn $7,000 from the bank in 1902.
In a second box were heaped up diamond rings, brooches, bracelets, gold watches and precious stones, worth in all close on $15,000.
Another room contained several hundred yards of silk, valued at ten shillings a yard, rare Indian shawls of silk and Paisley shawls. Three more boxes were full of beautiful old-fashioned clothing, while in the dirt lay many costly ornaments.
The only food in the house was a small piece of bread and a little sugar.

QUEEN'S-MCGILL GAME.

Was Played on Campus Saturday Morning.
Queen's II and McGill II came together this morning at Queen's campus, in the first game of the inter-collegiate series. The game was thronged with students and citizens long before Referee McCarthy of Ottawa, blew his whistle. After receiving final instructions the teams lined up in the following order:
Queen's II—Livingston, full-back; McKenle, Penock, Fraser, halvers; Meikle, quarter; McKay, Brown, Norrish, scrimmage; Pringle, Clarke, inside wings; Patterson, Dunnet, middle wings; Young, Murphy, outside wings. McGill II—Powers, full-back; Roberts, Reid, Byrne, halvers; Winslow, (captain), quarter; Strumbert, Firth, Eakins, scrimmage; Galman, Johnson, inside wings; Patterson, Dunnet, middle wings; Forbes, Gillies, outside wings.
Young accompanied the team as spare man.
Quite a surprise was sprung on the large crowd present when McGill won out in the last half, the final score being twenty-one to twelve.
In the first half Queen's had everything their own way, the score standing eleven to one in their favor at the end of the first half.
Queen's wing line and scrimmage were stronger and played snappier ball all through the game. Many times they would gain their yards by bucking the line and pushing the wearers of the red and white to their own line.
In the second half Queen's went to pieces completely. Their passing was poor, their kicking very little better, and no one on the team seemed to be using his head at all. In this half McGill secured four touches, three of them from scrimmage on the goal line, and one when Penock made a bad-muff, and fumbled a kick. Queen's II owe their defeat to the poor head-work of the players themselves.
The way McGill pulled together in the second half, was most surprising to the locals, and pleasing to their own rooters.
Livingston put up an excellent game for Queen's. He had his knee put out twice during the game, but still kept at the game with his usual pluck.
In the first half Queen's received two rouses. Meikle was pushed over for a touch, which was not converted, and Penock got a nice drop from the field. McGill got one point in this half, when Fraser was forced to rouse. In the second half McGill secured five touches, the last one just as the whistle blew for time, making the final score 21 to 12.
Meikle at quarter put up a good exhibition of ball, and was the only one who played his usual good game all through.
Murphy and Young at outside wing are good ones. Murphy repeatedly

HUSBAND ARRESTED.

His Wife Said to Have Been Poisoned.
Ottawa, Oct. 26.—On the strength of a wire, from Toronto, Thomas Burns, of Osgoode, was this morning arrested on a charge of murder. The stomach of the deceased wife had been sent for analysis. The inquest was opened, yesterday, and adjourned. Evidence was given of some rough usage and neighbors' suspicions, but little material evidence was adduced. County Chief of Police Hamilton had already brought them in from the shanty to give evidence at the inquest. At daylight, this morning, he drove out and took him into custody. The deceased woman was a British immigrant and had not been here very long. The husband alleged she died of cramps after he had administered some whisky. The husband is of a crafty nature.

Girl Buried Alive.

Calcutta, Oct. 26.—After a little girl had been buried at Biskra, her father thought he heard muffled cries coming from the ground. He tore off the thin layer of earth which covers Moslem graves and found his child alive. She is now quite well again.

Cinderella In Egypt.

London, Oct. 26.—Lecturing on the subject of "Ancient Egypt" at the New Gallery Photographic exhibition, last evening, S. J. Marshall said the story of Cinderella had an almost exact counterpart in the land of the pyramids. Egyptian mothers from time immemorial had told their children how a beautiful peasant girl was robbed of her slipper while bathing in the Nile, and how, on its being mysteriously delivered at the palace, the king searched for its wearer and made her his queen.

Very Non-Methodist, He Says.

A prominent member of Sydenham Street Methodist church, met a Whig representative this morning, and remarked that they were having some high church practices introduced up there now. They had subdued singing and playing during prayers, the Gloria, and other forms, not Methodist. The gentleman in question said he disliked partial imitations, and would rather go the whole way. He intended asking the quarterly board as to whether they were introducing a new form of religion.

In the first half Queen's had everything their own way, the score standing eleven to one in their favor at the end of the first half.
Queen's wing line and scrimmage were stronger and played snappier ball all through the game. Many times they would gain their yards by bucking the line and pushing the wearers of the red and white to their own line.
In the second half Queen's went to pieces completely. Their passing was poor, their kicking very little better, and no one on the team seemed to be using his head at all. In this half McGill secured four touches, three of them from scrimmage on the goal line, and one when Penock made a bad-muff, and fumbled a kick. Queen's II owe their defeat to the poor head-work of the players themselves.
The way McGill pulled together in the second half, was most surprising to the locals, and pleasing to their own rooters.
Livingston put up an excellent game for Queen's. He had his knee put out twice during the game, but still kept at the game with his usual pluck.
In the first half Queen's received two rouses. Meikle was pushed over for a touch, which was not converted, and Penock got a nice drop from the field. McGill got one point in this half, when Fraser was forced to rouse. In the second half McGill secured five touches, the last one just as the whistle blew for time, making the final score 21 to 12.
Meikle at quarter put up a good exhibition of ball, and was the only one who played his usual good game all through.
Murphy and Young at outside wing are good ones. Murphy repeatedly

Why Is There Objection?

A baker asked the Whig, this morning, why there was such opposition to reducing the size of the loaf of bread. Why would people prefer to have the price raised? If the pound and a half loaf was raised to six cents, the proposition would be just the same. Five cents, however, was a standard figure, and was better to retain it, and lessen the weight of the loaves. The same system was adopted in other lines of business. It was
