A PATHETIC LETTER

present time to abolish these old har 'I had for a long time been thinking of trying the Tasteless Samaria Prescription treatment on my husband for his drinking hisbits, but I was afraid he would discover that I was giving him medicine, and the thought unnerved me. I hesitated for nearly, a week, but one day when he came home very much intoxicated and his week's ralary nearly all spent, I threw off all lear and determined to make an effort to have our home from the ruin I saw coming, at all hazards. I sent for your Tasteless Samaria Prescription, and put it in his coffee as directed next morning and watched and prayed for the result. At noon I gave him more and also at supper. He never anspected a thing, and I then boldly kept right on giving it regularly, as I had discovered something that had set every nerve in my body tingling with hope and happiness, and I could see a bright future spread out before me—a peaceful, happy home, a share in the good things of life, an attentive lowing husband, comforts and everything else dear to a woman's heart; for my husband had told me that whiskey was vile stuff and he was taking a lislike to it. It was only too true, for before I had given him the full course he had stopped drinking altogether, but I kept giving him the medicine till it was gone, and then vest festivals and to substitute a festival for the whole parish, with services a particularly exciting description takes the place that football occupies in the American observance of the real dice on an old counter from a dilaplifated dice box. THE HARVEST HOME. Thanksgiving In the Old Simple

Days of England. In the old simple days of England the harvest home was such a scene as Horace's friends might have expected to see at his Sabine farm. The grain last cut was brought home in its wagon, called the hock cart-surmounted by a figure formed of sheaf with gay dressings suggesting a representation of the goddess Ceres, while a pipe and tabor went merrily sounding in front and the reapers tripped around, in a hand in hand ring, singing:

"Harvest home harvest home! We have plowed, we have sowed, We have reaped, we have mowed, We have brought home every load, Hip, hip, hip, harvest home?" In the evening of harvest home the
