"Way Down East."

William A. Brady's "Way Down East," with its typical characters of the old New England, its realistic stage pictures, their environments, with all its bucolic adjuncts and accessories, with its famous snow storm and other scenic features, comes to the Grand on Friday, Nov. 1st.

From beginning to end there is a piquancy about "Way Down East," which is delightful and refreshing. It is full of good things and there are so many of them that it is difficult to pick out those which are better than the rest. It is a full of bright and witty dialogue, there are songs and dances of the latest without number. The members of the company are all clever in their own way, and the production seen here during past seasons.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.

Ernie Marks Has a Very Excellent Stock Company.

The Marks Bros. company (under the management of Ernie Marks) opened at the Grand Opera House last evening. There was a large audience. The old favorites were accorded an enthusiastic welcome, proving their popularity. The piece presented was "Sig and His Sorrow," which was taken in a creditable manner by a talented company. Iva Evelyn Lyons, as "Hortense Norwood," a southern beauty, and an adventures around whom the story of the plot hovers, is a clever and charming comedienne, and her admiration by the way she carried out her role. Alice De Lane, as "Agnes Blackburn," the faithful daughter of "Admiral Blackburn," whose affection for her father and her admiration of her lover portrayed her part touchingly, and received applause for her fine work. Kitty Marks, as "Nan," the sister of "Agnes," who kept "Buster Brady" in hot water by the rejection of his love, performed her allotted part well, and was warmly applauded by her old admirers, and "Harvey Norwood," the designing scoundrel, whose greed for money was the bane of his sister's life and the cause of her sin and sorrow, played his role in a realistic manner. In the part of "Walter Donaldson," Joseph Lyons displayed much ability. He possesses dramatic powers of a high order and held the interest and attention of the audience. Ernie Marks, as "Buster Brady," the hostler, whose manner of displaying his love for "Nan," kept the audience in laughter. Victor De Lacey, James Walls and Joseph Bedard performed their several parts creditably.

The specialties were the best that have been presented here for some time. The singing and dancing of pretty little Rosie Machan was greatly appreciated. Her rendition of "School Days" was loudly applauded. Bedard and Bedard did some startling work on the trapeze and their exhibition of strength and enduring powers was greatly amusing. The talking and singing dolls in a variety of school and university subjects, which were beautiful, while the scenery was appropriate.

Tiger Mauls Trainer.

Lisbon, Oct. 29.—Herr Henriksen was giving a performance with ten fall-grown Bengal tigers in the Coliseum here to-night, when one of the animals sprang on him and bore him to the ground.

Shots fired and red-hot irons were applied to the tiger, which, however, refused to release its hold.

Finally Herr Henriksen managed to seize a tripod which had been thrown into the cage and pushed it into the animal's open jaws. Amid a scene of wildest excitement the trainer was then dragged from the cage. His injuries, though severe, are not believed to be dangerous.

The tiger, which is named Czar, some time ago killed a man in New York.

The Least Man.

In the least man there is the possibility of the highest—this is the message of religion. Life is divine. All lives are divine. Under the rough there is the reality of the refinable. Amid the dross there is the pure gold, waiting the process of emancipation. In the clay sits the root-life of nobility, ready to develop into the flower beautiful under the spell of the sunshine of sympathy. How dare you, then, look with scorn upon any life, however low? Be wiser, and kinder, and recognize in the low the basis whereon you may help to build the high.

Address, Mr. Casson for free literature.
