DESERTED 60-YEAR-OLD BRIDE

Grooms Left Her After Five Weeks.

Montreal, Nov. 8.—To escape from his sixty-three-year-old bride, Pierre Belanger, a newly-married farmer, who had attained the mature age of twenty-five, recently abandoned his farm, live stock and all material possessions and journeyed from Rimouski to Montreal, reaching here at noon, yesterday.

The wedding ring had only been on his wife's finger for five weeks, but in this short space of time Belanger had come to the conclusion that his temperament was incompatible with that of his spouse, hence his decision to abandon rural scenes and strike for the city.

Unfortunately for the fugitive, his wife was not long in setting the machinery of law in motion, so that poor Belanger's stay in Montreal was only of short duration when he was arrested by Detectives Richard and McLaughlin on a charge of "non-support of his wife." This morning the chief of police at Rimouski will accuse him to the end of poor Belanger's dream of not fulfilling matrimonial vows.

"My wife has already buried four husbands," the old man at detective headquarters, "but I thought I would take a chance with her. Now I find my mistake after five weeks' time."

BOURASSA TO FIGHT

WILL GO AFTER THE PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENT.

He Explains the Incident of the Mass—Said It Was the Customary Way in Quebec Province.

Montreal, Nov. 8.—Henri Bourassa, ex-M.P., of LaSalle, in a statement, to-day, announced that he would remain in Quebec provincial politics. "No," he said, "I will not go back to Ottawa. I am in the provincial field for good, at least as far as present plans are concerned. I intend to take a rest for a few weeks and then go again after the provincial government."

Mr. Bourassa also explained the incident of the "mass" over which there has been so much discussion. It is the custom in rural Quebec, says he, that when a politician desires to hold a meeting in mid-week, he would ask the parish priest to announce on Sunday, the only day when the country people come into the village, that mass will be held at such a time and that afterwards so-and-so will speak. "That is absolutely all there is to it," said Mr. Bourassa. "It is simply the customary way of calling mid-week political meetings in country districts."

Exposition Was Financial Failure.

Montreal, Nov. 8.—Harry Charlton, advertising manager of the Grand Trunk Railway company, has just returned from the scene of the recent Japanese exposition, in which the exhibit of the company was awarded two gold medals and one silver. He states that while the exposition was a very successful one from the point of view of the Grand Trunk railway whose display attracted widespread attention at the exposition, it was a failure financially. The promoters of the enterprise have lost fully three millions of dollars by the scheme, and the attendance was nothing compared to what had been expected.
