The minister of marine received an anonymous letter from Toulon, in which the writer He Was Brought Up on announced that he had the missing books in his possession. If the government would not give him $30,000 to restore them, he would sell them to road executive and manager was born a foreign power. No notice was taken at Harrisonville, Me., on September of this communication, but a second arrived a week or so later, accompanied by photographs of the contents of the books. Suspicion was first directed to Ullmo owing to his extravagance of living. After coming ashore on half-pay he rented a furnished filla on the outskirts of Toulon, which he shared with a young actress. He kept a motor car and entertained lav-
