WHAT IS HIS QUEST?

Dr. Beatty Nesbitt has left an office in which he last year cleaned up over $9,000, and he has given the gossip something to talk about. It is possible that there is not another man in the province who would abandon the place he held, and it is this circumstance that makes it the harder for one to understand his case.

The doctor has kindly considered the public curiosity, and consented to a newspaper interview. From this it is learned that he was simply unhappy in public office, with the silence and solitude which it imposed. He grew healthier, (a great consideration), and wealthier, (a greater eventually), and then, as he languished for lack of the freedom for which he pines, his wife welcomed any change. He pulled out of every entanglement, industrial and official, and contemplated a tour of the world.

Out of one public office, and freed from its cares, he was allured with others, and the mayor's chair, and a seat among the mighty (in the legislature) were put at his disposal. The "boys," who never felt so jubilant as when he was about, their leader and champion, paid him the homage he desired, and he will probably be into the elections right away.

How he lauds and magnifies Mr. Whitney, though. They can quarrel, but they can kiss and make up. Mr. Whitney never said anything unkind, or hateful about him, and he will continue to give the premier the adoration he desires. But "Rockefeller's boy" will realize that there is one at large who will not stand any rebuff. The real significance of the Nesbitt movement may never be known. It points to a balancing of accounts with several persons—in the government, in its service, and in Albany Club, where these chaps with the silk stockings, have been presuming to regulate the lives and conduct of their superiors.

THE ACT OF A HERO.

Attention has been concentrated in Winnipeg because of the fact that its mayor has vetoed the action of the council in voting a power plant contract to an English firm under exceptional circumstances. Two proposals were under consideration. One endorsed by three consulting experts, involved an expenditure of $2,845,534, and of this sum $100,000 was set apart for unforeseen contingencies. The other proposal involved the expenditure of $3,034,000, and did not include any sum for contingencies. This offer was endorsed by one expert.

Why the difference and why the preference of any one for the contract, calling for the higher expenditure? The tender approved by the council called for all Canadian electrical machinery, while the other tender embraced a large portion of Swedish machinery. Then the English firm, which put in a bulk tender, offered to take the city's four per cent. debentures at ninety-two in payment, and it is said that this is a higher rate than the mayor of Winnipeg was able to get when he visited the English market looking for buyers.

The reasons in favour of the higher offer became weak when it is remembered what happened in New York when that city undertook to unload its debentures on the local contractors. The times do not favour the sale of debentures at an advantage to the municipality, and the contractors, needing the money, feeling the effects of the stringency as keenly as any person, parted with the civic bonds at a sacrifice. The result was injurious to the city's credit, and operated seriously against the sale of bonds by the city.

The Toronto News probably had this experience before it, when it said

Mayor Ashdown would not find it difficult to defend his action in defeating a transaction which put debentures to the value of a couple of millions in the hands of contractors. "In case of extreme financial pressure, or in case their contract should prove to be particularly unprofitable," says the News, "they might be forced or tempted to sell the bonds at eighty-nine or ninety, or even a lower figure, and so affect the city's whole financial standing in the money market." Mayor Ashdown's action is regarded as heroic by our contemporaries, and there is no other word perhaps which so clearly describes the performance of the man.

MAY TALK TOO MUCH.

An able paper is that of Henry Clews, embracing the talk he gave the Economic Club at New Haven, Conn., on a recent occasion. He answered the question, "Is President Roosevelt's policy towards capital sound?" by declaring that it was and that there was no act, in all his administration, that the honest man or financier could find fault with. He has been simply carrying out his sworn obligation to enforce the laws of the country, and in so doing to expose those who had been abusing their trust and doing illegal things.

That Mr. Roosevelt has been right in his prosecution of the great corporations has been exemplified by the fact that the accused have been proven guilty when on trial. It is unfortunate that following the exposures there have been panics, but the good will be presently apparent in the policy which will be adopted by regenerated managements.

Mr. Clews refers to the fact that French capital was withheld when scandals "filled the air with an unpleasant odor." Of course the guilty protest against the financial house-cleaning, but it had to be and will do good when the present effects have been passed over. "Throughout all these disclosures of illegal methods, and wholesale graft," said Mr. Clews, "there is one gleam of encouragement, and that is that public opinion is aroused and will insist upon clean as well as capable corporate management in the future, and thus these disclosures will result in the raising of the moral standard of corporate management."

There is just one thing of which Mr. Clews disapproves. The president talked too much during the recent panic. He could not resist the temptation to say that he regretted nothing in his course against the trusts. Mr. Clews says he was a little too outspoken at a time when silence would have been golden. Mr. Hughes, governor of New York, is better in a crisis. He rests satisfied in the consciousness of having done his duty, and having done all he stands.

MEN WITH GOOD IDEAS.

The people dearly love a fighting man, but he must be more than a fighter. He must have a popular cause, and he must have the public interest at heart. One sees the force of this contention in the success of "Tom" Johnson, in Cleveland. He is wealthy, and could live, like some other persons of large means, in peaceful idleness. He is willing to serve his generation, however, and his triumph as the champion of lower street car fares against a powerful opposition is a lesson to be remembered.

Mr. Hearst, of New York, a couple of years ago, seemed to be a rising star. He was so active and had so many political agencies at work in his behalf that it seemed as if nothing could keep him out of high office. Arthur Brisbane, his editor, pronounced him a winning candidate for White House honors. Last year, backed by the independence leagues, which he organized and some of which he is a member, he forced himself on the democratic party for gubernatorial responsibilities. He lost. This year he, and the leagues joined issue with the republican forces against the democrats of New York City. Again he lost, and hereafter his influence will be nil.

One other name appears to have been written large in the elections, that of Roosevelt. The loss of New Jersey to the republicans is regarded as a notice to him that he cannot be president again. New Jersey is, as some one has pointed out, the home of the trusts and the recent panic on Wall street is quite fresh in the mind. Mr. Roosevelt is not suing for favours. He does not want the presidency. He says he will not take it. At the same time if there is anything which the state elections teach, it is that he is the one man of overpowering importance in the party, and that his nomination has become a necessity.

Men, let us repeat, must be behind great ideas or movements in order to command the public confidence. W. H. Whitney, in Massachusetts revived the reciprocity question, and suffered a severe defeat. His rejection by an immense majority indicates that the people have no use for fads or for those who take them up for mere amusement.

A GAME OF DECEPTION.

The Whig, like other papers, accepted the statement which was given out in Toronto, in behalf of the government, that the municipalities could safely figure on the power question. The old uncertainty had been removed. The government, it was said, would assume the cost over and above the commission's estimate.

This same thing was stated to Hon. Mr. McKay, by a representative of Waterloo, and he was a delegate to a secret meeting in Toronto where the subject had been discussed.

Section 17, of the act, said Mr. McKay, stated that the expenditure by the commission on any contract undertaken under the provisions of this act, shall be repayable to the commission by the municipality or corporations which have entered into the contract with the commission.

Section 24 of the act also bore on the point. It is said neither the province nor the commission, nor any members thereof, shall incur any liability by reason of any error or omission in any estimate, plan, or specification prepared or furnished by the commission.

Until this act has been amended the municipalities are liable for any expenses incurred by the commission in their behalf, and it is very fair business for anyone, in the name of the government, to undertake to flim-flam the people.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Dr. Beattie Nesbitt is a great admirer of Mr. Whitney. He has nothing to say, just now, about some of Mr. Whitney's colleagues.

Dr. Beattie Nesbitt has begun his pursuit of Sunday business in Toronto. There is a palpable movement among the silk stockings at a certain club.

The board of health should see what there is in the story about disease in the schools. Every safeguard should be thrown around the health of the children.

If Mr. McKay keeps on with his exposures law reform will come, whether the Whitney government is agreeable or otherwise. The liberal leader is doing good work.

Mr. Hanna, the heavyweight in the Whitney government, is said to presume a perpetual smile and to pay no attention to passing storms. It remains to be seen what may happen should a Nesbitt breeze take him suddenly.

Congratulations to C. R. Hosmer, book director, member of the stock exchange, and leading business man of Montreal. He began his remarkable career in Kingston as manager of the Dominion Telephone company's office.

Mr. McKay estimates that Whitney's three-cent-an-hour prison labor contract is equal to presenting to the favoured contractor about $28,000. The recipient should be very grateful, and show his appreciation in a proper way.

Hamilton has been given an assurance that it will receive a technical school. A special deputation got a pledge on the subject, but for the time it is to be kept a profound secret. Nothing to do with the next election, of course.

The conservative candidate in Colchester wants sympathy and support because the company of which he is a member suggested that he attend to business and let some one else attend to politics. It is hinted that the finance minister wants to crush him. Fudge.

The liberal leader hits back at Mr. Beck, who said the agitation about producer gas was meant to hurt the Niagara power scheme. Mr. McKay says he called attention, two years ago, to the subject, and he has repeated his contention so successfully that the government is going to report on the subject.

The gorgeous throne of embossed crimson velvet, the carved and gilded table, the bronze and marble busts of emperors and goddesses, the damask divans and other Oriental luxuries, have been sold off by the New York Mutual. They represented the imperial rule of a deposed life insurance king. They also gave evidence of a waste of the people's money.

Who Was He?

Toronto Saturday Night.

Perhaps some light is thrown on the enquiry as to why the candidate who runs as the champion of organized labor polls so few votes, by the statement of a staunch union man. "Oh," he said, "I wouldn't vote for any one of the so-called labor leaders in Toronto if he ran for parliament, and they wouldn't vote for each other. Each one thinks he's going to work up a nice scheme that will make a great man of himself."

The statement has been cabled across the ocean that there are over 100,000 men employed on the railroads of the United Kingdom who receive less than $5 a week wages. The sum looks small when compared with wages on this side of the water. But it is not so much what a man earns as what he can save that counts. It should be understood that dozens of articles of everyday use, which cost five and ten cents here, cost only one and two cents there; that wearing apparel is much cheaper, and rents are almost cut in two.
