Here is a story of "Mac," the genial ianitor of the G.C.I., which has never before appeared in print. About a year ago Mac possessed a small hairy dog, of which he was very fond. Some of the boys used to tease Mac a good deal about this unattractive pet, but his reply was, "I wouldn't tak' twenty dollars for ma' wee doggy." Several of the boys decided to test the truth of Mac's statement, and between them NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT made up twenty dollars. Then, one day they approached him, repeated Now, Mac, I'd like that dog myself, his pocket, handed it to the boy, "Weel, I didn'a say I wouldn't tak' safety. The prescription nineteen fifty. The doggy's yours."
