Most oven dampers have only two positions. They are either wide open or tight shut.

The "Peerless" dampers are adjustable. If the oven is hot, the damper and keep on adjusting the temperature.

With the ordinary oven the heat must be all thrown in to have to be turned on again, because the heat is so low.

The "Peerless" damper. Also the "Peerless" oven, and Duplex Grates. These points of excellence. Write for catalogue.

ANSWER TO BOARDER AND A DEFENCE OF THE HIGHER RATES

Charged by Boarding Houses—The Rates Are Very Reasonable Considering the Prices of Commodities.

Kingston, Nov. 18.—(To the Editor): In the Whig of the 13th inst. I was rather surprised and disgusted on reading the letter of one signing himself "A Boarder," apparently one of our students too, as he speaks for those complaining that our boarding-house citizens, public and private, charged $4.50 per week for their board and lodging, which they are compelled to do, owing to the extremely high price of everything going into the composition of the goods dispensed to their boarders, and in order to make ends meet, which is not at all surprising. The wonder is not that the price is so high, but that the reason is not as stated, considering the enormous cost of all commodities, which is felt not only by the boarders, but by the keepers of the establishments where they dwell, as well as by private householders. All of necessity are obliged to experience what high living means, and are entitled to as much sympathy on account of it as have the boarders, who, in fact, when it is seen that robust fellows the boarding-house keepers turn out, as they are seen in their vigorous struggles on the numerous football fields throughout the country. Poor, pany and half-starved young fellows, could not endure the severe strain and rough treatment there dealt out to each other, such as may have been witnessed during the playing of every match. Unless the participants were well fed and well-trained, they could not stand this; therefore the cost is no matter what it may be, is well worth the amount charged; so really, all things considered, the victuals instead of having caused censure upon them for charging too high, they have done for the food which they dispense cost them, and scarcely that they deserve commendation for what they do besides.

"Boarder" alludes to another writer in the Whig, "A Friend of Mankind," in a disdainful and sarcastic manner, saying that his friendship is extended to only a small portion of mankind, but not to those who are living in private boarding-houses in the city, and says his arguments are neither logical nor reasonable, of which I know nothing, not having seen them and will, therefore, let them rest there; but in the next sentence he goes on to state that the price paid by students for board is considerably higher than for wine. Of course it is, and why should it not be, when everything else has so enormously increased in value of late? But students alone are no exception to the rule. All who are obliged to pay for board, whether they be boarders or not, are obliged to pay for their board, and if they were not getting enough at first for their supplies, they, of course, only raised the price the second time when they found that what they were at first getting did not pay for the demands upon them, for they could not possibly afford to run their houses at a loss. They were simply driven to the wall, not only were students alone subjected to the paying of increased fares, but everyone else similarly situated had to do likewise, and of necessity all hands are obliged to contribute to the line, there being no exception made to students or anyone else. Then this boarder who really seems not to know what he is talking about, becomes sarcastic, and in some cases, offensive by saying that in some cases it would make little difference in expense were eggs fifty cents per dozen, were all boarding-houses like those he knows of, as there, he says, are as scarce as snow-storms in July, which, no doubt sounds very smart and clever to this spoiled and pampered boarder to thus relieve himself. If he and some others like him are so satisfied that there is such a bonanza for boarding-house keepers at the prices charged as he insinuates and objects to, they had better go into this business at once when their minds would speedily become disabused of this fallacy, and they instead would speedily sink into their holes and ever after keep mum about the price of either the necessities or luxuries supplied to them, and would be less liable to abuse or misrepresent any class of our respectable citizens who are obliged to do out a livelihood in supplying the needs of dissatisfied and unreasonable boarders, who would find that they would have no money with which to gallyant either Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto or elsewhere, at the expense of many of their friends at home, as they do now. A moment's consideration will, therefore, show that all classes of boarders, boarding-house keepers, as well as keepers of private houses are all equally entitled to sympathy, but the tension cannot be helped, as all alike suffer, therefore what cannot be cured must be endured, as best we may; and there's the end of it for the present. That being the case it is altogether out of place for any one to whine or to abuse any class of our citizens for what cannot be obviated.—FAIR PLAY.

BEER IS GOOD FOR MOST FOLKS (HARDLY ANOTHER BEVERAGE FEEDS SO WELL)

BEEER really excels milk as a food-drink for most grown people. And many, many people cannot digest milk easily, because it is so lacking in solid food-contents. Moreover, milk is so liable to contagion that it is seldom pure when we get it in the cities. But Ontario-brewed beer is really pure,—brewed in cleanliness, of sound materials, in a sanitary way, and brought to the user in the same fit-to-drink state.

Beer Is No Stimulant

Drink beer with meals and at bedtime, as an item of diet that will help the stomach do its work better, and will feed the body besides. Don't choose beer as a stimulant, though,—it does not contain enough alcohol for that. Use it as a food-drink that induces lazy stomachs to do their work well, and so helps them get more good out of all food.

Beer Makes Better Nerves

Ontario beer is not only deliciously appetizing and refreshing, because brewed of pure malt and hops only; but, besides, all the power that hops possess to repair nerve wastes is kept in these brews. That is what makes beer so particularly good for women to drink regularly. Ask your own doctor what he thinks of beer for your household.
