London, Nov. 21.-A remarkable case formed of white chrysanthenums. The a young girl of seventeen was report-> to keep the girl within doors under the supervision of her mother. The only reason that the child gave for her action was because she could not do without them. When all means of securing the coffin nails had been removed from her, the girl pleaded with her parents and brothers to be allowed even one cigarette, promising that it should be the last. A physician was called in and diagnosed the case as one of actual disease, the girl's appetite for tobacco having grown beyond any possibility of control. One of her favorite tricks to keep cigarwas to roll several in her hair. This means was not detected for some months, though the parents knew that the habit was constantly being gratified. Such a case of absolute mania for a dangerous form of stimulant has seldom come under the notice of local
