THE WIFE'S TEARS e Can Make Husband's Heart Faint

Within Him. Harper's Bazaar, which is settling all feminine problems these days, has turned its brilliant editorial attention to the subject of marital disagreement. This month's issue (December) gives the husband's opinion of his wife's tears-an opinion in which thousands of suffering husbands will concur :

One night he woke up and found her crying; nor will he, as long as he lives, forget the dismay this caused him. The firm foundation of his little world shook under his feet. He so wanted her to be happy; as far as he knew he did everything to make her happy, and here she was awake in the night, crying. Nor would she tell him why. No woman fully understands the awful ship-wrecked feeling it gives a man to see his wife cry. He never gets used to it; he may get accustomed to anything else, but never to are that. A man whose wife cries often may learn to put a stoical face on it -grit his teeth, and bear it without wincing outwardly, just as he may learn to bear some ever-recurring pain: depend upon it, however, his heart is water within him. There is ate nothing that so saps one's manhood as tears. Men have different ways of showing this. Some it makes brutal from sheer despair; others are dumb in the face of tears, unable to utter a cheering or sympathizing word; while, again, others take refuge in flight. since they can't bear the unnerving spectacle. However, a man takes it. be sure he suffers all his worst enemy ould wish him to. In cases where marriage is a warfare the woman has here a weapon at her command that as can always rout her opponent and am give her the final victory.
