TELL TERRIBLE TALE

MEN SHRIEK, DOGS HOWL, HORSES STAMP,

Houses Sank Into Fissures—Town Seemed to Be Repeatedly Lifted High in the Air and Set Down Heavily By a Mighty Hand.

London, Dec. 2.—Now that the first full account, coming from Tashkend, via St. Petersburg, has arrived, there can be no doubt that the Karatagh earthquake was one of the most appalling natural catastrophes on record. "It is difficult," writes the reporter, "to describe the scenes which meet the eye at Karatagh to-day. What was a short time ago a flourishing township, is now the grave of 4,000 dead. But the scenes which accompanied the catastrophe are even more difficult of adequate description. A group of survivors, still shaken by their experiences, related a terrible story, to which no written narrative can do justice. On the eve of the disaster, October 20th, a terrific storm burst over Karatagh and its environments, striking a deadly fear into the hearts of the inhabitants. The animal world seemed to have an uncanny foreknowledge. Dogs howled, horses stamped, cattle lowed with freight. Early in the morning the whole town seemed to shudder. The earth tremors were frequent, but few of the towns people was sufficiently disturbed by them to leave their houses. Fifteen minutes lates a terrific shock set the entire place swaying, the air resounding with weird noises, then the town seemed to be repeatedly lifted high in the air and set down heavily by a mighty hand. Buildings were crumbling and crashing to ruins every moment or two. In scores of places the ground burst open, and boiling water spouted upwards. Huge fragments of rock became dislodged from the surrounding mountains, and added the thunder of their fall to the subterranean rumblings and roarings, which continued all the time. Numerous houses were battered down by the falling rocks. Others, with their occupants, sank bodily into great fissures in the earth. The populace or such of them as had escaped instant death, appeared to be mad with terror. From every side arose awful shrieks. Those who fled for safety had to blind their eyes to many sad sights. The storm had come on again with renewed force and activity. Pandemonium reigned. Maddened animals tore aimlessly hither and thither, continuous peals of thunder and flashes of blinding lightning added to the frenzy. Many fugitives perished under the hoofs of the animals.

In the meantime similar scenes were being enacted in the surrounding country, twelve large villages being destroyed on this same terrible morning. In Karatagh alone two thousand bodies were recovered. As many more still remain in the ruins of twelve hundred houses, while 25,000 animals, on a rough estimate, were destroyed.

Hit By Falling Plank.

Brockville, Dec. 2.—William D. Sands, aged twenty-eight, and a native of Virginia, was brought to the hospital, from Chesterville, where he was employed on the double-tracking of the C.P.R. between Smith's Falls and Montreal.

He was working under a bridge when a heavy plank fell from above, striking him in the abdomen. His injuries are of an internal nature, and very little hope is held out for his recovery.

The steamer Montana is on fire at her dock at Philadelphia and the flames have spread to the dock shed. Large quantities of oil are stored on the dock and all of the down town fire apparatus has been called to the scene.

Southern California has reaped its annual harvest of English walnuts. The total crop is approximately 12,000,000 pounds, two million less than that of last year. The growers receive from 12 to 15 cents for the crop, or a total of about $1,700,000.

The United States Steel corporation has forty blast furnaces in operation and 55 furnaces out, of its 95 regularly operative furnaces. This is an increase of ten in the idle list inexactly a week. The Carnegie Steel company blew out six of the ten, the other subsidiaries, Illinois Steel Co., National Tube company, and American Steel and Wire company, blowing out four in the past seven days. The Carnegie Steel company now has only twenty-one of its fifty-five furnaces operating, having thirty blown out, and four banked.

Work And Feed Scarce.

Amelisburg, Dec. 2.—Cattle have run in the fields all through November in this neighborhood, but have at last been taken in. Many villagers are buying bailed hay, brought from Belleville by stage, which costs $25 a ton here. Cattle buyers are picking up old cows that have dried up or failed to fatten this summer, at $5 each. Work being scarce, and the laborers not having as much work in the summer; they are not very well prepared for winter, especially where a cow is kept, feed being almost impossible to get. Albert File is home from Chicago. Rev. Mr. Barnes and Mrs. Albert Tout have been ill during the week. In spite of the severe frosts no apples were lost this fall. The lake is frozen over and there is enough water to start the mill. The present teacher, E. W. Ferguson, has been engaged for the ensuing year. The bank here reports a largely increased business. S. Camrite, fourth concession, is building a new house where the old one was burned. We regret to record the death of Mrs. J. L. Parliament. She had been an invalid for several years.

The Skin in Winter.

The condition of the skin during the cold weather has an important bearing on the general health. The skin is more than a mere covering for the body. By means of tiny pores it helps to purify the system, and unless cared for, the damp, raw days of winter will impair its functions, cause cracking and chaps, and sow the first seeds of skin disease.

LIFE IN RHODESIA.

Tales of Locusts and Snakes—Interesting Details.

The wife of a gentleman farmer in Rhodesia continues to give in The Empire Review, a vivacious description of her experiences. She says: For five days every available being on the farm, including the entire household and canine brigade, has been commandeered to fight locusts. Strenuously, vigorously, and passionately have we fought; and now, after all that reckless expenditure of vital force, we have only succeeded in saving half the oats and a little barley. At least 25 acres are as bare as if they had never been planted. There are indeed moments when it is impossible not to feel that in coming to Rhodesia to farm one invites a repetition of the plagues of Egypt under varying forms.

Only four months ago floods devastated acres and acres of our mealies—the fruit of incredible hard work and much hoping against hope. Horses continue to drop and die all round us; fowls likewise. Of all that flourishes cats and black jacks easily lead the way. My cat has increased the cat population by 20 kittens in 12 months; so I think she may be said to be doing her duty by her country very nobly. As for black jacks, on some farms mealies are literally choked by them. They are a weed that, if you pass through it, makes you look as if you had been dipped first in a gum pot, and then a tea-caddy. The other day one of our snakes had a game with me on the verandah. We have mats down, and it put its head out from under a mat just in front of where I was sitting, and wagged it backwards and forwards with a long tongue out. For a few moments I sat petrified—then I fled in search of my husband.

Black boys are not much use with snakes. Once when there was a snake in the dining-room, and I fetched the cook-boy to come and kill it, he insisted upon using a tree. With this he stood outside the door, about 24 feet away, and made frantic lurches at it. Another day there was one in the store cupboard, and I occasionally stumble over them out walking. But to return to the locusts. We have a new kind now, a hateful species known as the brown locusts, which made their appearance for the first time last year. A creepy, crawly, brute that is as the sand of the sea for multitude, and is no sportsman at all. Those we have had hitherto, known as the red locusts, valued their lives and made off before a furious onslaught. These brown things flutter down and crawl about, and absolutely refuse to move. "Burn me, slay me, crush me," he seems to say, "but don't ask me to move."

In the face of all these difficulties I see it said that agriculture in Rhodesia is flourishing, and this with the mining industry holding the prior right to the water on a farm. The settler dearly loves the country as a country—of this there is no doubt. But what can he do when he has to pay 20s. an acre for a farm 12 miles from the market, more than half of which is rock-strewn kopje, no earthly use, unless the wood can be sold, except as exercises in patience to the beasts and humans who have to plod around them, at considerable expense of wasted energy. That is the condition of the farm my husband is now farming; and if, as at present, he only rents it, he will have no claim whatever for his brick buildings and improvements should he decide to give it up. At the same time many farmers are doing well with mealies and tobacco, and all seem to unite in liking Rhodesia, and being ready to stand by her till further orders. The climate and the freedom, and the ever-existing chance that something may turn up, helps him over his stiles, and more than reconciles him to his exile. After five despairing days with locusts, he takes his gun and his dogs and has a tramp after birds and buck. And when he comes back after good sport the all-enveloping black cloud has sunk to the dimensions of the proverbial man's hand for long enough to enable hope to regain her ascendancy and buoy him up for whatever next an adverse fate may send.

HOTTENTOT CHIEF KILLED.

Fell Riddled With Bullets After Desperate Fight With Troops.

The following is the manner in which the German Southwest African rebel Morenga was killed: With ten Hottentots he gave the troopers the slip on the German line. The troopers discovered the spoor, whereupon Major Elliott, with 60 men, pursued him over a waterless tract of country for 48 hours, at the end of which he found Morenga holding a position on a kopje. Morenga opened fire at a thousand yards, and fought for two hours.

Inspector Manders, with 12 troopers, finally rushed the kopje under cover of the main body's fire. Corpl. Henwood was killed at ten yards' distance, and the man who shot him was immediately killed by one of the corporal's comrades.

When the troopers entered the kopje they found Morenga riddle with bullets.

A German officer accompanied the column, and was under fire during the attack. He loudly praises the column's achievement, particularly the concluding charge.

Scotch Shipbuilding.

According to a report that has just been issued, the first eight months of this year make a record in the Scottish shipbuilding industry. Altogether 381 vessels of 459,763 tons were launched. On the Clyde the output consisted of 239 vessels of 421,083 tons, an increase on last year—the previous highest—of 38 vessels and 5,172 tons. During August 42 vessels of 58,614 tons were launched in Scotland. Of these 25 of 51,387 were from Clyde yards. An exceptionally large tonnage of new contracts was reported in August, the total amounting to about 90,000 tons, of which over 80,000 tons was placed with Clyde builders.

Premier and Mrs. Scott, Regina, Sask., will spend the winter at Mediterranean points.

BIJOU

Open 1.30 p.m. to 5.30; and 7 to 11; SATURDAY, 10 a.m.

As we have used up most of the English language in describing the ordinary and commonplace pictures heretofore shown at "The Bijou,"

We find ourselves with no words left to adequately describe the really remarkable and extraordinary picture which we offer TO-DAY and TUESDAY. It will be talked about and you must not let it get from you. It is called,

"A MAID'S DREAM"

It is so mysterious and astonishing that the Proprietor and Staff of "THE BIJOU," are in the dark as to how it could possibly be accomplished.

As we walk through the city on some days, people run across the streets to ask us things are done. Don't do it this time. We can't tell you. We lie awake at night trying to figure it out, but it's too deep for us!

It makes all the most extraordinary efforts of the miracle workers ancient and modern look like those of a six-year-old immigrant from dear old Lapland.

Its funny too, and will especially interest the Ladies. Our other Comedy is always from you. It is called

HAIR SOFT AS SILK.

New Scientific Treatment Kills Dandruff Germs and Makes Hair Soft.

It is an accepted fact, a proven fact, that dandruff is a germ disease; and it is also a demonstrated fact that Newbro's Herpicide kills the dandruff germ. Without dandruff falling hair would stop, and thin hair will thicken. Herpicide not only kills the dandruff germ, but it also makes hair as soft as silk. It is the most delightful hair dressing made. It cleanses the scalp from dandruff and keeps it clean and healthy. Itching and irritation are instantly relieved, and permanently cured. There's nothing "just as good." Take no substitute. Unitarian.

REV. C. W. CASSON, OTTAWA

Are You Afraid?

Do you mean to say that you are afraid to trust yourself to the guidance of the living God? Yet it can only be fear and unfaith, if you cling to some outgrown and outlived standard of the past, and refuse to admit the new truth of the present. Can you believe that God spoke only in the past, and guided only in the past, and spoke truth only in the past? If not, why do you persist in shutting your eyes to the new manifestations of the divine on each new day of the present? Why not frankly and fearlessly open your mind to whatever the God of the present has to reveal?

Address, Mr. Casson for free literature.
