EXPECTED A FORTUNE,

But Found That Only a Misfortune Had Come. On coming home one day lately a young citizen found a post office notice for a registered letter awaiting him. He was overjoyed, and felt sure that some relative had died and left him money. He dressed in his best clothes, and started out for the post office. Seeing that he was to be the recipient of perhaps thousands of dolhe hailed a cab, and was driven to his destination. At the registered letter wicket he received the precious missive, and opened it in great expectancy. And what do you suppose it contained? An official notice stating that his name had been placed on the "Indian List," and that he could get no more liquor at the bars. What the young man said would not look well in a staid old dafly paper.
