

PAGE SIX. STORIES FROM THE WEST ABOUT IMMIGRANTS FRESH FROM OLD LAND.

They Are Unused to Ways of New Land in Which They Are Making Their Home. Many tales are current in the West...

It appears that an Englishman, with all his worldly goods and chattels in an ox-cart, was moving into the country to the north of the Allegheny...

He had seen horses hobbled when turned loose to graze on the prairie during the night, and to loosely secure the fore feet of the oxen was but the work of a few moments.

And if anyone doubts this story, the Calaveras would have it known that the work of a few moments, then sealing himself on the box he started off.

It is related of another Englishman that he was once out driving on a very hot day. After he had journeyed for some hours he came to a river, and being a mercurial man he was soiled to give the horse a drink.

The Englishman got out to investigate, and after a close examination discovered that it was the check rein that was the cause of all the trouble.

He was much surprised, when on arrival at the frontier, to find the horse filled up with water, like a animal in a nine days' jaunt across the Sahara.

Thousands of Unemployed From the States Flecking Across Niagara. The statement made by prisoners in the police cells at London, Ont., that Canada is to be invaded by an army of unemployed from the United States is proven true by conditions on the Niagara peninsula frontier at the present time.

One on Gun-Eater. Mr. Harry Lauder, the Scotch comedian, tells an amusing story of a joke he once played on the Gun Eater of coster-character impersonation fame.

LIVING IN HIS COFFIN.

Woman Has Narrow Escape of Being Buried Alive. A West Bromwich woman, Mrs. B. Leavel, has just narrowly escaped being buried alive.

The other day, some time ago, she had been attended by a local doctor, who certified that she was suffering from a weak heart.

Her son, however, who was much attached to her, and who had frequently visited her in the room where she lay, and was convinced of the color which seemed to come into her face, and she was not dead.

Mr. Richards again called in the doctor, who examined the woman, and could not discover any signs of decomposition.

It was the doctor's opinion that she was not quite dead. He advised that Mrs. Richards should be taken out of the coffin, and this was done.

Mr. Richards again called in the doctor, who examined the woman, and could not discover any signs of decomposition.

KAISER'S YACHT SIMPLE.

Has Many English Pictures Displayed on the Mizenmast. As royal yachts go, the Kaiser's yacht, the Hohenzollern, is by no means specially gorgeous.

The Kaiser's own apartments are especially simple. A brass bedstead, along one side of the cabin, is the only piece of furniture.

Elsewhere, all over the yacht, the Kaiser is absolutely conspicuous with a very large triple mirror, and a barber's chair, with a headrest, are all the furniture.

There is, however, one strange picture still. It hangs just outside the Kaiser's cabin "on the line." It is a rather large photograph of an Orange demonstration at Belfast, entitled "We Will Not Have Home Rule."

A pretty incident occurred at the Aldwych Theatre, London, when the King of the Gaiety, when the performance of "The Gay Godsons." A representative of the management who waited at the royal entrance to receive His Majesty was smoking a cigarette when the King's motor-car drove up.

LIFE OF CRIME.

Accomplice of "Chicago May" Sentenced in England. An echo of the case in which Gurney, the escaped convict from Devil's Island, and "Chicago May" were sentenced to five years' penal servitude for stealing a quantity of valuable jewelry from a private house at Eastbourne.

The judge, in passing sentence, said he would do his best to prevent England being pestered with such a scoundrel. At the expiration of his sentence Ferrall would be deported to Italy.

Since the arrest of "Chicago May" he has lived something like a life of cultivated luxury among fashionable houses in the north of England, and his books (which he reads in four or five languages) are Italian, French, German, Russian, and English.

A bed blunder over a Turin bank "job" made it politic for the couple to dash for Italy. They actually fled the way to the South African gold and diamond fields, not to do any digging, but to carry on systematic and wholesale robbery of the mines.

After their next arrest and sentence they were sent to camp. Ferrall was deported to America, of which country they claimed to be citizens, but they "jumped" the boat at Southampton, and after robbery at an hotel, they made their way to London.

Here, in the Regent's park district they lived in elegant style, and Ferrall indulged his taste in literature in a splendid library, to this place they lured the blackmailed victims of "Chicago May" whom they met in London.

COMPANIONS FOR DOGS.

New Occupation Opened For Women by London Society. A "visiting companion" for dogs is the latest profession which has been opened for women.

A lady living at Chelsea advertised recently that she would be pleased to receive a dog and care for them at their owners' homes.

"My idea is to call at various houses and take the dog out for a walk, and the visiting companion explained.

There are many ladies who are fond of dogs as if they were children, and they have not much time to devote to their pets.
