

The Daily British Whig

YEAR 74--NO. 303

KINGSTON, ONTARIO, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 28, 1907.

LAST EDITION

SWITCH LEFT OPEN

By Brakesman and Five Men Dead as Result.

Passenger Train Has Head-on Collision With Coal Train Near Lenox--All Passengers Escaped Without Injury.

Lenox, Mich., Dec. 28.—Speeding through a dense fog, at forty miles an hour, a passenger train No. 5, on the Grand Trunk railway, collided head-on, with a heavily laden coal train, one-half mile north of here, at seven-thirty o'clock last night. Five trainmen are dead and two are hurt. All of the passengers escaped injury, except a baby, who, however, was only slightly hurt, by being thrown out of its mother's lap. The dead are: August Bowdowski, freight engineer, Detroit. W. G. Taylor, switchman, Detroit. George Boughner, fireman, Detroit.

James Bennett, passenger engineer, Detroit. Albert McCall, fireman, Port Huron. The injured are: George Washburn, freight fireman, Lenox. Edward Dewal, Lenox. The locomotive of the passenger train ploughed under the two engines of the freight train, the forward locomotive of the double-header was tossed on top of the passenger engine, while the rear engine was thrown upon end. The accident is attributed to negligence on the part of the brakesman, who, it is said, left the switch open.

A NOTED PROFESSOR.

An Able Psychologist and a Clever Editor.

Hugo Munsterberg, the noted professor of psychology at Harvard University, since 1892, was born in Danzig, Germany, on June 1st, 1863. He graduated at Danzig in 1882, and later studied at Leipzig and Heidelberg.

Prof. Hugo Munsterberg

where he was graduated with the highest honors. Prof. Munsterberg attracted attention by his ability and has been a successful contributor to the highest class of the popular monthly since he came to this country. He married Miss Selma Oppler at Strassburg, Germany, in 1887.

Theory alone never yet solved a problem. Good management is often styled good luck.

PITH OF THE NEWS.

The Very Latest Culled From All Over The World.

The cholera is committing great ravages among the pilgrims to Mecca.

The Prince of Monaco has commuted the sentence of Madame Gould to life imprisonment.

James W. Paul, a Philadelphia banker, gave a ball at which the decorations alone cost $35,000.

Gen. Drule, commander of the French troops, in Morocco, has been recalled on account of ill-health.

Dr. W. G. Gifford, assistant surgeon at the London asylum, has received notice of his dismissal.

The Intercolonial railway management has decided that its employees shall not accept municipal offices.

Roland Madill, a young man, was stabbed by his uncle, James Morrison, at Gooderham village, and may be fatally wounded.

Dr. Fleming, a member of the bacteriological staff of Toronto University, has been appointed successor to Prof. Shuttleworth as city analyst.

The locomotive of the passenger train causing grave uneasiness. All imperial functions have been cancelled, owing to her majesty's inability to appear at a reception at the Canadian Northern RR. in the dispute between the company and their engineers, firemen and hostlers.

Quebec jury has decided that Mrs. Rochette was poisoned and holds her husband responsible. He married a younger girl ten days after her death and has since disappeared.

The United States minister at Quito reports that the recent revolution in Ecuador has been quelled by the arrest of Gen. Toral, formerly Ecuadorian minister to Great Britain and twenty of his adherents.

SIMPLY A DISEASE

Can be Cured if Treated With Cold Douches Daily.

Ailment is Divided by the Scientist Into Three Forms by the Diagnosis.

Paris, Dec. 28.—A Paris physician, Dr. Mairet, has formulated the startling theory that jealousy is simply a physiological disease. He says it ought to be treated like other ailments, medicinally, and that if so dealt with it can be cured.

Dr. Mairet considers there are three forms of jealousy—first, jealous hysteria, secondly, morbid excitement of the sentiments with deep feeling of uneasiness.

Second, jealous monomania, which is closely akin to a morbid feeling in the afflicted person that he or she is being persecuted.

Thirdly, jealous madness, or the last and acute stage of jealous hysteria, and should be treated as a form of madness.

The doctor's opinion is that sufferers from acute jealousy should be treated by daily and frequent cold douches. He has proved it to be a valuable treatment, frequently bringing a complete cure, and nearly always a great alleviation.

"Be polite to women" is the advice which stares at one from placards placed in prominent positions in the Paris theatres, railway stations, cars, etc. This is the work of a new league formed to encourage politeness in France. It is called the League of Respect to Women.

For many years past the old traditional French politeness has been dying out—some say it is the democratic spirit of the republic, which is to blame. For instance, in France no man ever thinks of giving up his seat to a lady who is standing in a car, and if a foreigner offers his seat he is regarded with surprise and curiosity.

Men smoke in non-smoking compartments without asking permission of any woman who may be present. Men push women to one side at the theatres and railway stations and do not beg their pardon for jostling and pushing, and even saluting is not done as respectfully as it used to be.

The league does not intend to revive the old-fashioned and ceremonial forms of traditional French politeness, that would be ridiculous in these commercial days, but it would like to revive or keep alive some of its former politeness toward women.

placed in prominent positions in the Paris theatres, railway stations, cars, etc. This is the work of a new league formed to encourage politeness in France. It is called the League of Respect to Women.

For many years past the old traditional French politeness has been dying out—some say it is the democratic spirit of the republic, which is to blame. For instance, in France no man ever thinks of giving up his seat to a lady who is standing in a car, and if a foreigner offers his seat he is regarded with surprise and curiosity.

Men smoke in non-smoking compartments without asking permission of any woman who may be present. Men push women to one side at the theatres and railway stations and do not beg their pardon for jostling and pushing, and even saluting is not done as respectfully as it used to be.

The league does not intend to revive the old-fashioned and ceremonial forms of traditional French politeness, that would be ridiculous in these commercial days, but it would like to revive or keep alive some of its former politeness toward women.

placed in prominent positions in the Paris theatres, railway stations, cars, etc. This is the work of a new league formed to encourage politeness in France. It is called the League of Respect to Women.

For many years past the old traditional French politeness has been dying out—some say it is the democratic spirit of the republic, which is to blame. For instance, in France no man ever thinks of giving up his seat to a lady who is standing in a car, and if a foreigner offers his seat he is regarded with surprise and curiosity.

Men smoke in non-smoking compartments without asking permission of any woman who may be present. Men push women to one side at the theatres and railway stations and do not beg their pardon for jostling and pushing, and even saluting is not done as respectfully as it used to be.

The league does not intend to revive the old-fashioned and ceremonial forms of traditional French politeness, that would be ridiculous in these commercial days, but it would like to revive or keep alive some of its former politeness toward women.

placed in prominent positions in the Paris theatres, railway stations, cars, etc. This is the work of a new league formed to encourage politeness in France. It is called the League of Respect to Women.

For many years past the old traditional French politeness has been dying out—some say it is the democratic spirit of the republic, which is to blame. For instance, in France no man ever thinks of giving up his seat to a lady who is standing in a car, and if a foreigner offers his seat he is regarded with surprise and curiosity.

Men smoke in non-smoking compartments without asking permission of any woman who may be present. Men push women to one side at the theatres and railway stations and do not beg their pardon for jostling and pushing, and even saluting is not done as respectfully as it used to be.

The league does not intend to revive the old-fashioned and ceremonial forms of traditional French politeness, that would be ridiculous in these commercial days, but it would like to revive or keep alive some of its former politeness toward women.

placed in prominent positions in the Paris theatres, railway stations, cars, etc. This is the work of a new league formed to encourage politeness in France. It is called the League of Respect to Women.

For many years past the old traditional French politeness has been dying out—some say it is the democratic spirit of the republic, which is to blame. For instance, in France no man ever thinks of giving up his seat to a lady who is standing in a car, and if a foreigner offers his seat he is regarded with surprise and curiosity.

Men smoke in non-smoking compartments without asking permission of any woman who may be present. Men push women to one side at the theatres and railway stations and do not beg their pardon for jostling and pushing, and even saluting is not done as respectfully as it used to be.

The league does not intend to revive the old-fashioned and ceremonial forms of traditional French politeness, that would be ridiculous in these commercial days, but it would like to revive or keep alive some of its former politeness toward women.

placed in prominent positions in the Paris theatres, railway stations, cars, etc. This is the work of a new league formed to encourage politeness in France. It is called the League of Respect to Women.

For many years past the old traditional French politeness has been dying out—some say it is the democratic spirit of the republic, which is to blame. For instance, in France no man ever thinks of giving up his seat to a lady who is standing in a car, and if a foreigner offers his seat he is regarded with surprise and curiosity.

Men smoke in non-smoking compartments without asking permission of any woman who may be present. Men push women to one side at the theatres and railway stations and do not beg their pardon for jostling and pushing, and even saluting is not done as respectfully as it used to be.

The league does not intend to revive the old-fashioned and ceremonial forms of traditional French politeness, that would be ridiculous in these commercial days, but it would like to revive or keep alive some of its former politeness toward women.

placed in prominent positions in the Paris theatres, railway stations, cars, etc. This is the work of a new league formed to encourage politeness in France. It is called the League of Respect to Women.

For many years past the old traditional French politeness has been dying out—some say it is the democratic spirit of the republic, which is to blame. For instance, in France no man ever thinks of giving up his seat to a lady who is standing in a car, and if a foreigner offers his seat he is regarded with surprise and curiosity.

Men smoke in non-smoking compartments without asking permission of any woman who may be present. Men push women to one side at the theatres and railway stations and do not beg their pardon for jostling and pushing, and even saluting is not done as respectfully as it used to be.

The league does not intend to revive the old-fashioned and ceremonial forms of traditional French politeness, that would be ridiculous in these commercial days, but it would like to revive or keep alive some of its former politeness toward women.

placed in prominent positions in the Paris theatres, railway stations, cars, etc. This is the work of a new league formed to encourage politeness in France. It is called the League of Respect to Women.

For many years past the old traditional French politeness has been dying out—some say it is the democratic spirit of the republic, which is to blame. For instance, in France no man ever thinks of giving up his seat to a lady who is standing in a car, and if a foreigner offers his seat he is regarded with surprise and curiosity.

Men smoke in non-smoking compartments without asking permission of any woman who may be present. Men push women to one side at the theatres and railway stations and do not beg their pardon for jostling and pushing, and even saluting is not done as respectfully as it used to be.

The league does not intend to revive the old-fashioned and ceremonial forms of traditional French politeness, that would be ridiculous in these commercial days, but it would like to revive or keep alive some of its former politeness toward women.

WEATHER PROBABILITIES.

Tuesday, Dec. 28—(10 a.m.) Clearing tonight and colder Sunday, fog and moderately cold.

Stacy's Clearing Sale

OF Coats AND Furs

To Be Continued

Owing to the extremely bad weather of the last few days, which we are sure kept ladies from coming to this great sale, we have decided to continue the same.

Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of Next Week.

Be Sure and Come

This is likely the last chance you'll have to secure a fashionable coat, at the extremely low prices we're offering.

STEACY'S

MARRIED. PARKS—CHERRY—At Winnipeg, Dec. 16th, by Rev. Clarence Mackinnon, William Henry Parks of Arden, Ontario, to Victoria Mabel, daughter of Henry Cherry, Arden, Ont.

DIED. MACKENZIE—In Registrar, Dec. 27th, 1907, Mary Mackenzie, aged twenty-five years, widow of James Mackenzie, 46 Division street, Kingston.

ROBERT J. REID, The Leading Undertaker. Phone, 577, 227 Princess street.

OLIVES!

Are no longer a luxury but a necessity. We have them in all sized bottles, plain and stuffed.

Olives, at 10c. per bottle. Olives, at 20c. per bottle. Olives, at 25c. per bottle. Olives, at 30c. per bottle. Olives, at 35c. per bottle. Olives, at 40c. per bottle. Olives, at 50c. per bottle. Olives, at 75c. per bottle. Olives, at 90c. per bottle. Olives, at $3 per bottle.

Jas. Redden & Co.

Importers of Fine Groceries.

FOR SALE

Choice Brick Residence, Barrie street all improvements, grand location. Double Stone Dwelling, Earl street, bath, etc. Frame Dwelling, Albert street, barn, shed, large lot and many others. SWIFT'S Real Estate and Insurance Agency.

A BARGAIN IN LAMPS

50 Fancy Lamps. Just got them in a job lot. Come and get one for Christmas. I am going to sell them at FURBY'S Second-Hand Store, 398 Princess St. Phone, 705.

Called In Police.

Surat, Bombay, Dec. 28.—After two days of little efforts to elect a president, the Indian National Congress broke up, yesterday afternoon, in a free fight, during which the police had to be called in. The agitation for home rule in India was the cause of the trouble, the extremists loudly demanding the speedy accomplishment of complete home rule. The moderates will meet, to-day, and sign a covenant to carry on the movement for colonial self-government on constitutional lines.

TURNED 'EM OVER.

Deer River, Minn., Dec. 28.—The Great Northern passenger train from Superior for, early yesterday, was boarded by armed men, who proceeded to hold up the passengers. Some of the passengers tackled the robbers, knocked them down, disarmed them and turned them over to the sheriff.

ACT OF CONFISCATION

GERMAN WAREHOUSE SEIZED BY BRITISH.

Hamburg Firm Calls on Government to Seek Damages For Alleged Outrage.

Hamburg, Dec. 28.—It is stated that a warehouse belonging to the Hamburg firm of Wockhaus, and situated on the island of Abumusa, in the Persian Gulf, has been confiscated by the commander of the British warship Lapwing, on the ground that it contained contraband goods. The Hamburg firm has called upon the German foreign office to take energetic steps for the recovery of damages.

The firm issues a lengthy statement, in which it brands as ridiculous the assertion that the confiscated building held contraband, and alleges that the action of the British commander had no other object than to checkmate a successful German commercial enterprise, his real object being to transfer the oxide business which the Hamburg firm was conducting to the British hands and to rob the Hamburg-American line of a profitable freight traffic.

The statement further declares that the Lapwing brought an Arabian sheikh to the island of Abumusa, and that after the German firm's coxies had been driven back to the Persian mainland the sheikh prohibited the Germans from further working the oxide mines, although they had a contract for that purpose. The sheikh then fired upon the German firm's representatives.

Commenting upon the affair, the leading Hamburg journal says: "The British procedure is an act of violence of the worst kind and an outrageous breach of the law, which constitutes the sharpest contrast to the assiduous assurances of friendship of the British press."

"We must insist that the German foreign office shall take strong measures."

Colonists' Thoughtfulness.

Christ Church, N.Z., Dec. 28.—Cases of Canterbury mutton are being forwarded by Gormish residents in Christ Church, New Zealand, as Christmas fare for the inmates of the Redruth workhouse.

Six Children in 18 Months.

London, Dec. 28.—The wife of Alfred Holloway, of Market Dravton, gave birth, yesterday, to triplets. She also gave birth to triplets eighteen months ago, and to twins two years before that date.

Oh! my! the weather.

SHE BOWS TO HUSBAND

Former Actress Wins Parents by Charming Manner.

London, Dec. 28.—The Hon. Lyndhurst Bruce and his wife (Camille Clifford) are joggling along far more comfortably now, owing to the fact that Mr. Bruce put his foot firmly down in regard to the attention paid to the fair Camille by an admirer in the automobile business.

Moreover, Lord and Lady Aberdeen, who are tired of playing the parts of the unforbearing and irate parents, have accepted Camille, and the young couple went to the family place near Cardiff and spent a week-end, which was described by one of Mr. Bruce's friends as "formal" on the Saturday, "informal" on the Sunday and "familiar" on the Monday.

Camille made herself very charming, and completely thawed out Lady Aberdeen. The peer, however, was a little more difficult.

Mr. Bruce, who is making slow progress in business, has consented to receive some financial assistance from his father, and, altogether, the prospects of the young couple are far brighter than they were.

Irish Chief's Grave Discovered.

Dublin, Dec. 28.—Workmen who dislodged a cairn of stones while clearing some ground near Louisa, yesterday, found underneath a hollow chamber, containing ashes, bones and a bronze spearhead, which still retained high polish. The grave is believed to be that of a chief killed in a great battle, of which the tradition remains to the present day.

Dinner Sets

This is a BAKE SNAP. A pretty set of 97 pieces, English porcelain, nicely decorated and gold lined.

This set would cost you $10 in any other store. Our price, $9, for this week only. Special.

$6.25.

Robertson Bros.

REDUCES EXPENSES

Abolishes System of Keeping Full Staff in Each Household.

London, Dec. 28.—King Edward continues his work of economy in reducing the expenses of the royal household. It is his decisive aim to have the domestic work of his palaces done by the smallest possible staff, and he has abolished the system of keeping a full complement of servants at each of his residences.

Only a nucleus staff sufficient to keep the place in order is maintained at each palace, while the full staff accompanies the court wherever it goes.

In other ways the king has effected economies. Several superfluous officials have been dispensed with, and duties have been rearranged so that two or three men are now engaged on work that could be done by one. Vacancies in the household which his majesty does not think necessary to fill will remain vacant, and so on.

The amount of King Edward's household in this way since he came to the throne is enormous.

HEAVY SEAS.

Many Wrecks Are Reported on Coasts.

London, Dec. 28.—Owing to an easterly gale, terrible seas are running along the British and Irish coasts. Many wrecks have been reported. The Cunarder Lusitania, on the Sunday, the enter Queenstown. None of the incoming steamers sighted the Leyland line steamer Cambrian, before reported with her shaft broken, in tow of the steamer William Clif, and it is the opinion among seafaring men, that the Clif had to cast the Cambrian adrift. If this is the case the Clif will stand by the disabled vessel and take her to tow again when the weather moderates.

Entertainment at Arden.

Arden, Dec. 27.—The annual Christmas entertainment of the Methodist church Sunday school was held in the town hall, Arden, on Christmas eve and was a decided success. The choir was led by Rev. Mr. Sargent and the large gathering testified to the unity that exists among the Christian people of Arden and vicinity. The programme consisted of songs, solos, readings, drills and recitations. An address by Rev. Walter Cox, Anglican minister of Parham, was much appreciated. Proceeds of the evening, $33.20.

Phillipsville Cheese Factory Burned.

Phillipsville, Dec. 28.—The Phillipsville cheese factory, owned by Stevens and Halladay, caught fire in the drying room, about 9 p.m., and was burned to the ground. Most of the contents were saved, and mostly all of the cheese is thought there were eight or ten cheese burned. The factory was insured. A stable nearby was saved. The property was valued at about $1,500.

Killed by Whiskey.

St. John, N.B., Dec. 28.—John Maxwell, a ten-year-old boy, living at Benny Binyon, a station on the New Brunswick Southern railway, Charlotte county, died on Christmas Day from drinking too much whiskey. Maxwell and another lad while playing about the station, the day previous, discovered liquor in transit and drank some, with tragic consequences. The lad lived with his stepfather, named Cook. An inquest was held.

Mancheater, Dec. 28.—There are some curious features in the case of an old Mancheater woman who lived a simple and lonely life, and died of starvation, although she had over $22,500 in money and securities.

Mrs. Ellen Crosswell, a widow, lived her life quite apart from the outside world, occupying a house in Billington place, Clifford street, Chorlton-on-Medlock, a typical working-class district. On the afternoon of Wednesday the people who lived next door heard a noise like some one falling, but their knowledge of the eccentric habits of their neighbor led them to attach little importance to it. On the following Thursday and Friday mornings the postman received no answer to his repeated knocks, and when the rent collector called, to-day, he was told by the neighbors that the old woman had not been seen for a week.

The police were then informed and two constables burst open the door on the kitchen floor. She was fully dressed and the body bore no signs of violence, though it was in a neglected and enfeebled condition. There was little food in the house, and the place

Mancheater, Dec. 28.—There are some curious features in the case of an old Mancheater woman who lived a simple and lonely life, and died of starvation, although she had over $22,500 in money and securities.

Mrs. Ellen Crosswell, a widow, lived her life quite apart from the outside world, occupying a house in Billington place, Clifford street, Chorlton-on-Medlock, a typical working-class district. On the afternoon of Wednesday the people who lived next door heard a noise like some one falling, but their knowledge of the eccentric habits of their neighbor led them to attach little importance to it. On the following Thursday and Friday mornings the postman received no answer to his repeated knocks, and when the rent collector called, to-day, he was told by the neighbors that the old woman had not been seen for a week.

The police were then informed and two constables burst open the door on the kitchen floor. She was fully dressed and the body bore no signs of violence, though it was in a neglected and enfeebled condition. There was little food in the house, and the place

Mancheater, Dec. 28.—There are some curious features in the case of an old Mancheater woman who lived a simple and lonely life, and died of starvation, although she had over $22,500 in money and securities.

Mrs. Ellen Crosswell, a widow, lived her life quite apart from the outside world, occupying a house in Billington place, Clifford street, Chorlton-on-Medlock, a typical working-class district. On the afternoon of Wednesday the people who lived next door heard a noise like some one falling, but their knowledge of the eccentric habits of their neighbor led them to attach little importance to it. On the following Thursday and Friday mornings the postman received no answer to his repeated knocks, and when the rent collector called, to-day, he was told by the neighbors that the old woman had not been seen for a week.

The police were then informed and two constables burst open the door on the kitchen floor. She was fully dressed and the body bore no signs of violence, though it was in a neglected and enfeebled condition. There was little food in the house, and the place

Mancheater, Dec. 28.—There are some curious features in the case of an old Mancheater woman who lived a simple and lonely life, and died of starvation, although she had over $22,500 in money and securities.

Mrs. Ellen Crosswell, a widow, lived her life quite apart from the outside world, occupying a house in Billington place, Clifford street, Chorlton-on-Medlock, a typical working-class district. On the afternoon of Wednesday the people who lived next door heard a noise like some one falling, but their knowledge of the eccentric habits of their neighbor led them to attach little importance to it. On the following Thursday and Friday mornings the postman received no answer to his repeated knocks, and when the rent collector called, to-day, he was told by the neighbors that the old woman had not been seen for a week.

The police were then informed and two constables burst open the door on the kitchen floor. She was fully dressed and the body bore no signs of violence, though it was in a neglected and enfeebled condition. There was little food in the house, and the place

TO REWARD POLICEMAN

Arrest of Peddler Leads to Big Fortune.

Paris, Dec. 28.—A camelot, who hawks his wares on the boulevards, learned, yesterday, in a curious manner, that he had become heir to a large fortune.

A policeman arrested him in front of a theatre for a breach of some by-law or other, and took him to the nearest police station, where his name, age and birthplace, whereupon the commissary of police turned to register of missing friends. He compared an entry with the man, and asked: "Do you know we have been looking for you for some time?"

The camelot, gathering that he was to be charged with some serious offense, began vehemently to protest his innocence, but, the commissary cut short his excuses by telling him that he was heir to a fortune of $20,000, left him by an uncle.

"Now you may go," added the official, "it is certain that you will be able to pay your fine, so there is no need to keep you here."

When the man had recovered from his astonishment, he insisted on presenting his credentials to the town of his stock-in-trade, and he has promised a handsome reward to the policeman who put him in the way of getting the fortune by arresting him.

NEWS FROM NAPANEE

A COLLECTION OF VERY RARE COINS.

Marriage of Miss Nellie M. Bland and Alfred R. Wagar.—A Handsome Moose Head on Exhibition.

Napanee, Dec. 28.—Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Rockwell and grandson, Gordon, of Wellington; Rev. F. S. W. D. and Algernon Rockwell, of Chicago, spent Christmas week in town, guests of B. S. Rockwell, John street, and other relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Black and little son and Byrne Black, spent Christmas with their mother in Stirling. Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Fralick, Peterboro, spent Christmas with his parents. Mr. and Mrs. H. V. Fralick, Bridge street, W. A. Masters, Ottawa, spent Christmas with his family.

A quiet wedding was celebrated on Thursday, December 26th, at Trinity church parsonage, when Miss Nellie Bland, Napanee, was united in marriage to Alfred Richard Wagar, of Colorado Springs, formerly of Napanee. Rev. W. H. Emley performed the ceremony, after which the young couple left for their future home in Colorado Springs.

Miss Maggie Barrett returned home, last week, from a lengthy visit with friends in Winnipeg. Mrs. A. W. Grange, teacher of the ladies' Bible school, of Trinity Methodist Sunday school, was presented with a handsome Bible and hymn-book as a token of their esteem and love.

Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Collier and little son, Bruce, and W. H. Collier, Peterboro, spent Christmas with their parents, and the young couple left for their future home in Colorado Springs.

Miss Maggie Barrett returned home, last week, from a lengthy visit with friends in Winnipeg. Mrs. A. W. Grange, teacher of the ladies' Bible school, of Trinity Methodist Sunday school, was presented with a handsome Bible and hymn-book as a token of their esteem and love.

Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Collier and little son, Bruce, and W. H. Collier, Peterboro, spent Christmas with their parents, and the young couple left for their future home in Colorado Springs.

Miss Maggie Barrett returned home, last week, from a lengthy visit with friends in Winnipeg. Mrs. A. W. Grange, teacher of the ladies' Bible school, of Trinity Methodist Sunday school, was presented with a handsome Bible and hymn-book as a token of their esteem and love.

Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Collier and little son, Bruce, and W. H. Collier, Peterboro, spent Christmas with their parents, and the young couple left for their future home in Colorado Springs.

Miss Maggie Barrett returned