The groom-to-be was very much surprised when informed that he would have to be married by a minister and not a justice of the peace, but his surprise was still greater when informed that he would have to pay $2 for a marriage ticense and as much more to the minister who tied the knot. When, he finally understood all this he and his blushing, bride got in a corner and talked, the matter over. Would they be married here or go back to the Cape? All the time it was drawing nearer two o'clock, and the boat would leave at that hour. At last the man in the case put his foot down and said he was going to be married no matter how much it p.m. and had hardly got away from changed when informed he would have to stay in the city till Tuesday afteroon. The way that Canada and Canadian laws, especially those concerning marriages, were handled was not at all complimentary.
