FOR HONEST CITIZENSHIP W. S. ELLIS, B.A., SPEAKS ON THE SUBJECT.

Says Hope of Country is in the Independent Vote—Principle Should Be First, Party Second.

W. S. Ellis, B.A., principal of the Collegiate Institute, spoke on the subject of "Clean and Honest Citizenship," before the members of the Young Men's Club, at Queen Street Methodist church on Sunday afternoon. In the course of his remarks, Mr. Ellis pointed out some of the necessary things for good citizenship. It was first necessary that a man should be intelligent, he should become familiar with the conditions surrounding him in the world. It was necessary that he should have a capacity for learning, and be capable of exercising a proper judgment in the affairs of life. For a great many years there had been a strife between capital and labor. One party was pulling one way and the other party another way. Lack of judgment was shown, and the parties failed to come together, to make a settlement. There was selfishness, with the result that it proved a detriment to both sides. To bring about good citizenship, a man must make an honest living, and should also be industrious. He must be a man for securing information, so as to keep him abreast with the times. He must be industrious not only with his hands, but his head as well. He must also be a courageous man. He should have the courage to say "no," to things which were not right, and to turn against everything that was dishonest.

"You know that within very recent years," continued the speaker, "men have been put into the city council, to manage a plant of many thousands of dollars, who could not run a $500 grocery, and have failed. We have had in my time, men on the school board who could not run their own families, and they were sent there to manage the lives of two thousand or more people." The speaker pointed out that this sort of thing could not be remedied right off, but that a start could be made, and that reforms could be brought about gradually. It was a question that confronted the young men of today. Good influence counted for a great deal. The doctrines preached counted for little. It was that which a person did, that made for good influence. Resolutions were of no use. The good came as a result of a series of thought which becomes a habit. One must be willing to render service, not merely in the granting of a favor, or in the casting of a ballot. These were only small duties. A person had a great many to perform apart from these. He must render public service. It was unfortunate that nowadays, it was stated that good men could not be secured to serve in the council. The good men claimed that it would only be a waste of time for them to go into the council while a certain other element was there. In reply to this, the speaker would say that the good men should not hold back, but go to the council, and the other element would soon leave.

"The hope of the country is in the independent vote," added the speaker. "Turn against party for a principle. Principle should be first, and party second." In the mind of the speaker, one of the greatest dangers in parliament, would be an unreasonably large or small majority on either side. An unreasonably large majority would tend to make a government reckless, and an unreasonably small majority would tend to make some members dishonest. Another great danger was in having improper representatives. Our political system was a bad one. Two men were put up, and perhaps they were men one would not trust. Yet these men were put up by an organization and the voter had no choice. The remedy for all this rested upon the public as a whole, doing their duty. They should resolve not to stand for any wrong-doing. It was a move for the young men of today to declare that they would stand for nothing but what was honest and right. They should decide against everything that was dishonest to public property and friends and to that generally known as "crimes against the elector."

MISSIONS DEFENDED WHY CHRISTIAN NATIONS SHOULD INTERFERE

With the Religious Beliefs of Other Nations—A Sermon by Rev. Charles A. Sykes.

In Sydenham Street Methodist church, on Sunday evening, Rev. Charles A. Sykes preached a sermon dealing with foreign mission work. "Why should we interfere with the religious beliefs of other nations?" was his subject, his text being from Acts xvii, 33, "For as I passed by and beheld your devotions, I found an altar with this inscription, 'To the unknown God.' Him then I declare unto you." The speaker said that there were some in and outside the church who questioned the advisability of missions. The Chinese and Hindus have their own religion. Why should we interfere with them? When Paul crossed from Asia to Europe, he once for all solved the question for Hebrew thought was as far from Greek thought then, as English thought is from Chinese or Hindoo thought at the present day. It is preposterous for the Anglo-Saxon race to think that they have a monopoly on Christianity.

CONVENTION GOES ON. The St. Andrew's Brotherhood Convention will be held at Brockville, as planned. The report that the Bishop of Ontario had cancelled it is altogether unfounded.

They have it because it came into the hands of their ancestors, and they should be the last to object to missions among other people.

Mr. Sykes said if any other people were given the same chance, the same time to overcome the difficulties, he would have given the Anglo-Saxons, like results would appear in abundance. As the thousands and tens of thousands of converts during the past few years will show.

"Since the triumphs of Christianity in Terra del Fuego, and other places," said Mr. Sykes, "the object of our mission has not changed. While Christianity is adapted to child nations, it is a different matter to teach it to nations who have a religion of their own."

Among the lowest races the missions have been successful and those who had at first objected to the missionaries have now erected monuments to them. "There is no race where Christianity has yet met its Waterloo," said the speaker, "unless with the Jews and the followers of Mohammed and here not as many have been converted."

The speaker said that if the Christians were to admit that Christ was a son of the west, it would narrow the scope of Christianity and it would begin to fade and have no significance to anyone. "We can understand Jesus for all the world, or Buddha for all the world, but we cannot understand two or three in different countries," stated Mr. Sykes. The preacher said it was too late in the day to say that Christianity was a racial religion, because we cannot let those people alone now if we wanted to, our missionaries and commerce are going among them and they are sending their best brains to us to be educated and learn our way and manners, which means that their faith in their own religions and superstitions are being undermined.

And when the British government takes away the goods of India at one stroke they will have to build others for them. When they send men over to see how we do things, how we make warships, and make whiskey, they are also observing our religion, as their reports to their governments show. And they report that they cannot understand western civilization without introducing western Christianity and the only way they can do this is by the teaching of Jesus Christ, or they will fall into a deplorable state.

Gift At His Retirement. The recent presentation of an address and a testimonial by a committee of Liverpool, Eng., and Canadian citizens to John Ennis, a County Wexford man, shows an appreciation for Irish pluck and intelligence in the commercial pursuits of England. Mr. Ennis was born in Ballymitty, county Wexford, a good many years ago. He went from his native place to Liverpool when a lad, and by energy and attention to duty pushed himself high up in the commercialism of England's greatest seaport. He joined the Allan Steamship company as one of its officials and soon rose to the position of manager. Mr. Ennis is the uncle of Mrs. M. D. Tetro, Kingston, and Mrs. J. F. Graves, Saginaw, Michigan, formerly of Picton, N.Y. Mr. Ennis has retired from business life and taken up abode in his native village.

He bore his sufferings with the greatest patience to the end. Much sympathy is expressed to those surviving.

DAMAGE TO HOUSE. Telephone Pole Fell On It During The Storm. While the severe storm was raging, on Sunday morning, at 11:30 o'clock, a telephone pole fell on a house occupied by G. W. Hentig, at 558 Princess street, and although not doing a great deal of damage, gave the members of the family a good deal of excitement.

The pole struck the front of the house, and there was a fall in plaster as a result. There was a rumor around that considerable damage had been done, but Mr. Hentig stated, to a Whig representative, that the damage would be very slight. The telephone wires were laden with sleet, and the weight of the wires, together with the heavy wind, caused the pole to fall.

While the ancient ceremony is celebrated inside the church the music continues, and boys keep up a dancing at the door. Then the procession is reformed, the bridegroom mounts the cart beside the bride, the simple house of wood and stone is reached and he carries her over the threshold into the scenes of her new life. There she will winnow and dry the maize, hang the tobacco leaves in the loft, help with the vintage and the beasts, work the wooden loom, give her husband food, and rear children to repeat the way of life with little change.

In spite of the inclement weather, there was a very good attendance at the boys' meeting in the Y.M.C.A. Sunday morning, which was addressed by Mr. Burton. In the afternoon, W. H. Brinnett, of Toronto, gave most interesting address at the men's meeting.

SEVERE SLEET STORM DID MUCH DAMAGE OVER THE CITY.

Telegraph and Telephone Wires Disarranged—The Street Cars Had a Hard Tussle to Keep the Tracks Clear.

Sunday's storm was quite severe, and a lot of damage was done. Quite a gale developed, and the weather was most disagreeable by driving rain and sleet. Trees, poles and houses with a thick coating of ice made a magnificent sight. The trees suffered, however, many branches being broken during the gale.

A considerable damage was done all over the city, especially to the telephone, telegraph and electric wires. Limbs of trees were blown down, and in some cases came crashing through windows.

The men from the electric light works were kept busy all day, repairing broken wires in different sections of the city. By evening everything was in repair, and good service was given. The street railway system was in a bad way. The cars were out all day, but could do very little against the sleet. The rails were simply one mass of ice and, the whole line had to be practically chopped out. About five o'clock in the afternoon, Superintendent Nickle had the belt line clear, and then car No. 21 burned out at the Y.M.C.A. switch and had to be left all night. The cars had been running all Saturday night, but could not keep ahead of the storm.

Sunday morning the walking was very bad, but the light snowfall in the afternoon made the surface of the walks fairly secure. Between Belleville and Napanee, the gale was so fierce that a number of telegraph poles along the G.T.R. were blown down. Fortunately they fell away from the tracks. On Princess street three telephone poles were carried to the ground by the force of the wind and the weight of the ice upon them.

BRIDE OF THE CAUCASUS. Escorted to Wedding With Much Merrymaking.

Harper's Weekly. The sound of low music is heard along the valley. Here comes the bridal procession itself, a crowd on foot bearing it company. In front walks a merryman holding out a long wooden skewer in either hand. In one skewer are slabs of bread transfixed on the other, fragments of cooked meat, cooling in the autumn air. At his side trots a friend with dripping winekins under his arm—a bagpipe full of mirth.

One foot of the skin is untied, and only held together by finger and thumb. For every passerby upon the road must drink and each must take his bit of bread and meat from the skewers, that, having enjoyed the kindly fruits of the earth, he may wish the bride fertility and go upon his way in pleasant mood.

Behind the hospitable food and drink comes music, most lavish of the arts, pouring itself out, as the birds sing, to all who are near enough to hear. Usually the musicians go on foot before the bride's carriage, but if they can borrow an extra horse, they are certainly easier to keep time together when one has not to watch the rocks upon the road, or wade knee deep across the river beds.

Last comes the bride in bullock cart or two-horsed phaeton, shaken but glorified. Her eyes keep up a dancing Georgian fashion. Round the top of her head is a shining black ring, much the same in effect as the ring that Zulu chiefs enwreath in their hair. On each side of the face long curls hang down, usually false, for they are frankly attached to the ring and form a large article of commerce in all Georgian towns. Over rings and curls and all floats the characteristic white gauze veil, trimmed with lace along the edge for the happy, but shorn of all beauty for widows or for the mother whose baby is dead. So the bride comes at her side sits the next prettiest girl of the village, to keep her in countenance and divide the gaze of unconsiderate or too admiring males.

While the ancient ceremony is celebrated inside the church the music continues, and boys keep up a dancing at the door. Then the procession is reformed, the bridegroom mounts the cart beside the bride, the simple house of wood and stone is reached and he carries her over the threshold into the scenes of her new life. There she will winnow and dry the maize, hang the tobacco leaves in the loft, help with the vintage and the beasts, work the wooden loom, give her husband food, and rear children to repeat the way of life with little change.
