TOLD HER BROTHER

A Murder Mystery Has Finally Been Solved.

Daughter Killed Father Who Objected to Intimacy With Lover—A Confession Made on Death Bed.

Topeka, Kan., Jan. 29.—"George, I was the cause of father's death. Don't tell anyone unless you have to," FLORA.

The above confession, written and signed on her deathbed by Flora Tennyson, will, it is believed, clear up the mystery which has surrounded the murder of her father, David T. Tennyson, which occurred on February 27th, 1906, near the town of Frankfort, in Marshall county, about sixty miles north-west of this city. For nearly two years the authorities have vainly endeavored to unravel the mystery and obtain the necessary evidence against the guilty parties. The murder occurred on the Tennyson farm, one mile east of Frankfort. On the night of the crime Mr. Tennyson and his wife, who were elderly people and well-to-do, were sitting in the living room of their home.

A daughter, Mrs. Flora Brock, who had, however, been separated from her husband and who went under the name of Flora Tennyson, was in the sitting-room with her parents. The only other members of the immediate family to be lived with the parents was George Tennyson, a son of twenty-one years. George went to town that night. A little before eight o'clock, Flora went to her room which was upstairs.

Mr. Tennyson sat near the centre of the room with his back to Mrs. Tennyson, and was reading a paper. Suddenly there was a tremendous explosion accompanied by a crash of glass. The concussion extinguished the lamps in the house and stunned Mrs. Tennyson, who believed that a lamp had exploded. When she recovered from the shock, she groped her way to her husband, but could not arouse him. She then hurried to Flora's room and found her daughter about half undressed, just getting ready to retire for the night. The daughter was unmoved by the explosion. She afterwards stated that she thought it was a gun shot fired by a neighbor to scare the coyotes from his sheep.

Mrs. Tennyson and her daughter hurried downstairs, where they found the father dead, lying limp in his chair. A hole in the back of his head near the base of the brain told the story of the shooting.

The authorities learned of the crime that night and at once took up the search for the murderer or murderers. Bloodhounds were put on the case and special detectives employed, but never was sufficient evidence brought to light to justify an arrest. A print of a woman's shoe was found right in line with the probable path taken by the murderer. It measured exactly with Flora's foot. The sheriff located an old shot gun belonging to the family in a storehouse near the house, which contained an empty shell. This shell smelled of having been freshly discharged and the detectives were of the opinion that this was the weapon used in the killing.

Within a few weeks after the murder of her father, Flora Tennyson was taken sick and died. It was known that before the tragedy she had quarrelled violently with her father on several occasions because of the objections of the father to the visits of a young man named Horace Trooper to Flora. But George Tennyson, the son had also quarrelled with his father many times over money matters, so that so far as a motive was concerned the authorities were unable to make a decision. Soon after Flora's death the son George left Marshall county and bought a farm in Ottawa county. It was the general opinion when he left Frankfort that he knew more of the truth than he cared to tell. But nothing was ever done in the matter and no arrests were made.

Two weeks ago, however, interest in the famous case was revived by the action of some of the relatives of the murdered man. Accompanied by Marshall county officers, they went to the home of George Tennyson and formally charged him with knowledge of the crime. He was taken to town and severely cross-examined for several hours. For a time he steadfastly denied that he knew any more concerning the tragedy than he had already told. Under the sweating process, however, he finally broke down and sobbingly confessed to the secret that he said he had kept since his sister Flora's death. He said that on the day before his sister died he was sitting by her bed tending her. She had not been talking or near for several days. She made known that she wanted a pencil and paper, which her brother gave her. She wrote: "George, I was the cause of father's death. Don't tell anyone unless you have to," which she signed. This "confession" of George Tennyson, produced from his vault in the Ottawa bank and handed it over to the officers. It is now believed that Mr. Tennyson's objection to the intimacy between his daughter and Horace Trooper prompted the crime, and every effort is being made to identify any other person who was implicated in the murder.

THE GREAT OIL MAN.

He is Much Interested in Standard Oil.

Henry M. Flagler

Henry M. Flagler, one of New York's money kings, a big factor in the Standard Oil company and one of John D. Rockefeller's two original partners in the oil business in Cleveland, O., was born at Canandaigua, N.Y., in 1839. He was first a clerk in a country store, but soon fired of this and went to Saginaw, Mich., and later drifted to Cleveland and became interested in the oil refining business. He met John D. Rockefeller and soon went into partnership with the oil king. Both his wealth looked up in the Standard Oil. He owns a number of magnificent hotels at Florida winter resorts and over 600 miles of railway track in Florida.

Percy Boyne, Woodville, Ont., has confessed to the Detroit police that he murdered Mrs. Corneia Welch, in that city, three weeks ago.

FOR SALE—A COLLEGE.

Des Moines Bricklayer Has One He Doesn't Want.

Des Moines, Ia., Jan. 29.—J. C. Fein, a bricklayer, has become heir to a college which he cannot use. A relative has willed him Shurtzoff College in Illinois, and he admits he has an elephant on his hands, not having fitted himself to become owner of an educational institution. He says his ancestor gave all his money to found the college to spite immediate heirs and provided that the institution should revert to his lineal descendants. Fein has no ambition to run a college, and is looking for a prospective buyer while he continues laying bricks.

WEDS WIFE'S GIRL FRIEND.

Farmer Carries Out Wish of Dying Woman.

Pontiac, Mich., Jan. 29.—John Arthur, forty-four years old, a well-to-do farmer of Farmington, was left a widower, his wife's dying request being that he send to England for Margaret March, one of her girlhood friends, and induce her to accept a position as housekeeper on the Arthur farm. The dying wish was carried out and last week Miss March accepted a life contract as housekeeper by becoming the wife of Arthur. She is twenty-eight years old.

A New Sensation.

London, Jan. 29.—A new sensation in the Bruce case has been afforded by Miss Mary Robinson, one of the witnesses. Miss Robinson has thrown over Solicitor Kimber, and refused to see anything in the case, she gets more sympathy and advice in prison than she received from Kimber.

NEW LEGISLATION COMING

Law Makers Believe Business Has Been Over-Reformed.

Albany, Jan. 29.—The attitude of the legislature has changed, apparently, this year to a feeling that the life insurance business may have been over-reformed, and that now the law should be carefully reviewed and such amendments adopted as experience has shown to be necessary to permit the business to successfully conduct their business.

Without doubt, after the illumination thrown on the subjects by financial condition during 1907, the provision limiting the surplus fund to five per cent. of the assets will be repealed or amended, while there is almost certain to be a change in the section restricting the expense of new business and limiting the compensation of agents.

Many of the legislators were none too enthusiastic over this expense provision when first adopted, and the large falling off in the amount of new business produced by the New York companies since it took effect, is so great in every case as to lead to a reduction in the total amount of insurance outstanding, together with the complaint of agents from far and near that they cannot handle their business efficiently.

PRESSURE WAS BROUGHT.

To Cause Transvaal to Change Its Restrictions.

London, Jan. 29.—A blue book, dealing with the Transvaal's treatment of Asiatics has been issued. It shows how the imperial government, as a result of representations made to the Earl of Elgin, secretary of the colonies, by John Morley, secretary for India, and Edward Grey, the foreign secretary, brought pressure on the Transvaal to modify the proposed restrictions on Asiatics before the registration act was sanctioned and obtained assurances which satisfied the colonial office. Mr. Morley warned the Earl of Elgin that the act would have an unfortunate effect on public opinion in India, and urged strong objection to certain clauses. Sir Edward Grey pointed out that the act would involve friction with foreign states and he insisted upon limiting the Transvaal powers of expulsion. It was owing to the Transvaal yielding on certain points that the act was voted. As it stood, originally, the act was considerably more drastic in some of its provisions.

CONDITION IMPROVED.

Premier Gave Dinner, Last Night, to His Followers.

London, Jan. 29.—The condition of the premier, Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, is so much improved that he was able to preside at a meeting of the cabinet, yesterday. Sir Henry gave a banquet, last night, to his followers as is customary on the eve of the assembling of parliament, but he did not risk attending the reception given by Lady Beauchamp in his behalf. He will continue to observe all precautions; but it is expected he will be present at the state opening of parliament.

Change in Office.

London, Jan. 29.—Sir William Robson, the solicitor-general, has been appointed attorney-general in place of Sir John Walton, who died recently. Samuel Thomas Evans, M.P., of the Middle division of Glamorganshire, becomes solicitor-general in succession to Sir William Robson.

Sir Robert Hart, the inspector-general of Chinese customs, is to leave for England in May, for a year's furlough. The Chinese government has conferred on him rank equal to that of a president of the foreign body.

The thief who stole the three miniature portraits of the king has been arrested in London. The pictures, which were worth $1,000, he had sold to a saloon-keeper for $100.

Prof. William Ocker has been appointed to the council of the National Association for the Prevention of Consumption.

There is a bill before the domes to double track the whole Western railway.

JAPANESE ISSUES

HON. R. L. BORDEN SPOKE ON THE MATTER.

Canada Has Handed Over to Japan Control of Immigration, Which Should Remain, Her Own—Sir Willfrid's Strong Reply.

From Our Own Correspondent.

Ottawa, Jan. 29.—Hon. R. L. Borden's reply to the statement of the Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux regarding his mission to Japan in the interests of the restriction of immigration to Canada, was the feature of the sitting of the commonsense yesterday.

Sir Willfrid stated that Ambassador Bryce, while in Ottawa, on his forthcoming visit, would discuss questions relative to uniform regulations regarding marine and fisheries and also regarding the distribution of water power.

R. L. Borden, leader of the opposition, replied to Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux's report of his recent mission to Japan. He said that the minister, in justifying the Japanese government for the conditions which prevailed in Canada during the past twelve months had himself condemned the Canadian government for its failure to meet the conditions during the same period. "If Japan is not to blame for the Japanese influx the Laurier administration must be," he said.

"As for the mission itself, it must have any success in it than it should be given to the British officials in Japan. $500 worth of telegrams between Tokyo and Ottawa, and Ottawa and London would probably have given equally good results. There was a marked difference between the British treaty with Japan in 1894 and the American treaty of the same year with Japan. The United States reserved the right to control immigration. Britain did not."

Mr. Borden drew attention to the order of the privy council in 1895, which communicated to the Japanese government that a provision should be added to the treaty regarding the restriction of immigration. This was subsequently forwarded to the British authorities.

The purpose of this order-in-council was that the Japanese government by the British administration in October, 1896, the Japanese government agreed, except in respect to the restriction of artisans, to allow the same proviso to other self-governing colonies of the empire.

That the conservative government of that day had made complete arrangements regarding the restriction, which, however, did not come into effect because the succeeding liberal administration delayed for several years,

Odds and ends in every department of this store must go. We want every inch of room available for the New Spring Goods which will shortly be to hand. TOMORROW you'll find some interesting bargains in the Ready-to-Wear section. Read this list down and see if there is anything you need.

Some person, kindly disposed, became aware of their plight and the ladies were sent to a private boarding house until some steps could be taken to compel Calcott to supply them with funds to take them back to Calgary. He refused to do this at first, placing emphasis upon the fact that he was willing to marry the girl and give both of them a home.

The police were appealed to and it is said that upon receiving a gentle hint, Calcott put up part of the railway fare back to Calgary. The balance was contributed by charitably disposed persons and the sisters are now on their way back to the west.

Calcott has something of a reputation as a hypochondriac, but it seems he couldn't hypnotize the English girl to marry him even if her anxiety to capture a husband did cause her to travel over 2,000 miles.

The senate has decided that when a standing committee or a special committee reports recommending the passing of a bill containing a declaration that the work or undertaking is for the general advantage of Canada, or two or more of the provinces, the report shall state the grounds on which the declaration should be made. ## ANARCHY REIGNS

ARMY RIFLES STOLEN IN CZAR'S WIDE EMPIRE.

An Anti-Dynastic Movement Spreads Steadily and Arrests Are of Daily Occurrence.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 29.—Deplorable occurrences are chronicled daily which interest foreigners only as reminders that the optimism displayed by the cabinet is premature, and that the "revolutionary" movement is slowly drifting seaward. In the struggle between the government and the revolutionary movement the authorities are being systematically baffled, despite occasional disclosures of plots and numerous important arrests. This most valuable documents respecting the revolutionary propaganda in the army, were first seized by the Finnish police, but next day were captured by the conspirators. A few days later important papers addressed by the "chief of police" here to the chief of police in Pskoye and Petrohof were abstracted at the railway station and never recovered.

Among various ranks and conditions the dynastic movement is making steady progress. Yesterday numerous arrests were effected among the student citizens of Dorpat University, including a professor, two lecturers, and one graduate, whose papers were forged. More extraordinary still is the clever abstraction of sixty rifles from the Caspian infantry regiment, the officers of which are described as being utterly depressed in consequence.

The rifles were "well looked after" in the regimental depot, but on Wednesday night they were mysteriously transferred to the revolutionists' safekeeping. Interesting is the circumstance that this clever coup was carried out, not in St. Petersburg, or a big city, but at Petrohof, where their majestic residence during the summer months. Telegrams were dispatched in all directions, and the strictest secrecy of boxes and cases was ordered, but in vain.
