TRAINER MAULED BY LION

While Stooping and Neglecting to Keep Eye on Animal He is Attacked.

IN CAGE.

London, Feb. 25 .- An exciting in dent occurred during the second perormance, on Thursday night, at Purchase's Menagerie, at present located at Battersea, a large African lion, named Wallace, attacked and mauled its trainer, known as Marco.

Marco neglected to keep his eye steadily on the animal as he was leaving the cage, and as he was stooping to unfasten the girdle, it sprang after him, striking him with one of its paws on the back. Marco's clothing was torn, and he fell back bleeding, with his face to the floor of the cage. Wallace placed a paw between the man's shoulders, but was driven off by Mr. Purchase's son with a long iron fork. Marco immediately jumped to his feet, and under his gaze the lion backed into a corner. The trainer then drove the animal round the cage, made him jump over a board, left him standing on his hind legs. Immediately Marco had left the cage however, the lion sprang forward and pave vent to his rage against the
