CHURCH LIFE AND WORK

DR. MACKIE ADVOCATES PASTORAL TEACHERS.

As An Addition to the Presbyterian Church—He Speaks About Citizenship Education and Dancing.

In his report on Church Life and work in Kingston presbytery, Rev. Dr. Mackie has the following remarks to make: On Church Extension—What shall we do with those who have lapsed from ordinances? Shall we in any way after our services so as to make them more attractive? No proposal of any such thing comes from any quarter. No one seems to think that the reason for lapsing is to be found in the services. One says that they have been reduced to the minimum of brevity; they have been embellished with music, instrumental and vocal, increasing enormously congregational expenditure, but without any striking effect—the lapses remain. In such an answer the remedy resorted to seems to indicate the social rank of the lapsed. Ornate ritual, and there is little room for that in Presbyterian worship, and musical embellishments are not a special appeal to those at the foot of the ladder, reaching little thinking less, struggling to get a bare sufficiency of the bread that perisheth, but it is a clear indication that lapsed masses are in all the classes, the highest and the lowest. When writers not observing of actual facts, state, in dealing with the question of non-clubbing, that the church has lost her hold on the working men; that she is becoming, or has become, the luxury of the rich; that she is the purchased ally of the millionaire magnate; the capitalist, the mammoth combine of mammoth, we never back put down your pen and look at the church. Working men and their families are the majority of our worshippers; are the most generous contributors to her maintenance and enter almost entirely her Sabbath school teachers and workers in every department; and her ministry is more and more recruited from the humble homes of the horny-handed toilers. Such teaching is not true to fact, is false, and is this case eminently hurtful; calculated, if received, to alienate from the church what is called the middle class and the lower class of the people, her very best friends; to poison the chalice and assassinate the priest; to believe that the only way to a revolution that will give every man his supposed rights and fair share of the prosperity of the world is the overthrow of Christ's holy church, like her blessed Founder, the true and impartial friend of man, whether rich or poor, whether they are dutiful or unfaithful.

It would appear, therefore, that to reach the lapsed, the non-churchgoers, is not the vain trucking of sermons, the smoothing of her teachings, the lowering of her standard, but the bold confronting of falsehood with the truth, and the loud and constant proclamation that man in whatever position he is in, and whatever session he may have, is in absolute need of the church and her divine ministry and ordinances, if life is not eternal, devilish, ending in death—the destruction of every feature that could have been wrought into the image of God again. To do this there is need for a new order in the ministry, not after the pattern of evangelists or revivalists, but pastoral teachers, drawn from each class, and designated for work each in his own class, the nobleman for the nobleman; the employer for the employer; and the laborer for the laborer; one of the same sphere and, therefore, having no difficulty of access, and having free and sympathetic understanding of each other's views and needs and dangers. The labors of such consecrated men conducted by the authority of the church would, with the blessing of the Lord upon them, be streams of fresh life flowing from every class into the heart of the church, and the multiplication of testimony to the power invested in her, to better and bless the children of men from the present and future.

Political Life Improving.

Under this head of citizenship there is a general complaint that political partisanship runs into almost every movement of public life, necessitating the constant vigilance of those who would discriminate and desire every question to be settled on its own merits. Still there is a consensus of opinion that partisanship has retreated to a very great extent from dishonorable and corrupting methods. Parliamentary elections are said to be purer, and greater importance is attached to the moral character of those who are candidates for parliamentary honors. To the credit of the community, and the hope of righteousness prevailing, there is a growing desire and endeavor to be represented in parliament by no man however ever conspicuous in his qualifications, whose personal life is immoral or even suspected to be so; and there is more than at any time the courage of such convictions, confined to neither political party, that demands the retirement from public positions of men who have proved themselves unworthy of public esteem. At present it appears that more than ever in the past personal moral character is regarded as an indispensable qualification for obtaining a passport to a parliamentary career or holding a government appointment. So rapid has become the growth of this feeling and so resolute has the will of the people become that the party that persists in the retention of men in office who have lost their moral character, prepares the surest and speediest means for its own extinction from power. Above approach and beyond suspicion seems to be the cry of the people as they see candidates advancing to constituencies, and successful men occupying seats in cabinets.

The public no doubt has had much to do in bringing about such a state of mind, and purifying and elevating the tone of political society. All our sessions reply that questions affecting the national welfare whether they have gone into the arena of party politics or not are legitimate sub-

OPPOSE LARGER TAX

ON RADIAL RAILWAY LINES IN ONTARIO.

The Canadian Press Association Wants Libel Law Amended. So As to Make Others Co-Defendants.

Toronto, March 6.—A deputation representing the various street railway interests of the province waited upon Hon. Mr. Hendrie and Hon. Mr. Matheson, this morning. They pointed out that a bill before the legislature proposes to increase the taxation of radial lines by fully fifty per cent, and said if this was done it would have the effect of preventing radial railway extension in the province, as some of the roads were not now paying fixed charges.

The libel law as it affects newspapers, was discussed by the Canadian Press Association, to-day, and it was decided to appoint a committee from the executive to wait upon the attorney-general to have the law amended. It was stated in the discussion that judges had a prejudice against newspapers. One time the newspapers wanted was a measure of protection in publishing statements from a public platform or at least making the person responsible for the statements co-defendants in a libel action.

FISH THAT GLOW.

Some Deep Sea Creatures Able to Shed a Phosphorescent Light.

The inhabitants of the ocean vary in many respects, according to the depth at which they live, but most of all in their powers of vision. Fish that live at very great depths have either no eyes at all or enormously big ones. There are two methods of getting about in the gloomiest abysses—by delicate organs of touch and by sight—that collects the few rays of light due to phosphorescence or other accidental sources.

The fish which live near the top of the ocean have smaller eyes than those that live at the bottom. One hundred and twenty fathoms deeper, where daylight disappears, the eyes are bigger still. Beyond the depth of two hundred fathoms small eyes prevail, with long feelers to supplement them. At this depth, in fact, sight is practically useless. In the greatest abysses the fish are usually blind, feeling their way about solely by means of their sensitive feelers. Some indeed show signs externally of having once possessed eyes, but that is all.

In others—the oldest and most confirmed abyssal species—the eye has disappeared altogether externally, though traces of it are still to be recognized, embedded deeply in the tissue of the head, or in the form of a system of hollows in the skull or about the body which hold a kind of phosphorescent slime. Others have round or oval shining opalescent spots, placed on the head or along the body or tail.
