WATCH THE STOMACH.

HAVE YOU ANY OF THESE SYMPTOMS?

If you have either variable appetite, a faint gnawing feeling at the pit of the stomach, unsatisfied hunger, a loathing of food, rising and souring of food, a painful load at the pit of the stomach, choking sensations in the throat, headache and dullness of spirits, constipated bowls with alternate diarrhoea, are you gloomy and miserable?

THEN YOU ARE A DYSPEPTIC.

The cure is careful diet, slow eating, thoroughly chewing the food; avoid drinking at meals.

Keep regular habits, shun stimulants, tone the digestive powers and regulate the stomach and bowels with Burdock Blood Bitters. It has cured the worst forms of dyspepsia, even of twenty-five years duration. Mrs. Geo. Parks, Cooper, Ont., was cured; she writes: "I have used Burdock Blood Bitters and find that few medicines can give such great relief in dyspepsia and stomach troubles. I was troubled for a number of years with dyspepsia and could get no relief until I tried B.B.B. It helped me right away and I think it a wonderful remedy. I would recommend it to all sufferers from dyspepsia.

Cough Caution

Never, positively never poison your lungs. If a cough—even from a simple cold only—you do not always heal, soothe, and ease the irritated bronchial tubes. Don't blindly suppress it with a stupefying poison. It's strange how some thing finally come about. For twenty years Dr. Shoop has constantly warned people not to take cough mixtures or prescriptions containing Opium, Chloroform, or similar poisons. And now—a little late though—Congress says "Put it on the label. If poisons are in your Cough Mixture." Good! Very good! Hereafter thiverymonth and others, should insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. No poison marks on Dr. Shoop's labels—and none in the medicine, else it must by law be on the label. And it's not only safe, but it is said to be by those that know it best, a truly remarkable cough remedy. Take no chance then, particularly with your children. Insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Compare carefully the Dr. Shoop package with others and note the difference. No poison marks there! You can always be on the safe side by demanding

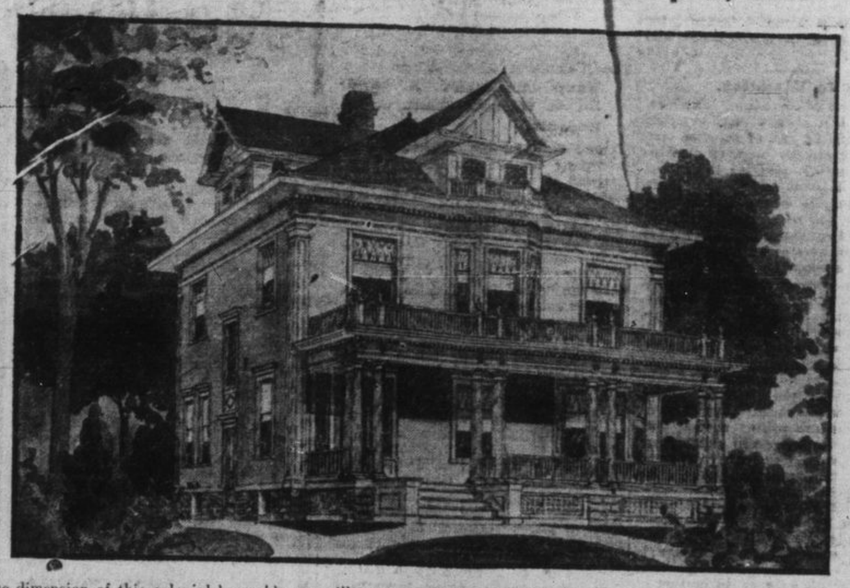
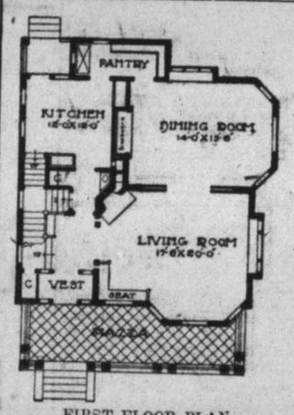
A COMMON SENSE COLONIAL.

Designed by Chas. S. Sedgwick, Architect, Minneapolis, Minn.



The dimension of this colonial house is 32 by 39 feet, exclusive of piazza. The treatment of the exterior is quite simple and symmetrical with corner pilasters, a broad piazza across the front, plain Doric cornice and treatment throughout.

The simplicity and refinement of this house will commend the design to many—it will always look well and will never "go out of style." The plainness of this house is relieved by bay windows in the first storey and a projected bay window in the centre of the front in the second storey. The roof is medium high pitched, with ample dormer windows lighting the third storey on each side.

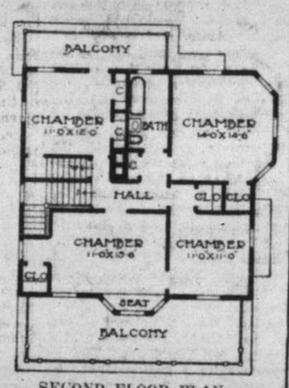


FIRST FLOOR PLAN.

The plan of the interior is convenient with all modern improvements and a little removed from the common plan. The stairway, located at the left of the entrance, is a combination stairway with a section leading from kitchen up to the main platform and thence to the second storey, and stairs underneath to basement, with outside entrance at grade line. There is one central chimney, with an open fireplace in the large living room, spacious dining-room back of the living-room, and large ample pantry opening through in connection with the kitchen.

The second storey has four good chambers, ample closets and bathroom, and large rear balcony with door opening on to same. The attic stairs lead up over the main stairs, with large amusement-room and servants' room in the third storey. The estimated cost of this house, exclusive of heating and plumbing, is $4,500.

The interior finish is hardwood in the first storey, with polished hardwood floors, and the second storey in white enamel, with red mahogany finish for doors. The house will look best painted on the outside pure white, with a green roof or a very light tint of cream color would look well.



SECOND FLOOR PLAN.

QUEEN OF PORTUGAL

SOME INTERESTING NEWS CONCERNING HER.

Most Pathetic Figure is the Boy King—The Late King Had a Presentiment of What Was Coming.

London, March 6.—A charming little story is told about the Queen of Portugal, of her capacity for nursing. When walking in a wood with one of her ladies in waiting, she heard a cry, and found that a wood cutter had been injured by the falling of a branch.

The queen immediately herself attended to him, and then assisted him to his cabin. Later she called to see her patient, who said "I shall never be able to repay you, but when I am better I will bring you a basket of fresh eggs and butter, in order to thank you."

The queen visited England, but a few months ago, and the king in 1904 as the guest of King Edward. Dom Carlos was one of the happiest men, one of the merriest, and one who took his life from the most joyful standpoint.

Standing whilst shooting one snowy morning at Wood Norton in Worcestershire, he said to a friend: "When I am in England I am happy. Everyone is so kind, they make you feel as if you were the special guest of each one.

"Everytime I come I am more at home," and then, pointing to the snow and the bleak landscape, he said "I love it." He seemed like a merry schoolboy who was enjoying his holidays, Staying at Chatsworth with the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire, he bombarded his ambassador with snowballs.

The Marquis de Soveral was sauntering out with two ladies when King Carlos opened fire. He dared not return the shell, but the ladies speedily protected their escort and a merry scene ensued.

The freedom of England was to King Carlos the greatest joy. As he wandered through the streets with a cigar in his mouth he felt safe.

The great strong man with a kindly heart and a genial face and a ready laugh, this was the man who in a few brief moments was hurried from his throne into the world beyond the grave.

The actual story of the murder has been told again and again in the journals of every nation during the last two weeks. Never has a greater tragedy been enacted, the husband, the wife and the two boys, the woman endeavoring to protect the son, warding off death with a bouquet, the mournful vigil of the two queens through that dark night, in the presence of death which had come with such terrible swiftness.

The king had a presentiment of what would happen, for when he was presented by Senor Franco with the document which caused such deep dissatisfaction, he said, "I am signing my death sentence, it does not matter much!" and then he affixed his name.

The very morning he left to go to Lisbon, his usually happy face was gloomy and sad. Undoubtedly he had one of those strange forebodings which so often foreshadow disaster.

But in all this, almost the most pathetic figure is the Boy King, who has succeeded to the difficult task of maintaining peace in this troublous kingdom.

When the boy, who is now king received the new premier, the old Admiral J Ferreira de Amaral, and the other ministers he had summoned to his assistance, the boy threw himself weeping into the old admiral's arms, and said, "My dear friend, I have no knowledge of kingcraft, I know nothing of anything except school books and my studies.

I want to take over the management of the kingdom and I want you to try and make everybody happy." Should these words be prophetic of the aim of his life they are indeed significant.

When he met his ministers of state, and made his formal speech, he said, "I am very young, and I have no experience, and I beg of you to help me to do whatever may be right and best for my country." And so the boy lays aside the light-heartedness of youth, and takes the thorny crown of a reigning sovereign.

Portugal is now but a small kingdom, but it has inherited a great tradition, and the future of the Portuguese depends much upon the way in which they rally to their young monarch, not only for the benefit of the little kingdom itself, but for the better ruling of such domains as they possess in other lands, where the grim shadows of slavery has been cast, and deeds as dark as those of the Congo have been perpetrated.

Not Taking Chances.

Westminster Gazette.

In a certain village a woman fell into a trance. After the custom she was wrapped in a sheet to be carried to the cemetery, but as the procession was passing through a narrow road a thorn of the wayside pierced the sheet, wounded her so that the blood flowed and she awoke.

Fourteen years later the woman really died, and again was borne toward the grave.

As the procession passed through the narrow road the husband called:

"Not so near the hedge, friends! Not so near the hedge!"

Astonishing Information.

Two men wrote to the editor of a correspondence column of a magazine Mr. A. asking what to do for teething babies and Mr. C. asking how to get rid of grasshoppers. The editor in answering got the names mixed, so the man asking about babies got the reply:

"If you want to get rid of the little pests, cover them up with grass and set fire to it."

And the one who asked about the grasshoppers got the reply:

"If they are teething, give them a warm bath and rub their gums with boneset every day."

NO HARM IN ONE KISS.

A Bishop Defends the Action of a Pastor.

Rev. Charles Tyler Olmsted, bishop of the diocese of Central New York, in an interview published in the New York Sun, in regard to Rev. E. Warren Saphore, rector of All Saints' church, Syracuse, who was accused, last week, by seventeen-year-old Viola Hayes, a member of his congregation, of having asked her for a kiss while he was escorting her home, is quoted as saying:

"From what I understand and know of it there is no reason to think the request was made by the pastor in any immoral spirit. Rev. Mr. Saphore is growing on to middle age, has a wife and children, and his tastes are domestic. He expressed deep regret at what he had done, made every attempt at reparation and has openly asked the girl for her forgiveness. There is no reason why such a small indiscretion, for that is all it is, should be cause for the man leaving his church and his religion and ruining his whole life's work.

"Why, I know ministers who are going around and kissing the older women of their congregations and nothing is thought of it. It is accepted as a little pleasantry and now when a pastor forgets himself for a moment and asks a girl if it is usual for her to accept kisses from her escort they want him thrown out. I don't think it is right and, therefore, will make every attempt to readjust matters in the Syracuse parish.

"It has been suggested that Mr. Saphore's punishment should be a spanking, and the idea is not half bad."

Busy By Day; Lonely By Night.

Philadelphia Press.

If you happen to spend an evening in an English business town you cannot fail to be surprised at the almost complete solitude that surrounds you. This town that you may have seen in the afternoon swarming with such numbers of busy people, teeming with so intense a life, is now deserted.

To its previous animation has succeeded a strange calm. It is as though you walked in a city of the dead.

It is because every evening after six o'clock work is over in the English town; the complex machinery of the immense labor organization stops.

The factory and the office, their doors open wide, cast into the street their world of liberated workers. By crowded tramways, by crowded pavements, the town disgorges itself. Each one, clerks, workmen, workgirls, office boys, bankers and merchants—with the same haste to regain his dwelling, leaves behind him the gloomy town where he labored, where he strove as in the lists. It is an immense and enthusiastic retreat. It is the daily exodus of the English toward their "home."

What, then, is it, this home of which the English constantly speak, the thought of which touches their hearts, whose memories dims their eyes, that enfolds all the happiness of their life?

It is home, a place in which to forget the aggravations of the world, in which to be with one's dear ones, one's pets, and one's lares and penates generally.

If you persist in keeping it there the man will be around to knock the chip from off your shoulder.

Too much of either dyspepsia or religion produces a crank.
