"Why, Emma! That makes your bank account $5. You will get interest on your savings from to-day on. In more than a thousand schoolhouses, in more than a hundred cities, in more than a soore of states, dialogues of this kind go on every Monday morning between the teachers and nearly 200,000 scholars who are the thrifty owners of accounts in the School Savings Banks, amounting to nearly a million dollars.

Within a generation, children by the hundreds of thousands have been launched from the public schools into the world of hard reality with the priceless habit of regular saving in-stilled into their minds. And an old gentleman-a very kindly old gentleman-who is still living and laboring for the advancement of this simple and wonderfully efficient training of American youth in the principles economy, is responsible for it all.

Practically a self-made man (his father was a soldier), h worked up from rank to rank, himself a part and a product of the antiqua-ted absolutism of his country, until he emerged at the top, a red-button mandarin, a viceroy, with a personal ity towering above the superstitious, tradition-ridden court, and yet sufficiently able and skilful to work with and through that court.

We have seen in an earlier article how Yuan, then a governor, kept Shantaung province quiet during the Boxer outbreak. It is he who is aid of German and Japanese drillmasters. It is he who succeeded in introducing the study of modern science into the education of the official classes. He is committed to the abolition of the palace ennuch system. He has, within the past few months, made great headway with his bold plan to remodel this land of fossilized ideas into a constitutional monarchy, with a representative parliament. But first, and above all else, he places the opium reforms. Unless this curse can be checked, and at least partially removed, there is no hope of progress.
