DELIVERED AN ADDRESS

HON. C. R. DEVLIN AT THE IRISH CONCERT.

Very Large Audience in Attendance at the Grand Last Night—Fine Musical Programme Was Given.

A very large audience gathered at the Grand Opera House, last night, the occasion being the annual concert, held under the auspices of the United Irish Catholic societies of Kingston. A special feature of the evening was an address delivered by Hon. C. R. Devlin, minister of mines and colonization for the province of Quebec, and for many years member for Galway in the British House of Commons. Hon. Mr. Devlin gave an eloquent discourse, dealing with conditions in Ireland, and the fight for representative government. The address was a most inspiring one, and was listened to with keen interest, on the part of the audience.

The musical part of the programme was a most delightful one. The opera house orchestra was in attendance, and rendered an excellent programme of Irish national airs. Solos were contributed by Miss Kathleen O'Hara, of Ottawa; Miss Hazel Massie, of Kingston; Arthur Craig, of this city, and Frank Bernose, of Toronto. Every number received a hearty encore. The programme included the numbers: "The Grand March," "The Little Irish Girl," and "Killarney" by Arthur Craig; "Erin, The Tear and the Smile in Thine Eye," "Sheena Van," and "The Message of the Shamrock," by Miss Massie; "The Emerald Isle," "The Emerald Isle," and "A Land Across the Sea," by Frank Bernose; "Don't Forget Ireland and Don't Forget Me," and "Sweet Is Dear Old Ireland," by Miss O'Hara. Prof. Charles Milner was the accompanist of the evening.

J. J. Behan was the chairman of the evening, and looked after the duties in a very able manner. He made a short address in introducing the speaker of the evening. He referred to the celebration of St. Patrick's day, and stated that it was one which sent a thrill through the hearts of Irishmen throughout the civilized world. The celebration was one that was divided in two parts. First, religious; second, natural. The religious part should have first place, the speaker said, and reference was made to the principles of Christianity which had done so much for the Irish people in the centuries now passed.

Mr. Behan had warm praise for the service held in the cathedral, on Tuesday morning, when a most masterly sermon was delivered, he said. It was most fitting that a concert should be held in the evening, to give the people an opportunity to listen to Irish airs, and to hear an address from Hon. Mr. Devlin. He took great pleasure in introducing Mr. Devlin to the audience.

Mr. Devlin was warmly received, and in his opening remarks, tendered his thanks to the Irish Catholic societies, for extending the kind invitation for him to be present on this occasion. He had received a great many invitations for St. Patrick's day, but had decided upon Kingston, and it was with great pleasure that he accepted the invitation to come here and speak. He said that it might appear strange that he, a minister of the province of Quebec, should come into the province of Ontario, to speak on such an occasion as this. However, he would say that this was quite right, for the reason that while he was a minister in the province of Quebec, he was very proud to say that he was an Irish-Canadian born, and was glad of the opportunity to come among the Ontario people.

Continuing, the speaker said that he wished to refer to some of the objections taken to the Irish parliamentary party. One of the greatest objections taken was that it was divided and not united. Where could the party be found, that had no difference of opinion? If this was desired, we would have to bring in the ladies.

(Laughter.) To-day, the world might be searched, but no party could be found that was so thoroughly united as the Irish parliamentary party. The methods of the party were condemned, and for why? Political organization was complained of, with the Irish League of Ireland. There was organization just the same with the parties in Canada. The labor party in England had organization, and it was the same in the United States, Australia and Canada. It was necessary that funds should be provided. Members of the parliament were not allowed free travel on railways, and they must be away from their business eight and nine months during the year. The amount allowed for expenses was not nearly as large as in the past. On this side of the Atlantic, the expense for the holding an election was paid by the government, while in the other case, the candidate had to meet the expense. The party in an open manner, asked for funds, and why should it be condemned? It was quite true that money was spent on elections in Canada. The people of Ireland themselves knew what was in their interest. The cry had been made that Ireland had a parliament, but did not know it was gone. But was this any reason why the people should not struggle to get it back? The people had a perfect right, and they would win out.

The speaker in a very eloquent manner went on to renew the history of Ireland and its government, and set forth all his claims in a very able manner. At the close, Mr. Behan stated that the societies were deeply indebted to Mr. Devlin for his address, and expressed their appreciation.

Epidemic of Dysentery.

It affects many people more in winter than in summer—in the one case it is due to improper eating—in the other to congestion excited by cold. A very small dose of Nerviline repeated every hour or two removes the trouble thoroughly. If there is pain, relief is immediate—if merely relaxation, the result is just as certain. You can't find a treatment for bowel troubles, indigestion, and stomach disorders half so good as Polson's Nerviline, thousands say so.

pressed the hope that he would again very soon have the pleasure of hearing him.

Mr. Devlin, in reply, stated that it was indeed a great pleasure for him to deliver an address before the people in Kingston. He had some very dear, good friends here, and felt that he would always be "at home" while in the city. He also extended thanks for the warm hospitality shown him during his stay in the city.

CAN ANYONE TELL?

Information Sought About Former Kingston Residents.

As the Whig has no source of information to answer the letter published below, it is printed in the hope that some of our readers might be able to give the needed facts:

347 Auburn Avenue, Buffalo, N.Y., March 15.—(To the Editor): Would you please pardon a lady for intruding on your time in a very important matter? I am the niece of the late Charles Sangster, late of Kingston, Canada, Canadian poet. Charles Sangster was my father's brother. I am seeking my mother's family—Fischer. Hugh Sangster, my father, of Buffalo, was once resident of Kingston, at which place he met and married my mother, Mary Ann Fischer, in the year 1830. I think that they were married in church. My mother's father was drowned when she was about ten years of age, and brought from the place where he was drowned, Sackett's Harbor, and buried in Kingston, but where, and the late date, I cannot remember. As my parents are dead, this is very important to me. I trust that you will not deem it trespassing too much upon your time, to ask if you could obtain the desired information. My grandfather's true name was Mary Ann Fischer, and name was Thomas, his middle name was, I believe, his widow, Mrs. Fischer, is also buried, I think, from there; she remarried some years after his death, a Mr. Boen.

Thomas Fischer, or Fisher, died and was buried at Kingston, Canada, in 1870-1871? Was born in England in 1770-1771? Was drowned of Sackett's Harbor 180-? Have a dim remembrance of the place, where born, as either Bristol, or Woolwich, but must have correct dates, which, as all have passed over, I find it hard to secure.

Yours very respectfully, URSULA N. SANGSTER.

AT THE GRAND.

To-Night Jane Corcoran, in "A Dolls House."

One of the youngest stars on the American stage, Miss Jane Corcoran, has attained her greatest success in the portrayal of the hardest roles, that of Nora in Ibsen's "A Dolls House." Miss Corcoran's New York appearance in this part was hailed with delight by the dramatic critics who found in her another Rachel, who likened her work to that of Duse and Bernhardt.

"The Girl Who Looks Like Me." If you want to laugh as you have never laughed before, join the Grand on Thursday, March 19th, and see charming Kathryna Osterman and her clever sister Anna Belmont in "The Girl Who Looks Like Me." Charles Barnard and Mark Swan will write the piece, and are responsible for various good things, for instance, "Brown's in Town" and "What Happened to Jones," but "The Girl Who Looks Like Me" is their masterpiece, and easily outdistances all their previous efforts, as good as they were.

Talked About Ibsen.

At the Opera House on Tuesday afternoon, before a large audience, Mrs. Sarah E. Dunbar, the noted speaker from the New York Lyceum, gave an interesting address on "Ibsen," and his works. The speaker was fully acquainted with her subject, and her lecture was valuable to the audience. Mrs. Dunbar, first reviewed the drama, from the old days of the Greeks, until the present day. She spoke of the great writers of the past centuries and finally of Ibsen, the Great Norwegian writer, who has made the whole literary world stop, take up his work, and think over them. The great writer, according to the speaker, was born in Norway, of rich parents in 1828. For six years very little was known of him, but at that time reverses came to his father, and he was forced to give up his business and move to a very poor section of the city. Nothing of any moment occurred in Ibsen's life until he was twenty years old, in 1848, when his first poem was published, and he first drama was completed when he was twenty-one.

The speaker said that his works were not taken up by his own people for many years, so finally discouraged by the way his efforts were received, he took his young wife and went into self-imposed exile. When he returned to his country, years later, he was a great and famous man. Mrs. Dunbar also quoted two of his plays, the main one being "The Dolls House," which will be presented, here to-night.

WILL TAXES GO UP? INCREASED EXPENDITURES CITY HAS TO FACE.

The Prospects Are For An Increase in the Rates—About a Mile a Year Will Be Laid Hereafter.

It is estimated that the city's general revenue this year will be $7,000 more than last, on account of increased assessment. Last year's deficit amounted out more than half of this amount, and it is likely that the Board of Education will about require the balance. The general hospital fund, the present outlook, but it is doubtful if the charitable grants will be increased. That will depend upon whether or not the rate of taxation is increased. The taxation for the past two years has been twenty mills on the dollar. Will this be increased to twenty and a half mills? An additional half mill would give $5,000 more revenue. It might also be noted that the O'Kill street sewer extension will cost the city $2,500 more than was provided last year, and that there was an expenditure of about $1,200 for keeping the street railway tracks open. From the present outlook, it seems that the finance committee might have to increase the tax rate.

The City's Walks.

After next year, the city corporation will not build more than a mile of concrete walks in a season. If six miles of walk is laid this year and as much next, the city will be pretty well completed. If the roads are not a credit to Kingston, its walks are.

Was Not Suicide.

The Kingston papers inserted a no-sorted notice, on March 9th, of the death of Daniel T. Orr by suicide. To friends and those it may concern, the following account will be welcome: Mr. Orr resided at 285 East 148th St., New York, and contrary to statement of papers was not out of employment. Mr. Orr, wife and oldest son, William, were together in their home Tuesday evening, March 4th. Late in the evening Mrs. Orr, then William, retired, leaving the father to finish reading his paper. No one knows what happened, but early on Wednesday morning Mr. Orr was found overcome by gas, the tube being disconnected from the stove, and died before medical aid arrived. Those of us who knew Mr. Orr believe it was an accident. Signed, NEPHEW OF THE DECEASED.

He Has Married Three.

A Protestant clergyman of Kingston stated yesterday that since the pope's proclamation forbidding priests of the Roman Catholic church to perform mixed marriages, he had married three young Catholic ladies to Protestant young men. The former intended to join their husband's church in any event, and have done so, but they would like to have been married by their own pastors. Their faction in marrying Protestants prevents them from receiving the sacraments of their former church hereafter.

IN SAD FLIGHT.

Young Englishman Could Not Work on the Farm.

A young Englishman, twenty years of age, who has only been out in this country a very short time, was given protection at the police station, on Tuesday night. He said that he had been working for a farmer, but that he could not do the work, and was discharged. Yesterday, he arrived in the city penniless, and was glad to be given a chance to stay in the station over night. He said that he was brought out to this country by the Salvation Army. He felt very much discouraged at not being able to secure work, but was well aware of the fact that he was not the only person out of work. This morning he spent about the city in search of employment. He appeared very willing to work, and it is to be hoped that he will strike good luck.

Three other men, also English immigrants, were given shelter in the police cells. They said that they walked here, yesterday, from Guanacoque, and were on the way to Trenton, where they had been promised work. There are a great many of the newcomers who do not care very much for work, but there are also large numbers who are very anxious to secure work, but very often it is very difficult for them to secure it, on account of the spirit shown by the others.

Feast Of Special Interest.

Even though the Lenten season is one of austerity and prayer in the Catholic church, there are still many bright spots in the usual course of its ritual observance. Yesterday, the feast of Ireland's glorious apostle was one of joyousness to the children of the Emerald Isle, and to-day, is another feast day of deep interest to many in Kingston. It is the festival of St. Gabriel, archangel, and is the feast day of the patron saint of Rev. Mother M. Gabriel, mother general of the Sisters of Charity of the House of Providence, and its branches. To the members of the community, it was one of special interest, and the reverend mother was the recipient of many loving remembrances and congratulations from the sisters, as well as from hundreds of friends in the city and district. One and all wished for many happy repetitions of the feast, and that she be spared many years to continue the noble works of charity she has devoted her life to. The mass in the morning was celebrated by Rev. Father Cullinan, chaplain of the house, and special music was sung in good style by the choir.

LIFE OF ST. PATRICK AS TOLD BY REV. W. F. FITZGERALD.

In St. Paul's Church Last Evening—St. Patrick, Said the Speaker, Belonged to Scotland—A Fine Address.

St. Paul's church was well filled on Tuesday evening, when the vicar Rev. W. F. Fitzgerald, delivered a fine sermon on St. Patrick. Mr. Fitzgerald said that Ireland was divided into four provinces. It could be regarded from many different standpoints, but he would only touch on St. Patrick, but it was well to mention a few other things. The speaker went over the names and works of the great writers and poets that Ireland has contributed, and also the names of great British soldiers of Irish descent.

Mr. Fitzgerald said that there were two works from which the basis of all history of life of the patron saint came down to us. He spoke of a book that is one of the treasures of Trinity College, Dublin. It contains the original copy of the New Testament transmitted to us by the early Irish church. It contains the life of St. Patrick and a copy of his confession, taken from the saint's own writing. It contains none of these miracles that other talk of, but is the statement of a man conscious of his redemption through Christ and anxious to help others. The writings of the saint himself are the only documents on which we can rely. There are two written by the saint.

"Where was he born?" Ireland presents her claim, France presents her claim, Scotland presents her claim. Much as I would like to claim Ireland as the better place, I cannot do so, because he was born in Dunbarton, Scotland," said Mr. Fitzgerald. "His father and grandfather were both connected with the church as deacon and priest. At sixteen years of age he was carried away by Irish pirates to Bunshan, in the north of Ireland, where he was kept a slave for six years. Think of the influence on the boy, who had always lived at home, surrounded by members of the early church, to be taken away and plunged into captivity. I think it is a good lesson to boys, who do not appreciate their homes enough at the present time."

"During his captivity," said the speaker, "he thought over the future, giving himself to prayer and meditation. He returned as a missionary of the Celtic church, to the people who had stolen him, the light he saw. He is represented to us as landing at a parish just outside of Dublin. He had in mind an old chieftain, and, remembering the darkness they live in, he returns to them, not as a swineherd, but as a missionary. This old chieftain gave him a barn, a stable, and it was established the first church."

The speaker then dwelt on the life of St. Patrick, of the great work he did for Ireland. Of the many parishes he established that are still parishes of the English church. The remains of the saint are supposed to be interred in a place called Don Patric, in the north of Ireland. He is supposed to have been a very old man when he died, and during the service rendered excellent music.

Had A Bad Fall.

David Strachan, Montreal street, was seriously injured at the government dry dock on Wednesday morning. Strachan, a carpenter employed by the M. T. company, was working on the large Ungava. He was at the top of the dry dock, when he missed his footing and fell to the bottom. The man managed to turn round on his way down, so that when he reached the bottom he struck head first. The left side of his head came in contact with one of the blocks inflicting a severe scalp wound. James Reid's ambulance was called and removed the injured man to the general hospital, where his wounds were dressed.
