IT WAS AMUSING.

But Was Equally Bruising to the Players.

The hockey match, at the Skating club, on Saturday night, between the battery officers and a team picked from town, was most amusing for the spectators, and bruising for the players.

The heads of the latter encountered the sticks quite as often as the puck did. The chief place where the latter requisite of the game was not and could not be seen, was between the goal posts, not because of any particular vigilance on the part of the goal keepers, but chiefly from other players shooting something after the way in which a skater drives a nail. The score ended one all.

Baseball Talk.

Baseball is the only talk now in spring circles, and many teams will organize for the season in a few days. If the big league is formed there promises to be some good teams and some good games pulled off here.

A Funny Hockey Incident.

Toronto Star's "Chaucer" Elliott relates this as being the funniest incident he ever witnessed during a hockey match:

"It was during the Victoria-Ottawa game in Montreal this winter, said 'Chaucer,' adjusting 'one of his golden curls.' 'My old friend, Alf Smith, was playing on the wing for Ottawa, and exactly in the centre of the arena right near the rail, I sat a fellow and two girls. Every time Alf passed them, the fellow leaned far out over the rail and shouted 'Dirty Smith.'

"When a game was scored and the players skated to their places for a new face Smith had to come in range of the fellow with the girls, and was greeted with 'Dirty Smith.' This kept up for quite a time, and I wondered at Alf's patience. The ice was very wet that night, in fact it was covered with water, and right in front of the place where the fellow was sitting was a pool some inches deep, and several feet square. But Smith's time eventually came. In this particular puddle the puck got lost, and Alf was on the job in a minute. He faced the fellow, and making a pretence at digging for the puck, scooped up about four gallons of water over the knocker and his lady friends. The fellow was drenched, so were the girls, and Alf skated away laughing. 'The crowd also gave the knocker the ha-ha.'

London Field—Bowling means much more than mere exercise of muscles. Over it all lies the strong spell of ordered movement, the delight of pure rhythm, which the rowing man is perfectly justified in claiming must be experienced to be understood.

"Sporting Life," London, England, commenting upon "Tommy" Barnes' book, "Scientific Boxing and Self-Defence," says that it is well deserving of notice, because of its genuine and breezy style, resembling the man himself. It is a marked departure from the stereotyped phrasing of other current publications. In the book Barnes speaks highly of the British spirit of sport.
