> THE TORN TROUSERS GRAFT. An Easy Plan to Collect Old

Here is the story of a graft so prising stranger to work should patent it. It was practised by a New York genius and had its tryout on the respectable upper West Side

The originator set out dressed as a workman, his clothes rusty but neatly patched. Arriving in the neighborhood he had decided to work he stepped into an areaway and, hauling out a knife, slit the right leg of his trousers from hip to knee. Next he produced a newspaper, his trousers. Leaving areaway, he hurried along the sidewalk, making apparently a great ef-fort to hold the newspaper in place. The wind was blowing and whoever cared so look noticed the man's predicament. At the steps of a big house in Seventy-second street he stopped his leg.
