The parts of Count Sexendorf, William McKegney, and Baron Staubach, W. C. Maxwell, were both in apable hands. The leading feminine role of Princess Olivia of Barronia, who masqueraded as Fraulein Theresa, a historian, was ably portrayed by CARPETS-Wiltons, Axminsters, Brus. Miss Marie Clifton. Her work in the sels, Balmorals, Tapestry, are the lead- second and third acts, during her scene with the king, who she is supposed to marry, and in the last, wher the king finds her identity, was excellent. Miss Clifton is a talented actress and made a good impression on her audience from her first appearance. As Baroness Staubach, Leila Hill was good, and Miss Parke Patton portraved the part of Julia in a creditable manner. The minor parts were all well taken. The scenery was very good all through.
