WHAT SAYS THE RECORD?
The Standard of Empire has an interesting correspondence on the effect of colonial preference, as Mr. Chamberlain had advocated it. Mr. Bonar Law has written to say that no one has ever suggested that this preference meant that the colonies should cease to develop their own manufactures.

Charles Gagne, secretary of the liberal publication department, quotes from a speech by Mr. Chamberlain, in Glasgow, in Ontario, 1903, in which he said that the colonies would arrange their tariffs in future and not start industries in competition with those which already existed in the mother country.

"This idea, it is pointed out, was immediately repudiated by the liberals. Canada, it was pointed out, could not be checked, any more than Great Britain could be checked, in the pursuit of any industry for which she had the capital and the skill."

Finally the Canadian manufacturer is quoted as saying that Canada would go a long way and make large sacrifices for the consolidation of the empire, but she would never stultify herself by agreeing to any emancipation of her energies, such as Mr. Chamberlain's proposition calls for.

There may be a new meaning to the fiscal reform movement, and it may grow in popularity, but the free traders of England are determined that the people will not be deceived by it. It may be that the preference as now understood does not involve any sacrifice of "energy," or arrangement as to non-competition in certain respects, but it will not help in the campaign to say that the movement never contemplated these things for the record offers the most positive contradiction to that contention.

The Mail demands the resignation of Mr. Macdonald, of the Globe, from the university board of management. Why? Is a governor of that institution not to be allowed to differ from the government in political questions? Is Mr. Macdonald, as Mr. Whitney remarked, "a hireling of the government?"

THE TASTE FOR SLANDER.
There was a brief discussion in the commons recently when the complaint of Rev. John Pringle, a Presbyterian missionary to the Yukon, was discussed. The letters of this missionary to the prime minister were revived by the opposition. They were not distinct in the information which they gave, but in interviews which he is handing out in Winnipeg he promises to become very theatrical if certain officials in the Yukon are not removed. The record of this clerical disturber is thus summarized:

First—Pringle made charges against Yukon officials before he saw the country, and afterwards withdrew them.

Second—He is a gold mining speculator, and the owner of a claim on Christmas Creek, which he found when he should have been preaching.

Third—He was elected as a member of the Yukon council upon his promise to denounce the policy of the government, and the immorality of Yukon officials.

Fourth—After his election he supported the government, did not denounce its policy, and made no charges against public officials.

Fifth—His constituents in mass meeting passed resolutions denouncing his course, and calling upon him to resign.

Sixth—He sat in council with Lithgow and Girouard (whom he now denounces), and took patronage from them although he entertained the view with regard to their morality as appears in his letters to Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Seventh—He sought a second nomination for the Yukon council but failed to get it.

Eighth—He sought a nomination for the dominion house, but without success.

Ninth—He charges a fellow-minister of the gospel in Yukon with taking a subscription for his church from the keeper of a gambling den and dance house, in exchange for silence as to the vices enacted therein.

The fact that charges are made by a clergyman is not sufficient. They must be definite, and they must be supported by evidence. The Pringle complaint of six years ago was not such as could be acted upon at the time. Now he threatens to stuno the country in the interest of the conservative party. Very good. The party takes the responsibility, and the slanderer will, perhaps sooner than he expects, be called to account.

No paper could be more biased and unfair in its criticism of the liberal leader in the late campaign than the Toronto News. Its misrepresentation of him on the university and power question is very much to its discredit.

If prison-made goods were labelled, as they should be, they could not be shipped to or sold in England.

BAT CUT HER TRESSES.
Chambermaid's Golden Head Lodging For Winged Rodent.
San Rafael, California, is suffering from an invasion of bats, and despite the efforts of citizens, the winged pests have gained a strong foothold in various parts of the town. Because of their activity Miss Lillian Steadman, a young housemaid at the Hotel Rafael, is mourning the loss of her golden tresses and suffering from a shock to her nervous system.

Miss Steadman climbed to the attic in the hotel, determined to drive out some of the bats. She was surrounded by a drove of the winged rodents, and gave battle to them.

One of the bats lodged in the young woman's hair, and refused to budge. Miss Steadman, frightened, ran screaming from the attic, and the bat still clung to her, keeping busy with his saw-like wings until he had cut her tresses so badly that it was necessary to shear them off.

Died in Montreal.
The death is reported in Montreal of Capt. William Lewis, a former Kingstonian, who conducted a ship chandler's shop on Ontario street a quarter of a century ago. His death was sudden, as he was out on Saturday. He is survived by four sons and four daughters. The sons are of the firm of Lewis & Co., wholesale hardware men. The remains will be brought here for burial in Catarqui cemetery.

RUNNING AFTER MR. BOURASSA.
Mr. Bourassa, stands for high ideals, in religion, in politics, in citizenship. But his ideals and his associations do not harmonize. For instance, he says that he is not opposed to Mr. Gouin personally, as the premier is one for whom he has a great regard. The precise language used by Mr. Bourassa on a recent occasion, in referring to Mr. Gouin, cannot be recalled, but it had the usual warmth of his peculiar coinage.

At the same time, he consorts with politicians who have not his high ideals of national or civic life, and he is willing that they shall campaign with him as members of the nationalist party. "He denounces," says the Montreal Herald, "those who take advantage of the people, yet he finds the father of the gas grab playing a part like his own on one side of him, the stepfather of the grab is the chairman of his own committee, and Mr. Rainville, whose merit need not be particularized, is trying to complete in St. Louis the work he (Mr. Bourassa) has begun in St. James. As for Mr. Gouin, who stopped the grab, he is to be deprived of the power to do so again, if Mr. Bourassa has his way."

Politics effect some queer combinations, and bring men some strange bed-fellows, and perhaps the queerest of all conditions is that presented in Montreal by the Bourassa movement. It is a force to be reckoned with. The people would not follow a man in thousands and applaud him if he were not saying that which pleased them. Whether they are blind, as he appears to be, and fail to see that there should be fitting associations with high ideals, remains to be proven. The French certainly are an emotional people, and where there is much emotion there is more sentiment than sense.

EDITORIAL NOTES.
The months are quickly passing, and there is no sign of the street paving. A good many strange faces in town to-day. Just home to visit friends, and dropped in on a very busy day.

The battle of the ballots goes on to-day. It is not so noisy as the battle of the bluffers, but it is more effective.

There is a movement in Toronto for free high schools and high school books. The matter is now before the high school board.

Mr. Whitney is still reading the Whig, and from Toronto telegraphs his comments upon its articles. Mr. Whitney is a very discriminating person.

Mr. Pringle alleges that there has been electoral impurity in the Yukon. He has been a sufferer from repeated defeats, and imagines many things that are not correct.

Now, for a relief from politics, and a devotion to business. Some people may have lone politics, but they are not good to eat, and they interfere seriously with business.

The officials whom Rev. Mr. Pringle charges with immorality will be summoned to Ottawa, and Mr. Pringle will be asked to make his indictment more specific.

TREASURE TROVE IN SPAIN.
Storm Swept Away Coast and Revealed Treasure.
Treasure trove secreted by Portuguese buccaners in bygone days has been revealed near the seaside village of Paradelha, Spain, in a remarkable manner.

The village is being slowly washed away by the action of the sea and buildings have been undermined from time to time.

A storm of more than usual severity swept the coast on Saturday, and a portion of the foreshore at Paradelha was washed away.

According to the "Secolo" treasure of various kinds was thus exposed to the astonished fishermen, who first believed that it had been sent to them miraculously.

There were many ancient gold and silver doubloons, jewelled crosses, finger rings of quaint antique pattern, earrings, gold and silver medallions, portions of silver censers, and other fragments of church plate.

All the people in the region hurried to the spot, armed with picks and spades, and have since been digging feverishly for treasure. Some of them have been rewarded with further discoveries. One man secured gold coin valued at £180. All the male inhabitants have deserted their work, and none of the fishermen have left port since the first discovery was made.

The Portuguese buccaners who harried the Spanish Main were in the habit of burying their booty along the coast, and the treasures unearthed at Paradelha undoubtedly form a portion of one of their hoards.

Some of the plate discovered indicates that it was taken from a Spanish galleon.

Other treasure hoards have been unearthed along the coast of Portugal in the past twenty years, but none so rich or extensive as this.

Ignorance and impudence usually go hand in hand.

THREAD CAUGHT THIEF.
Found Out Just Where Milk Bottle Went.
With a spoon, a piece of thread and a bottle of milk Henry Czernowitz, of New York city, unraveled a murky mystery of theft and disappearance the other day.

Henry lives on the ground floor and is fond of milk. This statement shows why Henry lost his temper and called down vengeance upon the milkman, until that person was able to prove conclusively that the milk was left regularly upon the window sill. When Henry found this out he obtained a piece of black thread, forty feet long, tied one end to a spoon, and waited.

With his usual aggressive Sunday morning chatter the milkman left a bottle on the sill about four o'clock. Henry was still waiting, and stealthily approached, and tied the other end of the thread to the metal clamp of the milk bottle. Then he retired to his bedroom, placed the spoon carefully upon the table before him, and fixed his gaze upon it. Again he waited. Suddenly the spoon moved slightly. "Got a bite—I mean hist," said Henry, to himself, between clenched teeth.

With a final hop that carried it off the table the spoon ran swiftly along the floor, out into the parlor, over the window sill, and disappeared. But Henry was after it. When he reached the sidewalk he saw it hobbling swiftly along the street and at the business end of the thread was a man who, with a bulging pocket, was making toward Second avenue. Henry followed to 2nd street, where he found Policeman Nelson.

"Do you see that spoon?" asked Henry, of the startled policeman. "I demand that you arrest the man who is dragging it. The wretch has my milk concealed about his person."

It was so, and later, in the Harlem court, the thief was fined $2. Henry is awaiting overtures from Mulberry street.

NEGLECTED OF SILK OR CASHMERE.

Soft silk, cashmere or fine French washable flannel could be used for the louncing robe or bouclier gown illustrated, the trimming consisting either of ribbon bands, silk braid or bands of silk or satin. The model was made of pale pink silk, with a ribbon border showing bouquets of roses. Pink tassels were used on the pointed oversleeves, which were cut in one with the body of the robe. The undersleeves were of ruffled lace.
