HOLDING WHAT WE HAVE.

The governments of Ontario and Quebec will have to legislate against the export of pulpwood. The legislation in Ontario with regard to the conversion of logs into lumber made for the wealth and occupation of Canadians. The legislation that simply gets a higher price for pulpwood will not do. "The Americans," writes one to the Montreal Witness, "are destroying our forests at their leisure. Last year they bought 1,000,000 cord of wood. We get $6 a cord for this, but when it is manufactured in the United States it is worth $40 a cord. Therefore, we are losing $34,000,000. Why should there not be legislation to assure the utilization of our resources in our own country, thus giving our compatriots the advantage of this enormous increase of $34,000,000? Already the Americans have bought on the upper St. Maurice most of the water powers—almost for nothing. It is because they foresee that a clear-thinking government some day will force them to come here to make the paper they need. It is time that the government assured the permanence of the forests by adopting a system of supervised cutting. The forest is necessary to preserve an even flow in our rivers, and thus to aid our industries." Quebec and Ontario are in the same position with regard to this subject. The Americans must have pulpwood for paper. Why should they not have paper which is made in Canada from our pulpwood? The issue is becoming a grave one, and it will have to be very soon and very seriously considered.

GOVIN AND BOURASSA.

The Quebec legislature will be largely liberal, as it was expected to be. The Govin government had made a splendid record for itself, had proven progressive, economical, careful, and the appeal to the people was expected to result favourably. The conservatives were hopeful of making important gains for the reason that in the previous election they had put out and refused to play. The consequence was an opposition of seven members, who were scarcely heard in the sessions and who were, because of their numerical weakness, without an influence. In an election in which the party was at all active it was bound to make some headway, though it has failed, like the opposition in Ontario, to make the desired headway.

THE MAN AND HIS WORK.

The defeat of the liberal candidate in this city is sincerely regretted. The Whig can say this, modestly, though it is Mr. Pense's paper. There is a certain disadvantage in owning a journal, because it is not free to say what it would do if the candidate were some one else. The place of the newspaper was discounted in this campaign, however, because the appeal was not to reason, but to the sordidness or cupidity which are only reaching and satisfied with the current coin. It mattered not what the man did for the city, or what his deserts were. The influence that decided the election was not moved by any sense of gratitude. It was of passing moment that Mr. Pense had served the people freely, cheerfully, faithfully, that as a member of the legislature his only care was for the public interest, that he carried himself honorably and fairly at all times, and that he could not be charged with any neglect of public duty. The work of the member, or his worth, or devotion to the public service, were not questioned. There was simply a carnival of corruption, and it swept the city and left effects which were not confined to the polling booths.

A STREAM OF POLLUTION.

The city election is said to have given no surprise to those who knew what was going on. This air of confidence is only assumed, however. No one could predict the result in advance of the discovery of the gold mine, which discovery took place on Saturday. There was made pretence of safety in advance of that time, but there was no ground for it. While on the surface there was a show of expectancy, deep down in the heart there was doubt and uncertainty. Up to Saturday the liberals felt that they would win. The canvass of the city had been made, and it gave promise of a splendid victory.

Between Saturday evening and Sunday evening the change occurred. What brought it about? Nothing in the situation so far as the candidates were concerned. The man who had carried the day in a pure election was stronger personally, and politically. He was a tried servant of the people. He was admitted even by conservatives to be one of Kingston's best citizens. He was without reproach, and in his walks about the city had been warmly welcomed and given tokens of favour from unexpected quarters.

On Sunday evening the new campaign set in. The emissaries of the government and of its candidate were sent in all directions. Some of them were traced. At places where they called the object of their mission was learned. There was a great display of money, and apparently many were touched who are not usually susceptible because the figures were large and the distribution generous.

This tide of corruption could not be stemmed, and the liberal workers could only note its direction and effect, and report, as they did later, to the chairmen of committees. There will be more about this carnival of corruption, for the evidence is now being collected and the court will be asked to pronounce upon it. A great fuss was made about an election for the local house, the great offence of which was the payment of money to a few cabmen or the hiring of a few rigs to carry the voters to the polls. In contrast with this will be the election of Monday, when the stream of corruption surpassed all previous experiences in this city, in recent years or remotely, and if the city can stand the scandal or orgy or debauch, it can stand anything, however polluting it may be.

A NEW LEASE OF POWER.

The Whitney government has secured what it so anxiously sought in the gerrymander—the loading of the dice—a new lease of power, and with an increased majority. At the moment one cannot determine what the effect of the gerrymander has been. The losses and gains can only be measured after considerable study. So far as it tended to prevent the liberals from having an even show for representation it was a club in the hands of the government, and a club which Mr. Whitney did not hesitate to use.

Outside of the loaded game the government will accept the vote of the people as one of satisfaction. Its record of three and a half years—the whole of it, including the events of that awful week—will be considered "approved" and the alleged endorsement may be the undoing of administration. To be sure, the reptile fund has to be reckoned with. It is not at all likely that Kingston was the only constituency so well provided with money for electoral impurity, and a few days hence there will be the revelations which, for the time being, are kept under cover.

In the last legislature the government had a majority of forty-three. In the larger house it will have about sixty, which is about fifty too many for good government. The province is promised many things it will not expect—cheaper power, cheaper or free books, cheaper law, and thereafter legislation. Some of them may be heard from again and some of them may not, seeing that a further reference to the people will be avoided for the next three or four years.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Willis couldn't wait. The last has not been heard of the Kingston election.

The inspiration of Monday's election exhibited itself in some very unfortunate ways towards evening.

They are not yet ready for the abolition of the bar in Toronto. Hence the defeat of Dr. Hossack.

The late Mr. Tarte must have been thinking of Kingston when he said that elections were not won by prayers.

The debauching of the electors—the people who were susceptible to the money influence—was a fine setting for Sunday.

Gallagher and Reynolds suffered great anxiety, last evening, while the election returns kept electing them alternately.

The greatest victory in the province is Allan Studholme's, in East Hamilton. And it was not secured with the use of money.

Of course Mr. Whitney and his colleagues will keep on reading the Whig. They would be very lonesome without it.

Mr. Milligan must be very proud of his majority of one in Stormont. He will have to nurse it very carefully in order to keep it alive.

The men who laughingly said early in the day that the Whitney candidate was sure to win were in the secrets of the party. They were present when the gold mine was discovered.

The nationalists in the Quebec legislature will not cut very much ice, but they can cut figures to perfection. It is fitting that Bourassa and Lavigne should be inseparable.

MILNER ON PATRIOTISM.

Judge Longley has been seriously misunderstood by some people, but not by the Englishmen, if Lord Milner interprets their mind aright, and just now he is entitled to very large respect. It is well to note this, because Collier's has announced that Justice Longley's remarks have been taken to heart in England, and that "it almost looks as if the shade of George III might still be haunting some editorial offices." The judge spoke at a function of the New York Canadian Club. He spoke, too, under some restraint, on an occasion when it was necessary to weigh well his words. He had, in his mind's eye, Canada's growth toward nationhood, but what he talked of independence he "disavowed any leaning to the United States."

The point of importance is that the English people are not offended with the judge's address, and if any one feels curious about the address the fault is his own. In discussing the wider patriotism Lord Milner refers to Canada's negotiation of the French treaty, the growth in Australia of a desire for a complete national development, and the lessons of the South African war, and writes:

"The new national spirit will need to find practical expression in new institutions, common to all the states of the empire, and not peculiar, like the present so-called imperial parliament, to the united kingdom alone. Poor Justice Longley, whose recent speech at the New York Canadian Club has got him into so much hot water, seems to me, in intention at any rate, to have been perfectly right. He did not, as far as one can make out, by any means advocate the separation of Canada from the united kingdom. On the contrary, his idea seems to be that of a permanent and indissoluble union—only a union of equals, not the dependence of a 'colony' upon a parent state. But the permanent and indissoluble alliance of several equal state-units means in effect the creation of a new and larger state. This would be the case even if the combining units were originally quite independent, and of another, and a new national spirit had to be called into existence. But here there is already a secular connection between them, and the national spirit, though capable of great further development, already exists."

In Lord Milner's opinion the colonies must, in their expansion, give promise of something better than "the parliament of men," the federation of all the Britains. There are, he admits, different ties in the way of an imperial union, but a longing for it exists among the British people everywhere, and though quiet in normal times it is liable to break into sudden activity. Indeed the imperial sentiment "may be a form of the instinct of self-preservation, and the law of national life."

Poor Alick Wright, after all he said about cheap power, the aristocracy and the machine, was crushed in Toronto. Wright is finding what "Billy" Maclean discovered when he ran for the majority, that the Albany Club's collar is necessary to political success.

On dit, that several detectives were imported from abroad in order to watch the wicked frolic in Kingston. Attorney-General Foy was warned that his party premeditated a pollution of the constituency, and as the big policemen of the province he should have become busy.

CRISIS IN KOREA.

There is Great Unfriendliness to Japan. Tokyo, June 9.—Another crisis in the relations of Korea and Japan is impending. Unfriendliness of Koreans of the ruling class towards Japan is evidently increasing instead of diminishing.

It had developed that the privy council, composed of princes, elder statesmen and those who were formerly ministers, recently adopted a resolution prohibiting the employment of Japanese officials. That the privy council is powerless to carry out the project is significant. Prince Ho, the Japanese resident-general, summoned the ministers and the state and prefectural governors, and delivered a vigorous pronouncement, declaring that if present conditions are allowed to continue the country will be lost. The Koreans, raised wanton cries for repealing the Japan-Korean agreement, but do so without sufficient national strength would mean less independence, naively reminding the Koreans that they must not forget that once they were under the rule of China.

Several changes in the Korean cabinet are announced, the most important being the transfer of Song Plungchun, Japan's chief ally, from the department of agriculture to that of the interior. Song Plungchun is head of the notorious Ichinhui.

Seoul dispatches state that very important matters will be announced in a few days and meanwhile the governors are ordered to remain in Seoul.

CHANGING SENTIMENT.

Oliver Goldsmith's "Deserted Village." Goldsmith in his "Deserted Village," spoke of a certain chapel where those who "went to school remained to pray." So in life one often laughs at what he does not understand, his laugh turns to praise. There are some who doubted the merits of Newbro's "Herpicide," the scalp germicide and hair-dressing; but since they have tried it they are now among its best friends and strongest endorsers. Herpicide kills the germ that eats the hair off at the root, and the hair then grows again. As a hair dressing it is incomparable; try it.

New York Press. "No, now don't you take that piece of chamois," said the man at the desk as the hand of the woman wandered in its direction. "I know it's a nice looking piece, but I bought it specially for a purpose. I telephoned the man to come to-morrow and tune my piano. In the morning before I come down here I'm going to lay this piece of chamois across the keys. Then when I get home I'll know whether he has tuned it or not. If it's gone, he has; if it's still on the keys, he hasn't."
