a lawyer of large practice he impress- tled. ed Mr. Graham with his remarkable nental endowments. He possessed the malities that make for success, and when later a commissioner of crown lands was wanted in the Ross government, the call went to MacKay. Unfortunately, he had a limited experience in the forefront of battle. He Mr. Lavergne. was only a few months in the government before it went out of office. He had only three and a half years in opposition, and less than half of thi time he acted as leader of his party. The premier had sneered at his la bours, but with a very poor orace, since Mr. Whitney spent many many long years in opposition fighting with less advantage and certainly with less of the magnetism which Mr. MacKay exhibits.

The leader of the liberals in Ontario is an inspiration to the younger men in politics. He is the representative of a very numerous class. They have the ability, the energy, the go. They only want the chance for the late election. All his supporters, at the points visited, were not elected-that would be too much to expect-but he made a favourable impression everywhere with his splendid platform addresses, and he is bound to occupy a larger place in the public eye with experience and years.

A TALKING LOVEBIRD.

Human Speech.

London Mail. A love bird no larger than a canary has taught itself to speak as fluently and as distinctly as the best of talking parrots at the village of Ambleside, near Stourbridge, Worcestershire. During the last few months of its life in Worcestershire, however, it has acquired a remarkable aptitude for repeating all that is said to it. though it has received no special

To a correspondent who "interviewed" it recently the bird suddenly remarked, "Kiss me quick," giving an anticipatory smack. It politely remarked, "How do you do ?" and flatteringly added, "You're a little beauty, aren't you?" all in a soft tone that was quite distinct from the raucous accents of the average parrot. It melodiously whistled a couple of bars of the national anthem and

Bibby's for Dressy Suits of Serge.

There's more to recommend a Serge Suit for Summer Wear

Not only is it dressy and therefore desirable, but being light in weight it is decidedly comfortable for the warm days of Summer.

It is also strong and durable. A man can find few Fabrics that combine these necessary qualities as does the Serge.

When you first look at one of our Suits and somebody else's side by side, they may seem the same. But look at the cut look at the way the collar fits, the button holes, the sewing, the way the lining is put in, and then buy your Serge Suit of a house that always stands back of its promises.

"Hecla" Furnace

Each one of these four grates can be shaken separately

The outer edge of a furnace fire burns up quicker than the center.

This raises a wall of ashes between the firepot and the coals, just where the hottest part of the fire should be.

To heat the house properly and economically, these ashes must be removed whenever the furnace is attended to.

In most furnaces, all the grates are geared together. They must all be shaken together. As the coal burns unevenly, either good coal must be shaken down with the ashes, or the fire slightly shaken and the ashes and clinkers raked down with a poker.

In the "Hecla" Furnace, each of the four grate bars can be shaken separately. When ashes accumulate on the sides of the firepot, shake only the side bars. This means getting rid of all the ashes-saving coal-keeping the fire clean-and doing away with sifting ashes.

When the furnace is almost out, you can shake down the ashes farthest from the fire without disturbing the live coals, and quickly have a blazing fire. Clinkers cause no trouble, as they do with grates that are fastened together and must all be shaken together. It is certainly easier to shake one grate than four. An Automatic Lock holds each bar in position. This Lock opens as the shaker is put on and locks when released.

"Hecla" Triangular Bar Grates may be removed in an instant and each bar replaced separately. Our new ratalogue describes the "Heela" Bar Grates, Seel Ribbed Firepor, Fused Joints and other exclusive features. If you are going to put in a new furnace this year, write for a free copy.
