AT QUEEN ST. CHURCH

PUBLIC MEETING HELD BY MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

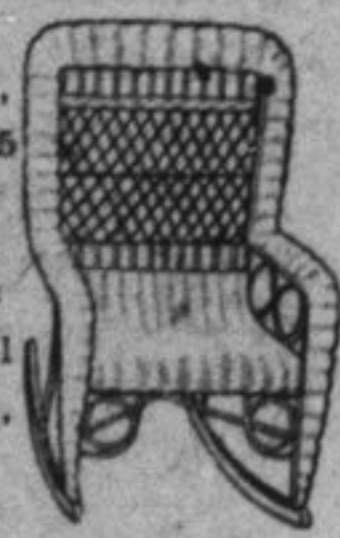

Work of Society is Reviewed and Opportunities For Still Greater Effort are Pointed Out.

Last night's session of the Women's Missionary Society of the Montreal Methodist conference, took the form of a public meeting in Queen Street Methodist church, which was very largely attended. The choir was present, and assisted in the musical part of the programme, and Miss Ada Rosevear and Mrs. McLellan favored with the solos. The chair was occupied by Rev. W. H. Sparling. After devotional exercises, Rev. Mr. Sparling extended a warm welcome to the delegates and workers, and referred to the good work carried on by the society, since its organization, twenty-six years ago. He spoke of the many opportunities for still greater work in the future, and expressed the hope that the amount would continue to increase, as a result of the efforts put forth by the ladies. He also pointed out that the good work of the ladies would be the means of stirring up the men of the church, along the same lines.

Fell Into A Ditch. On Wednesday evening, while a drunk was piloting his way from the cricket field to the park, he forgot about the ditch on Park avenue, and, stepping off the sidewalk to cross the road, went right in. When he went down he must have imagined he was going to stay, as he did not make a sound for about five minutes, when he began to climb out. When he once got right side up he took good care not to fall into the ditch on the other side of the road.

INSURANCE FORGERY NORTHERN LIFE COMPANY IS INVOLVED.

A Deceased Local Agent Collected Policy on Life of His Missing Brother—Names of Prominent People Forged to Certificates.

L. D. Jones, Toronto, inspector of the Northern Life Insurance Company, is now making investigation into the alleged death of William Zeigler, Ridge street, who disappeared in November, 1905, and the payment of a $1,000 insurance policy on his life. There is no mystery whatever about the circumstance. It is simply a case of forgery perpetrated by the deceased local agent of the above-named company, who was a brother of the missing man. Papers were made out by the agent to show the death of William Zeigler. The name of Rev. W. Bowman Tucker was forged as clergyman in attendance at the burial; that of Dr. W. Sands was forged to the certificate of burial; that of Norman Wilson to the certificate of identification of the body, and that of ex-Alderman Samuel Harkness as justice of the peace, taking the declaration. All these documents were sent to the head office of the company, at Toronto, and a cheque for the amount of the insurance was sent to the local agent.

The discovery came about by Mrs. William Zeigler endeavoring to have the company recognize her missing husband as dead, and pay over the amount of the policy to her. They had been paid, and the production of the certificates, which were declared by Dr. Sands, Mr. Reid and the others involved to be forgeries.

Ensign and Mrs. Coy wish to thank the citizens of Kingston for their help, and the kindness shown them during their stay in Kingston.

ON SUSPENDED SENTENCE. James Tyo, Who Stole, Was Allowed His Freedom. When the court of general sessions was resumed, at two o'clock Wednesday afternoon, James Tyo appeared, charged with stealing $8. from Henry Massey, Omaha, on the night of May 24th. D. M. McIntyre appeared for the prisoner and J. L. Whiting for the crown. Through his counsel, Tyo pleaded guilty to the charge against him, asking for a chance to leave the city. Mr. McIntyre made a strong plea for his client, asking his honor to allow him to go on suspended sentence, on condition that he leave the city. Mr. Whiting, in addressing the judge, did not press very hard for a conviction, and his honor allowed Tyo to go on suspended sentence, after giving him a good plain talking to concerning his future habits. That was the last case on the blotter, and his honor closed the sessions, to-day, when he dismissed the grand jury.

His Tacit Admission. "Let me repeat for you a business axiom," said Burton E. Stephenson, in Affairs of State: "To give a discount is to admit that your goods are not worth the price you ask for them, and that you are willing to cheat anybody who does not know enough to beat you down."

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.

Production of "The Lion and The Mouset." Another of the choice plays presented this season at the Grand Opera House was "The Lion and The Mouset," which was witnessed last night by an appreciative audience.

The play tells of the unjust crushing by the octopus of a supreme court judge and the successful efforts of his daughter to regain his position and his honor. An excellent company presented the play. H. Reed Davis made a capable judge and Luke Martin played a strong part as ex-judge Scott, his friend. The role of "Shirley Rosemore," the former judge's daughter, was splendidly taken by Edith Barker, who won many curtain calls for her fine emotional acting. Charles D. Pitt ably played the part of "Jefferson Ryder," her lover. Clifford Leigh, as "Hon. Fitzroy Bagley," the blue-blooded secretary of the octopus, showed himself to be a clever actor. Another natural portrayal was that of the role of "Senator Roberts," by Charles H. Burbridge, "John Burckett Ryder," who was responsible for all the trouble, was Walter Edwards, who acted the part of the octopus with the greatest ease and perfection. The rest of the cast was strong. The play was beautifully staged.

"Dandy Dixie Minstrels." Quite the most pretentious aggregation of colored performers ever on tour will be seen with the "Dandy Dixie Minstrels" at the Grand on Saturday, June 13th, matinee and night. Besides "Laughing Lamar," whose inimitable monologue and parodies entertained thousands of theatregoers on the New York Road Garden last summer, the Dandy Dixie minstrels offer an olio of specially engaged novelties, a first part of stunning spectacular effects, an after piece of furiously funny farce, "A Fool and His Money," and the famous Matchless Minstrel Musicians, "The Cotton Pickers Band."
